Elected a Vice President

At the annual meeting of the Gibbs Family Association of America held Wednesday at the Perkins Institute for the Blind at Watertown, Mass., Nathan A. Gibbs of this city was elected one of the vice presidents. Dr. Howard A. Gibbs of Boston was elected president.

Marriage Strenuous Ceremony.

Marriage is a strenuous ceremony among the Wakikuyu tribe in East Africa. The bridegroom, having paid down the first installment of ten goats to his prospective father-in-law, as dowry, sends three of his friends to waylay the girl at a certain prearranged spot. He carries her off to his mother's hut, while she fights back and weeps continually. After she has been placed in the hut she weeps for eight days more, while her husband remains away. The actual marriage takes place ten days later. Next morning the bride's girl friends come and make a great display of sorrow on losing their playmate. They stay for three days, during which period they weep endlessly. When they are gone the play is over; the husband builds his own hut, and the young couple settle down to married life.

Seeing and Hearing.

The eye is a haven at which the treasure fleets that sail through the ocean of light are unloading, and their stores deposited in the vaults of the intellect; but it is through the whispering gallery of the ear that man reaches the heart of his fellow man most quickly and surely. Light and knowledge are for the eye, love and music for the ear. Hearing often times seems to me a nobler sense than sight, with richer benedictions attendant on it; with tender and holier offices assigned to it. Man's voice, tuned by sympathy, moving to the modulations of intelligence and love, may perform the sweetest and holiest ministry of human life. Do you wonder, then, that with books and with friendly talk I have learned to bear my affliction cheerfully.—William Henry Milburn.

A RELIABLE COUGH REMEDY

Why experiment with unknown remedies for that cough or cold when you can secure FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND? It is a safe and reliable remedy for the relief of coughs, colds, hoarseness. Equally beneficial for young and old. Mrs. Anna Cornell, Bridgeton, N. J., states: "I bought FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND for my cold and find it great." Insist upon the genuine. Refuse substitutes.

DROWNED IN AUTOMOBILE THAT WENT THROUGH FENCE INTO COVE

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 1—Carl Seamon, about 45, of Stonington, employed as yard clerk by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad at Midway, was found drowned in his automobile in a small cove between Mystic and Stonington this morning, the machine was of the coupe type having crashed through a bridge and entered a small cove. How the accident occurred, it is not known, but it is believed that Seamon lost control of the car in passing over the structure and before he could get the machine back in the highway it plunged through the wooden stringers of the structure.

The machine was observed in the cove partially submerged and when the car was taken from the water Seamon was discovered in the car. There were no witnesses to the accident.

Seamon had been in Mystic about a half hour before the accident and was on his way to his home when the fatality occurred. His watch had stopped at 11.12.

The machine in the water on the north side of the bridge at Pine Point cove was first discovered by Capt. W. E. Teasdale, keeper fo the Latimer's Reef light, who was at home on a leave of absence and was walking over the bridge. His attention was attracted by bubbles arising in the water and he then saw the headlights by looking down into the water.

Others who came along joined Capt. Teasdale and Henry M. Clark picked up the captain in his machine and drove for help to the town clerk's office at Stonington. Miss Winifred Casey secured Joseph Vargas and Roul Delagrange by telephone, who went back to the cove accompanied by Dr. Taylor whom they met on the Stonington road in his machine. An anchor with a rope which the doctor had was used to catch hold of the Seamon automobile, which was partially raised, when the anchor broke.

A rowboat was then secured from the Loper works and was used by Manney Joseph who fastened a rope to the submerged car and raised it. Seamon was found inside with his feet sticking out of the door. He was taken out of the automobile to the office of Dr. H. T. Thurber where a pulmotor from the Westerly light and power company was used but without effect.

Mr. Seamon had worked at the Midway yard for the past ten years. He was secretary of Asylum lodge, No. 55, A. F. and A. M. and was also a member of the Pioneer Hook and Ladder company of Stonington. He is survived by his wife who was Miss Sadie Van Etten and a brother, David H. Seamon of Poquonnoc, also prominent in Masonic circles.

The coupe was not recovered by the wrecker until late this afternoon. It apparently was not severely damaged. A crowd that gathered and watched the procedure grew with every passing automobile. Officer Charles B. Van Cort and Patrolman C. J. Ledwith of the Stonington police force were detailed to handle the crowd.

CEREMONIAL EVENING BY CAMP FIRE GIRLS

Five groups of the Camp Fire Girls of Norwich held a ceremonial Friday evening at the Community House. The programme opened at 7 o'clock with the Wohelo call. Then followed the entrance and hand signs and group cheers. America the Beautiful was sung after which there was a candle ceremony carried out by three groups of three girls each. Burn fire Burn was sung after which the Law of the Fire was given. The next number on the programme was One Interesting Thing We Have Done, given by each Campfire honors to the Taftville and group. Then came the awarding of Park church groups. Each group then presented a number of "stunts" after which there was a very interesting talk on Camp fire work by Mrs. Mildred Crawford Kielman, Camp Fire Guardian, of Bristol, whose Camp Fire group won the Harriman medal for 1922-1923 for the best Camp Fire work for the year.

Mrs. Kielman described the various ways in which her girls raise money for summer camp. She told her audience of the club room which her girls have furnished and the many good times they have in the club room.

Hikes on which luncheons are either carried or prepared on the spot were interestingly described and Mrs. Kielman closed her talk with a description of the Camp Fire Girls camp near Boston, which is the finest camp in New England.

The meeting came to a close about 10 o'clock with the singing of a Camp Fire song.

The groups represented were the Taftville group, Mrs. E. G. Crowdis, leader, Park church group, Mrs. Louis Waldron, leader, and the three local groups, the leaders are Mrs. A. C. Freeman, Miss Dorothy Holden and Miss Elizabeth Smith.

Establishing prices that in the main approximate those of last fall, the American Woolen company Thursday in New York opened the larger portion of its men's wear lines. Very slight advances were shown in some of the staple worsted suitings, with many fabrics in this group showing no advance over last fall and all being offered below the spring levels. Wool suitings and overcoatings showed somewhat of an increase, unofficially estimated at about 5 to 10 per cent. over last fall.

The showings comprised lines of staple woolen and worsted suitings, staple and fancy back overcoatings, London shrunk serges, uniform cloths, gaiter kerseys and mackinaws. Fancy worsteds remain to be opened.

The overcoatings and suitings in department 3A of the company shown were from the following 27 of its 60 or more mills:

GIVEN PERMISSION TO SELL FOR SHORE LINE

At the motion list session of the superior court in New London Friday morning, Judge C. L. Avery granted the application of Receiver Robert W. Perkins of the Shore Line Electric railway company for authority to sell certain tracts of land situated in the towns of Old Lyme, East Lyme and Essex.

The land in Old Lyme is to be sold for $250, two tracts in East Lyme for $70, and two in Essex for $115.

The petition of George W. Reinacher for annulment of order to pay $5 per week alimony to Gladys May Reinacher who secured a divorce from him on June 14, 1921 was dismissed without prejudice. The petition was on the ground that she has married again and is now the wife of Frank C. Smith of 113 Shaw Street, New London.

In Margaret M. Kendal vs. James Lumsden et al. the court granted the motion to restore case to the docket unconditionally.

Two hearings on motion for default went off, Grace A. Fillmore vs. Francis Ryan and the R. A. Sherman & Sons Co. vs. Clarence O. Marshall.

PRIZE ESSAY OFFER FOR CHURCH PROGRAMME

Announcement will be made at the Central Baptist church on Sunday morning of a prize of one hundred dollars to be awarded to the one presenting the best program for the church to follow during the next fifteen years until the time of its one hundredth anniversary.

The pastor's theme will be "The Faith of a Liberal Christian" and the Lord's Supper will be observed in connection with the morning worship.

KI-MOIDS

SETTLEMENT IS MADE OF MUSICIANS' STRIKE

After differences of nearly ten months during which time the Broadway and Strand theatres operated by Abe Davidson were placed on the black list by unions, things have been settled between Mr. Davidson and members of the local Musicians' union, and both theatres will open on Sunday evening with union orchestras, and union help throughout.

The strike, or walkout of the musicians in Norwich, took place in May 1923, when Mr. Davidson claimed the right to go out of town and hire union musicians to fill the places of local men. A decision to change the crews working in the pit of the Broadway theatre, placing them at the Strand theatre also caused a difference and the walkout followed.

The houses operated by Mr. Davidson were then placed on the black list and members of the musicians' union began distributing pamphlets in front of the two theatres, urging people to stop patronizing them. This took effect for some time but, as interest by the public in the affair died out, the patronage gradually became better until it had nearly reached normal.

The terms of the settlement between Mr. Davidson and the members of the union are not to be made public, but Mr. Davidson stated Friday night that he had gained everything he had asked for, mainly, the right to hire out-of-town musicians in place of local musicians if he saw fit; this being the stand he took in May 1923. It is also agreed that the suit for $40,000 damages brought against the members of the Norwich Musicians union is to be withdrawn by Mr. Davidson, this being one of the points in the settlement.

In speaking of the settlement of differences with the union men Mr. Davidson said that beginning Sunday night union orchestras would occupy the pits in the Broadway and Strand theatres, the Strand orchestra will comprise five pieces and shows at that theatre will be B. F. Keith vaudeville of high standard and motion pictures.

The Broadway theatre will be used exclusively for motion pictures and for one-night stands. All the big shows that have been missed during the past eight months will be brought to Norwich as soon as possible. Mr. Davidson has a five-year franchise with the Shuberts and with A. L. Erlanger, the largest booking house for shows in the world and many fine shows have been booked for future months.

Among those who will return to the Broadway theatre are Frank Herc, operator for Mr. Davidson for five years previous to the strike, and Bert Barrows, stage manager with Mr. Davidson since he has been in business in Norwich. The stage hands will also be local men.

The Broadway theatre will be managed by Mr. Davidson personally and he will also have charge of the Strand theatre. John Coffee of Rockville, a man with ten years' experience in the show business, is to manage the Strand theatre and will take up his duties there Sunday.

ABOUT 20 BEEKEEPERS REPORTED IN NORWICH

About 20 beekeepers in Norwich have paid the fee of 25 cents and registered their names, as required, with Town Clerk Charles S. Holbrook, who has forwarded his report to the Connecticut college experiment station. The object of the law requiring beekeepers to register was to assist the state in preventing inroads of "foul brood" and to build up the production of honey. The last general assembly altered the law by requiring town clerks to report the names and localities of the beekeepers. The object of this was to aid bee inspectors in their visits to towns. Colonies are inspected without charge to the owners. Colonies, however, which are diseased are summarily destroyed. While there are several diseases which decimate colonies "foul brood" will destroy a hive of bees in a few days and will ruin an apiary in short order. The law penalizes town clerks with a fine of not more than $10 for failure to report registrations by February 1.

PERSONAL TAX DELINQUENTS BOOST POLICE RECORDS

If it had not been for arrests made for delinquency in paying poll tax, the Norwich police and city court records would have had a slim month in January. There were 53 of these delinquents brought into the police records out of the total of 103 for the month.

The following were the other causes of arrest: Intoxication 43, breach of peace 12, theft 9, disturbing religious meeting 2, violating motor vehicle law 6, violating pharmacy law 5, bigamy, fugitive from justice, concealing property on conditional sale, one each.

Questions Rosanski Family

Coroner J. J. Desmond has questioned members of the Rosanski family in connection with the death of Raymond Rosanski who was shot at the Lisbon Schuetzen Verein last Saturday night. None of those who were present at the time Rosanski was shot have appeared before the coroner yet.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

EASTERN STAR

At its 50th annual session in Hartford this week the Grand Chapter of Connecticut, Order of the Eastern Star, voted to lay per capita tax of $1 each on the 20,000 members in the state, payable this year. The money is to be devoted to the equipment of the new Eastern Star Hospital at the Masonic home, Wallingford, which it is probable will be built in the very near future.

Past Grand Master Fred A. Verplanck, of Manchester, president of the Board of the Managers of the Masonic home, made an address, and thanked the Grand Chapter for voting to raise the $20,000.

The Grand Chapter voted to transfer $1,000 annually for five years from the general fund to the Masonic home fund.

Mrs. Bertha L. S. Gallup, of Moosup, treasurer of the Masonic home fund of the Grand Chapter reported that $1,246.92 had been expended in the past year. The balance on hand is $7,181.24. The resolution presented a year ago to change the annual session to April was lost.

Grand Secretary Mrs. Harriet I. Burwell of Winsted, reported ninety-one chartered chapters and three under dispensation. During 1923 there were 1,778 candidates initiated; 107 applicants affiliated, eighteen reinstated and 73 received by dispensation; a total of 1,975. There were 225 deaths and 173 members demitted. The membership January 15, 1924, was 20,603, a net gain of 1,501 for the year.

The grand matron, in her address, reported numerous gifts to the Eastern Star hospital. They included 20 adjustable porcelain tables and a compressed air outfit by Fidelity chapter of New London; a combination portable electro-therapeutic outfit and an adjustable specialist examining office chair by Bigelow chapter of East Hartford; six bedside chairs and one thermolite by Sachem chapter of Norwich; ten back rests and six foot tubs by Acacia chapter of New Canaan. The women of Sachem chapter raised $150 to furnish a room at the home. There were given nearly 1,000 pads, many articles of clothing and nearly 100 bundles of old linen.

HIBERNIANS

Division No. 1, A. O. H., held a successful whist Wednesday evening in Buckingham Memorial hall. There were about 25 tables in play and the prizes were awarded as follows: Gentlemen—First, John Donohue, scarf; second, Peter D. Sullivan. Ladies—First, Mrs. P. Coughlin, pillow top; second, Mrs. Kiflan, hand bag.

Refreshments were served after the whist. The scorers were Misses Mary Sullivan, Barbara Sullivan, Jennie Breen, Teresa Connell. The committee in charge of the whist comprised the officers of the division, Martin E. Burke, president, acting as chairman with Peter D. Sullivan, Micheal O'Connor, James Quinn and Micheal J. Malone.

LADIES' AUXILIARY, A. O. H.

The members of Ladies' Auxiliary, A. O. H., Division 18, met at the home of Mrs. Chester Ryan of North Main street Thursday evening, to hold their weekly millinery class, in which they are becoming proficient under the supervision of Miss Mollie Carroll. After the instructions, refreshments were served by the hostess and a pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present. Next week the class will meet with Mrs. Bernard Keenan of Fifth street.

ODD LADIES, M. U.

Loyal Victory lodge, No. 4, social committee, met with Mrs. Anna Addison, Taftville, Wednesday evening. Plans were completed for the social entertainment to be given Thursday evening, Feb. 7th in Scriner's hall. There will be a table of fancy articles, Mrs. Kate Cocker being in charge. At the close of the meeting in behalf of those present, Mrs. Minnie Armitage presented to Mrs. Addison a handsome basket of flowers, for her birthday. Dainty refreshments were served by the hostess. The chief feature was a large birthday cake.

L'UNION ST. JEAN BAPTISTE.

What was regarded as one of the biggest affairs of its kind ever held in Norwich by Lafayette Council, No. 207, took place last Sunday at Elks Home on Main street, when the officers of the council were installed.

Over 300 members of the union coming from Willimantic, Danielson, Putnam, Jewett City, Plainfield, Moosup, Baltic, Taftville and other places were present and watched the work of installation by the guard of honor, Guard St. Cecile of Willimantic, directed by Captain Miss Pauliua. The work was beautifully done, the guard having been drilled to perfection in his work of installing each officer.

The officers installed were J. E. Rochette, president; H. P. Beausoleil, vice president; Eugene A. Sabourin, secretary; J. B. Caron, assistant secretary; P. H. Ethier, treasurer; Leondore Gladue, financial secretary; Henry Moreau, honorary president; Frank B. Disco, dean; Adelard Ravenelle and Joseph Jodoin, guards; Mrs. O. Dugas and Montcalm Ethier, auditors; Dr. F. J. Harper, physician.

The installing officers were Philip Cardin of Baltic, Felix Guilletta of Jewett City and P. Pelletier of Plainfield, and Albert J. Piche of Willimantic was master of ceremonies.

The meeting was opened by the singing of America after which prayer was offered. During the meeting an orchestra furnished music and also played the marches for the guard of honor. There were several stirring addresses by Rev. F. X. DesSureault of Occum, Dr. G. T. Lamarche of Putnam; M. A. Forcier of Goodyear, H. S. Gaucher of Willimantic and various other members.

Between the several speeches the council choir rendered several selections and The Federation was sung. Mrs. George H. Roberts rendered a pleasing soprano solo and she and Mrs. J. B. Caron, alto, also favored with a duet which was well received. A feature of the programme which was a surprise came when Miss Cecile LaFreniere of Occum, age 12, responded by singing a solo, Les Vitains Gloutans. Her voice was well trained and of high quality and the audience was reluctant to let her go without an encore. Miss LaFreniere then rendered a difficult piano selection which was given with ease and grace.

Following the entertainment a luncheon was served, arrangements for the meeting being in charge of the entertainment committee, assisted by several of the members, who also took charge of the hall decorations which were cleverly arranged.

L'Union St. Jean Baptiste of Norwich now has 174 active members and all reports indicate that 1924 will be one of the most successful years in the history of the council.

LOUIS R. PORTEOUS IS WITH PORTLAND COMPANY

On Friday Louis R. Porteous of this city took up his new duties as vice president of the Porteous, Mitchell & Baurn company of Portland, Me., and will move his family to that city as soon as satisfactory arrangements can be made. Weather conditions in Maine at the present time make the work of transporting household effects a dangerous undertaking, ice and snow covering the roads for miles around Portland.

Mr. Porteous has been secretary of the Porteous & Mitchell company of this city for several years, being connected with the company since his graduation from Yale University in 1907. He is the son of John Porteous, president of the Norwich and Portland companies.

Norwich has always been the home of Mr. Porteous and his circle of friends is large in Norwich and in the state. He is a member of the Arcanum club, the Chamber of Commerce, the Rotary club, Norwich Golf club and has been an active member of the organizations.

The Portland store with which he is now connected is one of the leading dry goods stores in Maine and the volume of business is large. Robert Braun, formerly of Norwich, is connected with the store as treasurer and is extremely popular with Portland people.

The many friends of Mr. Porteous will regret his leaving the city, but at the same time well wishes are extended for his success in Portland.

At present Mr. Porteous has rented a house in Portland but expects to purchase a residence in the near future. Both Mr. and Mrs. Porteous have been prominent in Norwich society. They have two sons, John and Louis Porteous.

ROTARY CLUB THANKS AMERICAN LEGION POST

The regular meeting of Robert O. Fletcher Post, No. 4, American Legion, was held Friday night at the legion rooms with Commander H. A. Bruckner in the chair. Routine business was transacted and a letter of acknowledgement was read, from the Norwich Rotary club, thanking the post for the gift of $50 to be added to the Dr. John S. Blackmar Boys Work Fund.

It was also voted to sign for another performance with the John B Rogers producing company, the show "Bimbo", to be given in Norwich on Armistice day and the day following.

Pendleton's Dog Recovered.

Footsore and glad to be home again, C. V. Pendleton's black and white bird dog, Peter, was found about noon Friday at an automobile agency at Westchester where he had been taken in charge after he had been noticed on the road and it was thought he had been hit by a machine.

Mrs. Pendleton was on the way to Hartford to look up another dog that had been found, when she stopped at the Westchester place and was told they had a dog there. It proved to be Peter. He was overjoyed to see his mistress and talked to her in delighted barks and other dog language all the way home in the machine.

It is Mr. Pendleton's belief that someone has had the dog tied up. The license tag is missing.

POPE ORDERS K. OF C. MEDAL, TO NOTE WELFARE WORK

Members of the K. of C. in Norwich learned Thursday that for the first time in history, the Pope has ordered struck a commemorative medal in honor of an American organization. Mgr. F. Borgognini Duca, of the Vatican State Department at Rome, in a letter to the National Headquarters of the Knights of Columbus at New Haven, states that Pope Pius XI. has ordered a limited number of silver medals to be struck and that the Holy Father himself has dedicated the inscription, which reads in translation:

"The Knights of Columbus with their own money, so that they may fulfill the wishes of Pope Pius XI., P. M. for the Christian instruction of Roman youth, A. D., 1924."

The inscription refers to the $1,000,000 American welfare work being conducted by the K. of C. in Rome under the auspices of the Vatican.

The observe of the medal, which will be designed by a noted Italian artist, will show Pope Pius and the reverse side the K. of C. gymnasium and Playground erected on Vatican land at St. Peter's recently donated by the Pope.

REMBISZ IS GIVEN 90 DAYS IN JAIL

Andrew Rembisz, Salem farmer, who Tuesday evening attempted to draw a gun on State Police Sergt. W. E. Bushy, to prevent his arrest, goes to jail for 90 days and pays $75 in fines as a result.

On each of three counts, breach of peace, assault and carrying concealed weapons, he pleaded guilty before Justice of the Peace John Hacket Wednesday evening, when arraigned at Salem. Each count drew a $25 fine and a 30 day jail sentence which goes into effect immediately.

Breach of peace and assault charges were preferred by his wife, who is the mother of nine children, while Sergeant Bushy and State Police Officer T. J. Henry, who arrested the man, testified that he was carrying concealed weapons, alleging that Rembisz drew an automatic from his boot when the state policeman arrested him.

SEEK D. A. R. MEMBERSHIP 1,000,000 BEING ELIGIBLE

So many women are applying for membership in the Daughters of the American Revolution that special facilities have been called into service to pass on membership petitions.

Recently the board of the organization held a special meeting in Washington at which sixteen new chapters, having a combined membership of more than 1,600, were granted charters. It is estimated that a total of 1,000,000 women are eligible to be members, and officials of the D. A. R. predict that if the present rate is maintained most of the eligibles will be brought within the organization within the next few years. The total enrollment now is approaching the 200,000 mark.

"With all the cults and isms that are being formed," says a statement issued from D. A. R. headquarters, "it is very gratifying to the board to see women flocking to this old organization that stands for the best there is in American life, for upholding the constitution, for unswerving loyalty to the government, for encouraging the study of American history, and for carrying out the injunction of Washington—"to promote, as an object of primary importance, institutions for the general diffusion of knowledge."

Extend to Include Human Nature.

A gentleman who, we imagine, bears a mental resemblance to our colleague the Nomad, left the crowded city the other day for a tramp over the hills. On his return he remarked to a friend who asked him what kind of a time he'd had, that he was glad to get back to the haunts of men. "The day was perfect," he went on to explain, "but I had a raging toothache, and the truth is I never swear in the presence of nature." Such respect for our dear other mother is commendable and we earnestly advise our golfers to adopt the same rule.—Boston Transcript.

Popular Begonias.

There are few more familiar plants than the begonias and few so widely grown. The most popular varieties make most excellent house plants and are used extensively for bedding purposes. Begonias are all from warm climates, but do not require a great heat, thriving well in a night temperature of 50 to 60 degrees during the winter months. There are a dozen varieties well known and popularly grown in the United States.

WOODROW WILSON DIED AT 11.15 SUNDAY

Closed His Eyes and Slipped Peacefully Away—Heart Muscles Refused to Act Any Longer—Mrs. Wilson, His Daughter, Margaret, and Dr. Grayson Were at His Bedside When Mr. Wilson Died—President Coolidge Was the First Person to Send A Message of Condolence—Place of Entombment and Whether the Funeral Will be Public or Private Will be Determined Today.

Washington, Feb. 3.—(By the A. P.)—Former President Woodrow Wilson died at 11.15 o'clock this morning.

The place of his entombment and whether his funeral will be public or private will be determined later.

The end was peaceful. Life ebbed away while he slept.

A tired man, he closed his eyes and, "sustained and soothed by an unfaltering trust," passed on to the great hereafter "like one who wraps the drapery of his couch about him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Dr. Grayson, his friend and physician, announced the end of the great war president in this bulletin:

"Mr. Wilson died at 11.15 o'clock. His heart's action became feebler and feebler, and the heart muscle was so fatigued that it refused to act any longer. The end came peacefully.

"The remote causes of death lie in his ill health which began more than four years ago, namely; general arterio-sclerosis with haemoplegia. The immediate cause of death was exhaustion following a digestive disturbance which began in the early part of last week but did not reach an acute stage until the early morning hours of Feb. 1."

Last Friday the grim reaper had forced his way into the house after waiting on the doorstep more than four years. Saturday he had advanced to the landing on the staircase, and stood counting off the ticks of the great clock. Saturday night he knocked on the chamber door. A faithful physician and a loyal wife stood with their backs against it. At 9 o'clock he rattled the knob and called to the peaceful, prostrate figure on the bed—a great bed, long and wide, a replica of the bed in which Abraham Lincoln slept in the White House, with a golden American eagle and a tiny silk American flag just over the headboard. The watchers knew the battle was lost. At the portal of the door, now open, the faithful negro servant hovered. On the bed, sitting beside her husband, sustained with all the fortitude and composure of a woman facing a crisis, was Mrs. Wilson, holding between her hands the wan, withered, right hand that had proved the pen mightier than the sword. Near the foot of the bed was his eldest daughter, Margaret, resigned to the inevitable Close by, tears welling from his eyes and coursing down his cheeks, was Doctor Grayson, taking the measure of the fluttering pulses, weaker and fainter with each effort.

Death advanced and beckoned for the last time. The tired, worn-out man drew a long breath, there was a slight flutter of the eyelids, an almost imperceptible twitch of the nostrils.

Out through a city stilled in a Sabbath morning's reverential calm, his name was being spoken from a hundred pulpits. In the Central Presbyterian church where he faithfully went to worship while the flesh was able, a choked-up congregation had sung The Son of God Goes Forth to War, How Firm a Foundation, and Onward Christian Soldiers, favorite hymns in which he loved to lift his voice in a happier, better day. Over a great land that had acclaimed him chief, and in lands across the seas where he had been hailed as a god of peace, prayers were rising for the repose of his soul.

In the street before the square brick house where he has lived with his memories, his hopes and his regrets, was another scene. There was a gathering of people there. It was not a crusading throng come to a mecca in pilgrimage to attest their faith in the ideals he personified. It was a group of men and women kneeling on the pavement in silent prayer. Small prayer slips bearing the inscription "Peace on earth, goodwill toward men," held in their hands, fluttered in the chill wind which swirled up the debris and litter left there by the watchers engaged in the solemnity of the death watch that the world might know.

Then a pale sun broke through a cloud-bank. A little native warbler, a pilgrim venturing north in search of early sun and spring, stopped for a moment and from his twig aloft uttered a happy note.

Immediately the great government over which he presided for eight years began taking steps to give marks of its respect. President Coolidge heard the word of Mr. Wilson's death while in church with Mrs. Coolidge. Immediately at the conclusion of the services he drove to the Wilson home and left cards. Later he sent his secretary to offer any aid whatever.

Flags on government buildings and government property everywhere were lowered to half-mast. The news went to army posts everywhere and to ships at sea. A thirty-day period of official mourning was ordered as the government had done for Colonel Roosevelt and other former presidents. Congress arranged to adjourn tomorrow, executive departments were ordered closed on the day of the funeral; social activities at the White House coming within the period of mourning were ordered abandoned.

Official telegrams were dispatched to the embassies and legations abroad for the information of foreign governments. One cablegram going to far-off Siam carried the news to Mr. Wilson's daughter, Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre. She is with her husband at Bangkok, where he is adviser to the Siamese government. Another telegram was dispatched to Mr. Wilson's other daughter, Mrs. William G. McAdoo, who with her husband and children is speeding to Washington on a train from California.

Mr. Wilson's last words of sustained meaning were spoken Friday. They were: "I am ready."

Realizing fully that he could not hope to rally from the onslaught of the digestive disorder which sapped his strength, weakened his heart and accentuated the condition which followed his first stroke of paralysis, he watched for a moment when all except Dr. Grayson were out of the bed chamber. Drawing his friend and physician close he murmured with some difficulty of articulation:

"The old machine has broken down. You've done your best for me. But it's better that I should go than to live on a helpless invalid. Tell Mrs. Wilson I want her. I'm ready."

All this was without a show of emotion but in his usual measured habit of speaking. Mrs. Wilson came at the physician's call and spoke for several moments with her husband during which he communicated to her some last wishes.

He never spoke a complete sentence after that, and merely was able to whisper "Yes" and "No" to gentle inquiries of how he might be made more comfortable. When he no longer had strength to do that. He gave his answers by making a motion with his head. Even then and until Saturday night he was able to recognize those about him.

With the last sinking spell Saturday night, however, he fell into a state of complete prostration and fitful slumber in which his vitality slowly but surely bled out. This morning found his pulses fluttering more feebly and feebly until the end.

Mr. Wilson's place of entombment and the manner of his funeral will be decided as nearly as his family is able to do, with regard for what he himself might have wished.

It is likely that he will be entombed temporarily here in Washington at some one of the local cemeteries to rest there until the national memorial which is sure to mark his final tomb, is prepared.

Those about him feel that a memorial, wherever located, should be easy of access to the thousands who will come to call it a shrine; and the capital of the United States, where he rose to his greatest fame, naturally has suggested itself as the place.

It is not improbable that his body may rest, for a time at least, in the great national cathedral now rising on Mount Saint Albans, overlooking the city from the northwest section. It is planned, to have as a place of sepulture for the nation's great dead there, after the manner of Westminster Abbey, in England.

Mr. Wilson's active pall bearers will be chosen later from among the men who were mostly closely associated with him during his terms in the presidency. Honorary pall bearers will be probably selected from men of congress, from which also a representative committee will be delegated.

Whether the funeral services will be private or a great public ceremony probably will be determined tomorrow, when the time and the place of entombment also probably will be selected.

A death mask was made today for the use and guidance of sculptors and other artists.

SKETCH OF THE CAREER OF WOODROW WILSON

Twenty-eighth president of the United States, and the first democrat since Jackson to serve two successive terms, Woodwrow Wilson occupied the presidency during eight years of such world upheaval and turmoil that his proper place in history cannot be assigned to him until his contemporaries are likewise assigned to their niches.

Certainly, he ranks as one of the great war presidents of the American republic, and he exercised such an influence in world affairs as never before attached to his office.

Empires crumbled, thrones collapsed, the map of the world was made over, and under his administration the country abandoned its policy of isolation and became an active participant in world affairs. In all of that he took a powerful hand. No biographer could attempt to assess him accurately, and in full, until the processes which began in his day and with his participation have come to a conclusion.

An obscure lawyer, by a nature a man of letters, he became an educator and won his first attention from the public as president of Princeton university. Then by the strange ways of a political system he became governor of New Jersey and later, because the voters of the republican party were divided between Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft he became president of the United States.

During his eight years of power he travelled the gamut of human emotions: victory, defeat; courtship and marriage; responsibility for leading a nation into war with the collateral responsibility of bringing it back again to the ways of peace; and finally a daily struggle with death.

Was Cheered and Hissed.

He had heard himself hailed by the millions of Europe as "the God of peace" and heard his name hissed by the same millions. Acclaimed at one time almost as a new Messiah, he heard himself excoriated and denounced as an autocrat and wrote at home and abroad. No other president since Lincoln was so worshipped and hated; no other president since Roosevelt had such friends and such enemies. Through it all he preserved an outward calm while the grim destroyer which hovered close about him during the last months of his occupancy of the presidency, followed him relentlessly to the modest home where he lived the ways of a retired gentleman and knocked at his door every day until it was at last opened.

After having borne the burdens of a war president, he undertook the task of making a peace which he sincerely believed would be a lasting one and although he succeeded in getting Europe to accept it in large measure his own country rejected it. And in the fight he broke his health, wore himself out, suffered a stroke of paralysis which led to his death, and declared through it all that he would have been happy to give his life for the success of his efforts.

Not Bound by Precedent.

Woodrow Wilson was a precedent smasher from beginning to end. He began by reviving the practice of Washington and Jefferson in delivering his messages to congress in person; he finished by actually leaving American soil and going to Europe. His was the responsibility of deciding when a country with a people torn by conflicting sympathies was ready to throw itself into the great world war, and when the moment came he took the responsibility of throwing in the men and millions, which turned the scale to victory.

Whatever an army of Boswells may write, that will be the part in which he will be best remembered by coming generations.

Born in Staunton, Va., December 28, 1856, of Scotch-Irish parentage, he was christened Thomas Woodrow Wilson and he was known in early life as "Tommy". After he was graduated from Princeton in 1879 he was known only as Woodrow Wilson. His father was the Rev. Joseph Ruggles Wilson, a Presbyterian clergyman, and his mother was Jessie Woodrow.

When he was two years old the fortunes of his father took the family to Augusta, Georgia, and later to Columbia, S. C., where at the age of 17 Thomas Woodrow Wilson entered Davidson college, but left there soon to go to Princeton. After graduation at Princeton he studied law in the University of Virginia and in 1882 hung out his shingle in Atlanta, Ga. Meantime he courted Ellen Louise Axson, the daughter of a Savannah Presbyterian clergyman. They were married in 1885 and had three daughters, Margaret, the eldest who did not marry; Jessie, who became the wife of Francis Bowes Sayre, and Eleanor, who became the wife of William G. McAdoo, secretary of the treasury during her father's administration and later a presidential aspirant.

Waited for Clients.

Mr. Wilson once said that as a young lawyer he wore out the rug in his office walking around the desk waiting for clients, so he abandoned a legal career and went to Johns Hopkins university at Baltimore for a post graduate course in letters. While there he published his first book "Congressional Government," a study in American politics. It evoked offers of professorships at Bryn Mawr and Wesleyan and won recognition at home and abroad. The young man who wrote of the defects of the American political system in 1883 found himself to deal with them later. Having written in deprecatory tone of the tendency toward autocracy in American presidents he lived to hear himself called the greatest autocrat of them all and to see a resolution declaring his office vacant on those grounds introduced and tabled in the senate.

As Educator and Writer.

Successively, Mr. Wilson became professor of history and political economy at Bryn Mawr and at Wesleyan university and later professor of jurisprudence and political economy at Princeton where, subsequently, he was made head of that institution. Meanwhile, Professor Wilson had made head of that institution. Meanwhile, Professor Wilson had gained high reputation as a writer. Some of his work, with the date of their production, were as follows: "The State-Elements of Historical and Practical Politics," (1889); "Division and Reunion," (1893); "George Washington," (1896); "A History of the American People," (1902); "Constitutional Government in the United States," (1908); "Free Life," (1913); "When a Man Comes to Himself," (1915); "On Being Human," (1916); "An Old Master and Other Political Essays, and "Mere Literature and Other Essays", were among his earlier writings. His state papers, notes to belligerant governments and addresses to congress, would fill many volumes.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Laws was bestowed upon him by Wake Forest college (1887); Tulane university (1893); Johns Hopkins (1903); Brown university (1903); Harvard university (1907); Williams college (1908); and Dartmouth college (1908). Yale made him a Doctor of Literature in 1901.

Life was a pretty well settled affair for him while he was president of Princeton. Its great oaks, shaded lawns and historic halls, furnished the settings in which Mr. Wilson did much of the literary work which later was to attract the world. He probably had little thought of being snatched into the maelstrom of politics and war. He drew some public attention in the fight for preservation of democratic ideals at the university, but he lived the life of a family man on small pay and as late as 1910 was contemplating retiring on a teacher's pension.

That year the inexorable force of events came into evidence. The tide which "sweeps on to fortune" began to rise about him. Nominated for governor of New Jersey in a political situation about which many interesting things have been said and denied with equal fervor, he was elected on the democratic ticket, and immediately took on the state "bosses" for a round of combat which attracted the attention of the country. In the Jersey legislature he found the young lawyer, Joseph P. Tumulty, who became his private secretary and biographer.

Was Charged With Radicalism.

Political opponents charged Governor Wilson with radicalism but he drove his program through. The outstanding legislation was the "seven sisters laws," a series of bills drafted under his direction which dealt with trusts. New Jersey up to that time, because of its corporate laws, had been called a rendezvous for monopolies.

Governor Wilson's nomination for the presidency at the democratic convention of 1912 in Baltimore was one of the dramatic spectacles of American political history. It was a battle royal which brought him victory after more than 40 ballots.

Champ Clark, the venerable and beloved speaker of the house of representatives, led Wilson in the early voting—in fact polled a majority of the delegates. For the first time in history a democratic national convention refused to give the necessary two thirds to a candidate who had gotten a majority. William Jennings Bryan, himself the nominee of three previous conventions, led the fight against Clark in one of the bitterest contests ever conducted in American politics. It broke Clark's heart—he never forgave Wilson of Bryan—and he opposed Wilson's policies in congress repeatedly. Clark knew he lost not only the nomination, but the presidency, for the contest between Taft and Roosevelt assured such a rift in the republican vote that the election of a democrat was all but inevitable.

Nominated for President.

"We meet not only to choose a candidate but to choose a president."

At any rate, Woodrow Wilson got the nomination and won the election with 435 electoral votes. Roosevelt got 88 and Taft got 8. He came to the White House on March 4, 1913, signalizing the return of the democracy to power after successive defeats of 16 years.

Immediately he galvanized the country, appearing before congress in person, publicly denouncing "a vicious lobby" which he charged was attempt-

Fall Halts the Oil Committee Hearing

Washington, Feb. 3—Albert B. Fall's challenge, to the senate oil committee, in which he disputed the authority of that body to examine him in connection with naval oil leases, resulted today in a decision by the committee to postpone the hearing of all other witnesses until the question of whether Mr. Fall will testify is definitely settled.

The committee will not meet tomorrow, because congress will suspend its sessions in memory of Woodrow Wilson. On Tuesday it will assemble, but will adjourn immediately to await action of the senate on its request for re-enactment of the resolution under which it has been proceeding. Mr. Fall contended the committee's authority had expired.

A number of witnesses summoned in the inquiry are on hand to testify, including Washington brokers whose books have been subpoenaed to throw light on stock market operations in oil issues, but these must wait until the case of Mr. Fall is disposed of.

Thomas W. Gregory, attorney-general in the Wilson cabinet, who was one of those originally selected by President Coolidge to act as counsel in the government's oil cases, called on the president today and gave him a letter explaining his position, both in respect to possible service in the proceedings and his connection with oil interests. Mr. Gregory said in the letter that in his telephone conversations with the white house prior to the announcement of his appointment he had no idea that he was accepting appointment or that the president had so construed it.

Mr. Gregory said also that if it had been in his mind at the time of his telephone conversation with Mr. Coolidge that he had ever been employed directly or indirectly by E. L. Doheny, whose company holds the leases to the California oil reserves, the matter would have ended at once.

President Coolidge confirmed Mr. Gregory's understanding of the telephone conversation had with the white house in the inferences to be drawn from the conversations.

The conference between the president and Mr. Gregory leaves the way open for the formal submission to congress of another democrat as a member of the special oil counsel and the name of former Senator Atlee Pomerene of Ohio, will go forward within the next few days.

Forest D. Mowry, Jr., seven year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Forest D. Mowry of North Smithfield, of Woonsocket was shot his little brother Clifton, four years old and the latter is dying at the hospital with a bullet lodged in the base of his brain.

Ministers Bound by Faith They Profess

New York, Feb. 3—Obligation to accept and teach the doctrines of the Apostoles' creed, including affirmation of the virgin birth of Christ, is accepted by every Protestant Episcopalian minister of his own free choice before his ordination, and rests upon him as long as he may continue in office, Bishop William T. Manning, of the diocese of New York, declared today in a sermon at the cathedral of St. John the Divine, in specific reference to the questions raised by the modernist clergymen of the church.

Mentioning intimations he had received that a statement from him regarding these questions might result in a falling off contributions for the completion of the cathedral, the bishop said he did not believe this would happen, "but, if this suggestion were true, better that the cathedral should never be built than that a bishop of the church should fail to bear his witness for the full truth of Jesus Christ."

Conferences are being held, Dr. Manning revealed, for the "full and careful consideration" of issues between the factions in the church. In this connection, however, he severely criticised the action of "one of our theological seminaries" in issuing a pamphlet proposing that the doctrines of the creed be "believed and taught, or not, as different congregation or their clergy may decide." It was stated he referred to the Cambridge Divinity school.

The issue raised by the modernist clergy, the bishop declared, was not liberty of conscience or freedom of thought. The real question was whether "those of us who, of our own free choice, have accepted office as ministers of this church, are obliged to teach the faith which this church holds."

Wherever belief in the virgin birth becomes weak, he continued seemed also to become weak in the resurrection and ascension of Christ.

"This present movement does not mean only rejection of the virgin birth. It has its roots in a deliminent presupposition against the possibility of miracle, against the supernatural as such, and so against the very message of the gospel as declared in the new testament."

Few members of the Episcopalian church [illegible] fundamentalists," the bishop said, "believe fully in applying modern knowledge to religion, but we insist that the power of God, and his revelation of himself, shall not be limited by the measure of our human reason."

SENATOR BRANDEGEE HAS MANY INTERESTS

Washington, Feb. 3—Senator Frank B. Brandegee of Connecticut, one of the venerable men in the senate. Mr. Brandegee, noted most for a vigor of utterance, a knowledge of parliamentary law, and a quiet guest of his own business, owns a 1,000 acre farm just over the line in Maryland. Report has it that last year Mr. Brandegee's harvest included 1,000 bushels of wheat.

The Connecticut senator has other claims to distinction, including possession of some valuable Washington real estate, a preference for a Dodge touring car instead of luxurious limousines, an abiding hatred for the League of Nations, and an unusually fine collection of paintings.

SMASHED WHISKEY BOTTLE ON HEAD OF A POLICEMAN

Bridgeport, Feb. 3.—John J. Doyle, a police sergeant, was temporarily blinded by whiskey early this morning. He was about to put under arrest Joseph Lombardo in the rear of a Hamilton street store, under surveillance, police say, as a place suspected of harboring liquor, when Lombardo smashed a bottle containing whiskey over his head.

Other policemen grasped Lombardo before he could escape from Sergeant Doyle. The prisoner was held in $1,000 for possession of liquor and assault. Doyle's eyes smarted painfully, but were not seriously affected.

A LENINE MEMORIAL MEETING IN HARTFORD

Hartford, Conn., Feb. 3.—Opposition which had been forecast by the American Civil Liberties union of New York failed to materialize today at the Lenine memorial meeting in this city.

A crowd which filled the Educational Labor Alliance lyceum to the doors listened for more than two hours without any interruption to a tribute to Nicholai Lenine and his work by Alexander Trachtenberg of New York city.

PRESIDENT'S PROCLAMATION UPON DEATH OF MR. WILSON

Directs That Flags of White House and Federal Buildings be Displayed at Half Mast for a Period of Thirty Days—Orders That Suitable Military and Naval Honors be Rendered on the day of the Funeral.

By the president of the United States of America.

A proclamation.

To the people of the United States:

The death of Woodrow Wilson, president of the United States from March 4, 1913 to March 4, 1921, which occurred at 11:15 o'clock today at his home at Washington, District of Columbia, deprives the country of a most distinguished citizen, and is an event which causes universal and genuine sorrow. To many of us it brings the sense of a profound personal bereavement.

His early profession as a lawyer was abandoned to enter academic life. In this chosen field he attained the highest rank as an educator, and has left his impress upon the intellectual thought of the country. From the presidency of Princeton University he was called by his fellow citizens to be the chief executive of the state of New Jersey. The duties of this high office he so conducted as to win the confidence of the people of the United States, who twice elected him to the chief magistracy of the republic. As president of the United States he was moved by an earnest desire to promote the best interests of the country as he conceived them. His acts were prompted by high motives and his sincerity of purpose cannot be questioned. He led the nation through the terrific struggle of the world war with a lofty idealism which never failed him. He gave utterance to the aspiration of humanity with an eloquence which held the attention of all the earth and made America a new and enlarged influence in the destiny of mankind.

In testimony of the respect in which his memory is held by the government and the people of the United States, I do hereby direct that the flags of the white house and of the several departmental buildings be displayed at half-staff for a period of 30 days, and that suitable military and naval honors under orders of the secretary of the war and of the secretary of the navy may be rendered on the day of the funeral.

Done at the city of Washington, this third day of February in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and twenty four, and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and forty eighth.

FEELING OF RESENTMENT AGAINST SENATOR LODGE

Washington, Feb. 3 (By the A. P.)—After Woodrow Wilson left the White House in 1921 he took to the retired life of a man of letters which he continued until death.

He lived alone with his wife in a comparatively modest home for a man of his place, and maintained most of the time a modest establishment of three servants and a used car.

His daily routine was modelled on the eight-hour day, which he once told congress was "adjudged by the thought and experience of recent years a thing upon which society is justified in insisting for the interest of health, efficiency and contentment."

Nobody ever knew completely what his feelings were for politics during his retirement. He took no active part, but there was sometimes indications that those close about him were urging him to do so. He once asked his medical advisers if they thought he could undertake a campaign and was advised that a political melee surely would kill him. Apparently he gave up the thought if, indeed, he had any, and contented himself with expressing himself on political questions when asked by some correspondent. He never lost an opportunity, however, to drop a bombshell on some office seeker running for reelection, who had failed to support his policies while he was in the White House.

On some few occasions he acknowledged the plaudits of admirers who gathered in the street in front of his home and delivered one address by radio, but he made few public appearances. The most notable of the latter were at the services for the unknown soldier and at President Harding's funeral ceremonies.

On the latter occasion, the former president was waiting in his automobile in the White House, to take his place in the Harding funeral procession. A great array of notables was passing in and out of the White House when an army officer approached the former president and said:

"Pardon me, sir, may I ask you for some information?"

"Yes, you may," replied Mr. Wilson.

"Can you tell me if Senator Lodge has arrived yet?" asked the officer.

Mr. Wilson eyed the man coldly, for an instant, and apparently convincing himself that the questioner was sincere, replied:

"I don't know; I'm not his keeper."

Besieged to write his memoirs, or his own account of the peace treaty fight, or anything else for that matter, Mr. Wilson always declined "except in one or two instances. He spent a good deal of the time writing propped up in bed, after the habit of Mark Twain, but it was not what publishers were asking for. All his material on the peace treaty he gave to Ray Stannard Baker with permission to write what he would.

"Write what you will, he told Baker. "I'll answer any questions you ask, but it will be your book, and I don't ever want to see what you write."

WHY WOOD WAS NOT GIVEN A COMMAND IN FRANCE

Springfield, Mass., Feb. 3—Major General Leonard Wood was not given a command in France primarily because General Pershing did not wish him to have one and secondly because President Wilson, though crediting Wood with "unusual ability", thought him "apparently absolutely unable to submit his judgment to those who are superior to him in command."

This answer to the question raised during the war and frequently called up in the subsequent years was answered today when the Springfield Republican, considering that Mr. Wilson's death gave it the liberty, made public a personal letter to the editor of the newspaper written by the president on June 5, 1918.

LLOYD-GEORGE LIKENS WILSON TO LINCOLN

Churt, Surrey, England, Feb. 3.—(By the A. P.)—At his new country home here, high up in the Surrey hills, where the fresh breezes have added further color to his usual healthful glow, David Lloyd George, Great Britain's war prime minister, today heard from the correspondent of The Associated Press the news of the peaceful passing of Woodrow Wilson.

"Woodrow Wilson will become one of the greatest figures of history," was Mr. Lloyd George's tribute to the man who had shortly passed away in Washington.

"He was a man," Mr. Lloyd George added, "and therefore had his weaknesses. But he was the first to embody the ideal of fraternity into a concrete plan.

"Like the founder of Christianity, the central figure in history, and like Lincoln after him, he prosecuted his ideal to his tragic death. The circumstances if nothing more, would make his memory last in the minds of men.

"Wilson, like Lincoln and other great idealists, has not lived to see his dreams realised. Nevertheless, his work will be carried to his own glory and the permanent benefit of mankind. In the national sense he led his country out onto the road of world affairs, from which there is no turning back."

"The tragedy of it, all," the ex-prime premier mused, "is that Woodrow Wilson's failing was his inability to subdue personalities—his refusal to give up personal animosity. This weakness caused his failure to realize his ideals during his lifetime, and in the end it was this weakness which doubtless contributed to his death."

Mr. Lloyd George said the feeling between Wilson and Roosevelt was the most savage hatred he had known. The former premier told how he had first met Mr. Wilson when he first came to London in 1918. He did not care much for him during the early days of their acquaintance, but he said that later he felt he understood Mr. Wilson's personality and was drawn to him despite the president's "lack of common touch," which he usually found a characteristic of Americans.

It was impossible, declared Mr. Lloyd George to place President Wilson comparatively with other American presidents. He was so unlike Roosevelt that a comparison could not be drawn. His prototype undoubtedly was Lincoln, but without the emancipator's humanity

MILESTONES IN THE LIFE OF WOODROW WILSON

Washington, Feb. 3.—(By the A. P.)—Woodrow Wilson's life was marked by these milestones:

POLITICAL CRISIS IN FRANCE THIS WEEK

Paris, Feb. 3—(By the A. P.)—Premier Poincare's efforts to steady the franc have completely upset the political situation in France. The measures the premier demands would adversely affect the fortunes of many members of the chamber of deputies in the approaching elections if they should vote for them.

The crisis will come early during the week, when discussion of the question of full powers will bring about a test vote as to the rejection of proposals without discussion because they are deemed unconstitutional. The question whether the government will hold its strength depends on whether M. Poincare's skill as a parliamentary tactician is stronger than that of the opposition offensive in the lobbies.

OBITUARY

Frederick L'Hommedieu

Deep River, Conn., Feb. 3—Frederick E. L'Hommedieu, 79, retired judge of probate here died today. Mr. L'Hommedieu was for many years the county clerk and held numerous town administration offices. In 1883 he went from here as a representative to the constitutional convention.

He is survived by a widow, two sons and one daughter.

WILLIMANTIC

Federal Prohibition Enforcement Chief William E. Congdon, Federal Officer Stanton L. Briggs, County Investigator William K. Jackson and Deputy Sheriff Charles Ayers put in about twelve hours of strenuous work Saturday in Moosup and Danielson, with the result that three liquor violators from each of these towns will be before the courts today (Monday) to answer to various charges for failure to abide by the Volstead act.

The officers left this city at an early hour Saturday morning and had not completed their work until late that night. The clean-up started in Moosup where the officers executed a warrant on Celina Lavallee. The woman's home was entered and a search revealed a quantity of good wine and liquor, some of which was found in her bedroom and the remainder in the cellar. She was placed under arrest and besides the charge of possession with intent to sell, the woman will also be booked on an additional charge of actual sale on a previous occasion.

The grocery store owned by John Gereswuski on Jacques street, Moosup, was next visited by the four officers. A glance back of one of the counters brought to view a fair quantity of moonshine of high percentage. Gereswuski was placed under arrest.

Walter Lepack's place in Union Village, a section of Moosup, was then given a search. The Lepack establishment has been a constant source from which to procure liquor for some time and Lepack was arrested on reputation. His mother, Mary Lepack, was notified to appear in the court to answer to a charge of actual sale, the evidence for which was secured on a previous occasion. Walter Lepack has been haled into court for violating the liquor law a number of times since the good old before-prohibition days and it is understood that he plans to throw the bulk of the guilt on his mother's shoulders, in order to avoid a jail sentence.

The trio from Moosup will appear in the Plainfield court in Central Village this (Monday) afternoon before Judge Torrey. Grand Juror Benjamin Briggs will prosecute.

Saturday evening the raiding quartet swept into Danielson and proceeded to check the flow of moonshine, as told in the Danielson news today.

William L. Jenkins, who has been promoted from assistant superintendent of the manufacturing department of the local mills of the American Thread company to that of superintendent of the manufacturing departments of Nos. 2 and 3 mills of the Merrick branch in Holyoke, Mass., was tendered a farewell party in Odd Fellows' hall here Saturday evening, by the overseers, assistant overseers and officials of the local manufacturing department.

The event opened with an excellent supper served by members of Violet Rebekah lodge to about seventy. The menu included sliced cold ham, baked beans, coffee, rolls, ice cream and pie. Fat Fivers of paper bags were at each plate and after these had been donned the merrymaking began in earnest. [illegible] were present from the finishing and weaving department and the [illegible] office.

During the supper the party [illegible] in the lodge rooms where [illegible] Moore, superintendent of the [illegible] weaving departments, [illegible] charge and called on several of those present for brief addresses. Besides the speechmaking the session was enlivened with quartets, solos and community singing. The instrumental music was by a four-piece orchestra from the Windham Serenade. Mrs. Pleasing solos were given by Albert Caufield and several selections were sung by the Manufacturing quartet, Albert Caufield, George Millbench, Wilfred Rushford and Frank Lee, assisted by A. W. French. Brief speeches were made by C. S. Pollard, assistant agent, Joseph Cotter, head of the carpenter shop, Thomas Wills, overseer of the No. 3 twisting department, Alonzo Hickey, assistant overseer of the No. 4 spooling department, A. W. French, of the main office, and Charles W. Hill, president of the American Thread athletic association.

General Superintendent P. J. Hinds presented Superintendent Jenkins a handsome traveling bag, fully equipped, and a fine automobile robe. Superintendent Jenkins acknowledged the handsome gifts with fitting words of gratitude. Toastmaster Moxon then called on William McGregor Clark, successor of Mr. Jenkins as assistant superintendent and Mr. Clark made a felicitous speech. The party before dispersing extended a unanimous vote of thanks to Timothy Connelly, overseer of the carding department, and Theodore Morrisette, overseer of the spooling department, the committee in charge of the affair.

Superintendent Jenkins left Sunday afternoon for Holyoke and will take up his new duties today (Monday). He plans to move his family to Massachusetts as soon as he is able to find a suitable home in Holyoke.

The name of the successor to John O'Rourke as postmaster of the Willimantic postoffice will probably be known within a few days. Last week E. P. Sharpe and C. A. Nolan of Boston, the former a postoffice inspector and the latter a U. S. Civil service official, were in this city to check up the applicants for the office. The name of the successful candidate will undoubtedly be sent to the United States senate for confirmation by President Coolidge within a few days. The candidates who were called to the postoffice last week and questioned by Messrs. Sharpe and Nolan were Walter R. King, Frank M. Smith, John B. Edgarton, William B. Congdon, Arthur E. Morrill, Lester H. Elish and George K. Allen. The inspector and civil service official were about town Saturday to interview business men in regard to the qualifications of the applicants.

Postmaster John O'Rourke's term of four years expires today (Feb. 4), according to the date of his commission. It will be necessary to grant Postmaster O'Rourke an extension of time until his successor is named and takes office.

Frederick H. Wahlberg of Hartford and Miss Marjorie Hall were united in marriage at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Louis Hall, 161 Chestnut street, Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead, pastor of the Methodist church. The wedding was without festivities due to the recent death in the family of Miss Hall and only near relatives and intimate friends were present. Mr. and Mrs. Wahlberg left on a honeymoon journey after which they will reside in Hartford where the groom is employed.

Miss Eva M. Gardner of Elm street, Rockville, niece of Mrs. George Williams of Willimantic and Francis L. Daly, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Daly of Rockville, were married at St. Bernard's church there Friday morning by Rev. George T. Sinnot, the pastor. Mrs. Edward Daly, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was matron of honor and Edward M. Edward, brother of the bridegroom, was best man.

At a recent meeting of the managing board of The Heights, the official weekly publication of Boston College, F. Maxwell Connelly '24, was advanced from sports editor to editor-in-chief of the paper, to succeed James F. Dooling '24. James F. Grady, '24, of Jamaica Plains, Mass., formerly alumni editor, is now sports editor. The new editor-in-chief of The Heights is the son of Thomas F. Connelly of No. 84 Oak street, a graduate of St. Joseph's parochial school, class of 1916, and Windham High school, class of 1920. He has received much valuable training in newspaper work from his father who has been a reporter for many years. The new editor's past work has been highly praised in The Heights.

After several hearings which were continued, the case of Fred Steward Long of Norwich, charged with non-support of his four-year-old child, was settled in the local police court Saturday morning. Mrs. Agnes Bocash, grandmother of the child, testified that the defendant had been paying toward the support of the child about the middle of November when the couple were divorced and the payments ceased. Mrs. Bocash said that the mother of the child was sickly and in her opinion was not excessive in asking that Long be made to pay $5 a week toward the support of the child.

Long then took the stand. He said that for a time previous to the granting of the divorce in Norwich there had been an arrangement for the payment of $5 a week. He had paid alimony to his former wife and had been informed that the divorce wiped out his obligations in the way of contributing toward the support of the child. The local court officials told him that the divorce did free him from further obligations to his wife, but that he would have to support his child. Long said that he had married again and was now out of work but as soon as he secured a position he would gladly pay a fair sum toward the welfare of his child. Long was ordered to pay $3 a week for the child and he was allowed to return to Norwich and secure a bondsman to put up $300 to cover six months' support of the child. The bond must be furnished by Tuesday.

Loren Maine, 88, died at his home in Bolton early Friday morning after a long illness. The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Rev. G. E. Davis of Quarryville officiated. Burial was in Quarryville cemetery. Mr. Maine was tender at the Bolton Notch crossing of the N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. tracks for about half a century. He was pensioned some years ago. Besides his wife he leaves a daughter, Mrs. May Howard, of Bolton.

Mrs. Amelia A. Bennett, 79, died suddenly at the home of her son, Frank T. Bennett of 61 Believe street, Friday afternoon. Mrs. Bennett was found dead in bed about 4 o'clock by her daughter-in-law. Medical Examiner Dr. Louis I. Mason pronounced death due to cerebral embolism brought on by chronic endocarditis. Mrs. Bennett had been suffering from heart trouble for several years but she had made no complaint in the last few days. She appeared to be feeling quite well until Friday noon when she refused to partake of her dinner. She went to bed and later in the afternoon her daughter-in-law was taking Mrs. Bennett's dinner to her room on an upper floor and she made the discovery. The deceased was born in Bozrahville, on March 16, 1844, a daughter of Alfred and Ruby Simmons Austin. She is survived by a son, Frank T. Bennett of this city, and three nieces. Funeral services for Mrs. Bennett were held at 2 o'clock Sunday from the funeral parlors of J. C. Lincoln at 63 Church street by Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. Burial was in Colchester cemetery.

At a meeting of the Geyer company, hardware specialty manufacturers, held last week, the following officers were elected: President and treasurer, Augustus E. Greene of Willimantic; vice president and superintendent, Edwin P. Hayes of The Ridges; secretary and assistant treasurer, F. E. Johnson of Hartford. Twenty hands are now employed by the firm, working fifty-five hours a week.

Dr. W. P. S. Keating, the local health officer, spoke on the necessity of educating the public to the use of the Schick test as a treatment for diphtheria and as a means of determining the immunity of the disease, at the January meeting of St. Joseph's Hospital Alumnae association, held last week at the Nurses' home. A schedule of rates and hours for service of graduate nurses was adopted during the business session.

John Smith, an employe of the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting company, saw a young lady having a lot of trouble trying to get her tin lizzie to buzz the other day and he offered his assistance. His offer was accepted with pleasure but the engine backfired as Mr. Smith was turning the crank, which flew back and fractured several small bones of his right wrist.

The Chronicle Printing company stockholders met last week and elected as directors: Helen B. (Bartlett) G. Bullard, Donald Bartlett, Herbert D. Pollard and Charles A. Gates. The directors organized by electing Helen B. Bullard, president; Herbert D. Pollard, treasurer; Charles A. Gates, secretary; G. Donald Bartlett, assistant secretary, and Harry N. Bullard, manager.

Dr. William D. MacCormack, whose license was recently revoked, was in this city Saturday aftrenoon. He states that he has decided to take an appeal from the verdict of the grand jury and has retained a local attorney to look after his interests. Dr. MacCormack is at present located in Danielson.

Dr. Samuel J. Turcotte, whose license was revoked a few days ago was out of town Saturday but it is generally understood that he will take an appeal. Physicians whose licenses were revoked have sixty days in which to file an appeal.

Fifteen hundred children gathered at the state armory on Pleasant street, Saturday afternoon to attend an indoor circus known as Al-Wallace's Children's Circus. Every child present was given a souvenir, to add to the delight of being entertained with magical stunts, ventriloquism and Punch and Judy acts.

J. S. Gaudette of No. 242 Main street, this city, an employe on the Air Line work train of the New Haven railroad sustained a broken leg last Thursday while unloading ties from a car near the Portland station. One of the ties fell from the car and struck Mr. Gaudette.

A young man from Rockville received a severe cut on the head Friday night while skating at Recreation Park. His identity is not made known as his friends rushed him away in an automobile immediately after the accident.

Plans are under way for the annual St. Patrick's day entertainment of the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Mrs. Ellen Lynch is chairman of the committee and will select her assistants.

Saturday, Candlemas Day, there is no doubt that if the groundhog came out he saw his shadow and returned to his burrow assured of six more weeks of wintry weather.

JEWETT CITY

Wood and Burdick, have been able to fill their new ice house on the Plainfield road with ice barely 7 inches thick. The Dorrville fields froze over during the "snay" a week ago, then, with the ice at six inches the moderate weather came again. Saturday in the borough was like a day late in May, and an examination of the prospective crop brought the information that freezing was over again, with the ice deteriorating. Shea Bros., are feeling a bit pessimistice about getting the 500 tons they need.

The local observant citizen says that fifty years ago was just such a winter. In substantiation of his statement he quotes the following clipping from the Fifty Years Ago, column in last Saturday's Bulletin.

The hopes of the ice man rose recently as cold weather came upon the city but alas warm weather has set in and their hopes are in vain—at least for the present.

Fifty years ago the late Ira F. Lewis was just getting his plans together for the erection of his first little house at Dorrville 30x30 which the next year he filled, hauling up each cake by means of an old white horse power, and a tackle and snatch block rigging, tied to the base of a post fastened in the ground. One encouraging fact remains. Records prove that the Dorrville ice houses were filled once by Palmer and Wilkinson during the first week in March.

There is a grand collection of hobbies in this town all being of more or less importance, each to its proud possessor. Among them here, and second to not many others, in the calendar collector. It is surprising to see the beautiful works of art that some enthusiastic collectors have begged and bought, in the calendar line, some of them are showing the last and finest, "As the Centuries Pass in the Night" is the title. George H. Prior, will have one to add to his other railroad calendar, in the anteroom of Mt. Vernon Lodge.

Old Cluey Watson is pleased to include in his list of friends, Mrs. F. H. Gilbert, Sunday she loaned Cluey a clipping from the Danielson column of The Bulletin, of September 22, 1923. Under the caption of Cloud-Digger Predicts Winter Will be a Hummer., there was published a list of wonderful prognostications, to which the old charcoal burner takes well substantiated exceptions. First off, the Packerville sage takes occasion to tell in no uncertain tone, of his remarkable skill as a weather forecaster.

To quote a few passages to which Old Cluey called particular attention—"The winter will strike in suddenly in December, there will be no "green Christmas", I look for 30 storms between the opening of winter and the spring season. Early in December the Aurora Borealis will add to the interest of the students of the heavens. After that there will be a period of very cold weather. Ice can be harvested in December or any time after that. From Jan. 8th to 11th there will be bad storms, these storms will like those of a year ago quickly follow each other." Besides all this many other other bad storms are provided for February and March. Now here is where Old Cluey comes in.

Early in December, in the Jewett City columns of The Bulletin, he took occasion to take exceptions from the Cloud-Digger's calamitious predictions, and said—It will be a mild and open winter, with little ice and less snow". He further declared that he didn't need any planet book, and that the exact ascention of Orion's belt or the Great Bear, meant little to him, but that to the discerning eye, the folks of the woods, acted out a story easy for him to read. Sunday he was asking his friends, "How about it?" The Cloud-Digger's winter has sure been a "hummer"—bees have hummed in the open air, toads have hopped in the gardens and flowers have been in bloor in the fields.

Local radio operators picked up Schenectady Sunday afternoon, and heard the funeral march by Chopin, broadcasted in connection with the news of Ex-President Wilson's death.

William Emerson, son of a former principal of the Riverside Grammar school, was in town Friday. e is located as an advertising agent in Boston.

Mrs. Henry Olson was operated on at Backus hospital, Sunday afternoon, having been stricken with acute appendicitis at one o'clock Sunday morning. Mrs. Olson is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Whiting, and is a substitute at the local telephone exchange, when she is unusually popular with the public.

Dr. C. H. Jennings was first called in the case and was in immediate consultation with Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve in Norwich. The ambulance came in response to a hurry call.

The whist and dance given Friday evening under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League in Rioux Hall was very successful. There were twenty-five tables of whist. The ladies' first prize went to Mrs. Charles Ray, the second to Mrs. Phoebe Roy, and the consolation award to Doris Burr. The gentlemen's first prize went to T. E. Shea, the second to John Jacobs, and the consolation to Edmund Dudkowski.

Dancing followed a large number coming in for the latter part of the evening. Mrs. Prentice Chase was the chairman of the entertainment committee, Bernard Kiblain piano of Jewett City and Wilfred Lamothe drum of Plainfield, played.

Ruthie Rebekah Lodge holds its installation Tuesday evening.

Candlemas Day was observed Saturday at St. Mary's church by special services and the blessing of the candles.

Three nine year old boys, one Italian and two Polish, concocted a plan to help themselves to the personal belongings of Oldershaw, the photographer. The old man is sick in bed, and boys fixed up a scheme that one should play an old square piano and the other dance while the third got into the photograph gallery and stole anything he could find. A number of photographs, paints, crayons and a rifle were carried away and hidden in a pile of stones in a lot in the vicinity. Deputy Sheriff Dolan was called by Mr. Oldershaw to investigate. It developed that the Italian boy has been in the habit of going through the pockets of "trunks" lying around in out of the way places. His last haul was five dollars, of which he gave another boy two. One dollar the boy spent and the other two took home to his mother. The matter will be placed in Prosecuting Attorney Dudkowski's hands as to further procedure. This is only one of several criminal performances staged by small children in the borough. Entering the creamery and stealing money and painting gravestones in the Baptist cemetery, stealing from a store in Ashland, etc. On account of their extreme youth, it is said to be impossible to punish them by law.

Mrs. J. B. LeClaire died at her home on Mechanic street Sunday evening, after being in ill health for some months. Her husband, the late John B. LeClaire, whom she survived several years, established the first bakery in the town nearly forty years ago.

Mrs. LeClaire, with the aid of her six sons, has been interested in its continuance up to the time of her death.

The LeClair family is one of the oldest of the leading French-Canadian families of Griswold, and the members have been prominent in town affairs.

There are six sons surviving, most of them in business in the town. They are Arthur, Eudore, Alpherie, Hector, Wilfred and John also one daughter, Albina, now Mrs. Louis Guillotte. There are two grnadchildren.

Mrs. LeClair, all her younger life, was a woman of more than ordinary business ability, and it is known that her aid was a valuable factor in making the business they established, the fine success it proved to be.

FREAKS OF NATURE

The grayling is a fish common in many chalk streams in England It rises well to theefly, and makes a dainty dish when cooked. The Latin name of this fish is Thymallus, which it gains from the fact that its faint but distinct odor of fresh thyme.

Another creature that has a peculiar and quite unexpected odor is the rattlesnake. The contributor was once in a swamp in one of the Southern States of America, when he noticed an oder exactly like that of fresh-cut cucumber. His companion notices it at the same moment, and stopped dead.

"Rattler!" he said, and sure enough, next moment the sharp whirr of a disturbed rattlesnake sounded close by.

The alligator smells of musk, while the odor arising from a nest of yellow wood-ants is see strong that it makes the eye water.

There is a tropical wasp that builds mud nests which, if crushed, smell like raspberry vinegar, and several other insects have equally pleasant odors.—Exchange.

THE UNIVERSAL CAR

Forecasting A Tremendous Spring Demand

739,626

more Ford cars and trucks were produced last year than the previous year, an increase of over 50 per cent.

In spite of this tremendous increase in production, it was impossible to meet delivery requirements during the spring and summer months when orders for 350,000 Ford Cars and Trucks could not be filled.

This year winter buying for immediate delivery has been more active than ever before—and in addition 200,000 orders have already been booked through the Ford Weekly Purchase Plan for spring delivery.

These facts clearly indicate that the demand during this spring and summer will be far greater than ever, and that orders should be placed immediately with Ford Dealers as a means of protection against delay in securing your Ford Car or Truck or Fordson Tractor.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Another series of engagements between purveyors of moonshine and officers of the law marked the passing of the week end in the towns of Killingly and Plainfield. The officers appear to have been victorious in each of the six raids they staged. In any event, they seized at every place raided what may be called hooch, moonshine, smoke, or any other name that may appear suitable. All the stuff taken has a kick like a bully horse.

Three raids were made in Moosup during Saturday afternoon. Deputy Sheriff Charles E. Ayer of this town, County Investigator W. E. Jackson of Willimantic and Prohibition Officers Congdon and Briggs, with Deputy Sheriff Tillinghast of Central Village made up the squad that swooped down on the Moosup places and came away with enough evidence to warrant the ordering into court of proprietors of the places raided.

This (Monday) afternoon at 2 o'clock Mrs. Celina Lavalle, of Moosup, John LePack of the same place and the proprietor of what is known as a Polish store, all will appear in a justice's court in the town of Plainfield to answer to the charges that have been filed against them as the result of the visitation of the squad of officers.

And this (Monday) morning in the town court of Killingly, Antonio Perry and Adelbert Hebert of Goodyear and John Valle of Danielson will be on hand to answer relative to having moonshine at the places where they reside, when the same squad of officers that made the Moosup raids, minus Sheriff Tillinghast, made another sortie Saturday evening.

At the Perry place, in Goodyear, the officers found some moonshine, as they also did at the Hebert place, where part of a still also was located and confiscated. Hebert, the more responsible of the pair, was ordered to appear in court this morning. Perry was locked up in default of bonds of $2,000, which he managed to procure during Sunday forenoon and, accordingly, was released, to appear when court is convened this morning.

The raid in Danielson touched a spot that has been under observation for some time by officers and a mecca for visitors in unseemly numbers for several months past. It was the first raid so close to the borough's business section in a long time and was underway while shoppers were crowding the stores with their late buying of the week. After the raid one of the participating officers described the place, which is on Academy street, near Mechanic street, as a rookery, where customers came blithely in while the officers were looking the place over. The officers seized some hooch and arrested John Valla, an old-timer, who was locked up at the police station during Sunday. Some young women were in this place at the time the officers made their unannounced visitation.

Saturday afternoon, at the home of her brother, Frederick Miller, in Brooklyn, funeral services for Miss Emily R. Miller, who died in a Providence hospital after contracting pneumonia while on a visit to friends in that city, were conducted by Rev. Leonard Richards, rector of St. Alban's church in Danielson and Trinity church at Brooklyn. Burial was in the South cemetery, Brooklyn. The bearers were Judge Oscar F. Atwood, B. Irving Frink, Sidney W. Bard and Frank D. Spalding. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

The death of Joseph Foster, 61, occurred Saturday, at the home of his sister, Mrs. Agnes Barrowclough, in Dayville, where he had been making his home for some time past. Mr. Foster was a native of England. He had been a resident of this country for years and a resident of Oxford, Mass., until his health began to fail some time ago.

Mr. Foster is survived by his wife, a daughter, Violet C., who is a resident of Washington, D. C., by two sisters, Mrs. Barrowclough of Dayville and Miss Mary Foster of North Oxford and by a brother, John W., of North Oxford.

Another death Saturday was that of Mrs. Carl Newcombe, 53, resident a mile south of the Line store in Foster. Mrs. Newcombe had been a resident in the section where she died for the past 17 years. She was born in Randallsville, Pa., and came from New York to Foster with her husband seventeen years ago. Mrs. Newcombe is survived by her husband.

Throw away your microscopes! The Southern New England Telephone company has issued, effective Sunday, the best directory the corporation has put out since the war. Old people, with failing sight, hurried people with good eyes but too busy to put them to unnecessary strain, complacent persons who like to read type like the billboard advertisers use, all will find comfort and consolation in utilizing the new directory.

The new books have grown a bit—like people do as they are developing. The pages are wider than in the old directories and carry, to the page, three columns of names instead of two. The type is larger and clearer and more easily read. The improvement is so outstanding that there exists the possibility that many subscribers will read the directories as avidly as they might current fiction, in sheer appreciation and enjoyment of the change. On behalf of the subscribers in the Danielson division this medium may be used this morning in extending congratulations to the company. The traffic engineer that designed the makeup of the new directories—if the company's traffic engineering department concerns itself with such detail—is entitled to a bouquet. And if he were in Canada, something more than that—not necessarily flowers!

The Windham County National bank has received from Addison J. Greenslit and his family, an excellent likeness of David Greenslit, for practically forty years a director of the bank, during part of which time he served the bank most efficiently as clerk of its board of directors, and took an active part in securing consent of the stockholders of the bank and the comptroller of the currency for the removal of the bank's office from Brooklyn to Danielson.

David Greenslit was an outstanding figure in Windham county for many years. In 1844 he was made Deputy sheriff of the county, and later, as there was a vacancy in the office of sheriff, he received an appointment by the legislature to that high office, and subsequently was elected for two successive terms. For ten years he served as president of the Windham County Mutual Fire Insurance company, and was for many years an adjustor of losses for that corporation.

The receipt of the portrait by the bank is highly prised, and adds another to the collection of portraits of prominent men who have served the bank at various periods in an official capacity during the one hundred

PUTNAM

As a result of the state police from the Danielson barracks being active in Putnam during the week, coupled with a little routine business in the police department, eleven cases were disposed of by Deputy Judge Macdonald, at a session of the city court, beginning at nine o'clock Saturday morning and lasting well up to the noon hour.

The state police were engaged during the week weighing trucks to find whether or not they were overloaded. They were stationed at the state scales at th corner of School and Mechanic streets and during the week weighed many vehicles.

Steven J. Clark, Jr., of Webster, driver for the Webster & Southbridge Gas & Electric Company, pleaded guilty to carrying an overload of 5490 pounds. A member of the company who was in court with the driver said that the load consisted of a generator being carried to Southbridge and he stated that he had no idea the generator weighed so much. A fine of $200 was recommended by the police and prosecutor, but after hearing the facts the court imposed a fine of $100 and costs of $12.44.

Moses J. Solomon of the Yantic Grain and Products Company, of Norwich, drew the heaviest fine of the session. When it was shown that the truck operated by the company was not only 4060 pounds overweight but that it weighed 25,000 in all, more than the maximum weight allowed to be carried in this state, and in addition to this one that one of the company's trucks had been found to be 5400 overweight in the town of Griswold, the court told Solomon that he did not think he deserved much consideration. A fine of $300 was imposed and paid.

Ivan Kempton of Putnam had a truck and a trailer loaded with lumber which the police found to be 2340 pounds overweight. Kempton said that he did not have an unusual amount of lumber on, but that it was wet and weighed more than he thought. He paid $50 and costs.

Milton Young of Putnam, driver for contractor John P. Sabin, drove a truck in the army and went to work for Mr. Sabin last June.

Mr. Automobile Driver—and not excepting the women who also sit back of the wheels of motor cars—have you sent in your application and fee for the renewal of your operator's license? If you have not, read this communication to Chief John McFarland of the borough police:

State of Connecticut
Department of Motor Vehicles
Saturday, February 4.

With less than four weeks remaining before the expiration of all 1921 licenses for motor vehicle operators, barely 2,000 of the 19294 licenses had been issued by the state motor vehicle department up to the close of business Friday. Over 210,000 operators' licenses must be issued between now and February 28 if all persons now authorized to operate motor vehicles upon the public highways of Connecticut are to have that right continued beyond the end of this month. To accomplish this, licenses would have to be issued at the rate of 11,000 a day or twenty-three a minute up to the time limit.

The main office at the capitol and the four branch offices, at Bridgeport, New Haven, Waterbury and New London, have been issuing drivers-licenses for two weeks, and a large force of clerks has been kept on hand at each office to expedite the work, but the applications have been so few that the clerks have had little to do in the way of giving out licenses. The department urges all who desire to operate motor vehicles in Connecticut after February 28, to make application for licenses without delay, in person or by mail, to avoid a repetition of the scenes a year ago when there were great lines of people who could not, without reason, expect to be served promptly.

Every day in every way the boys are learning that there is no nourishment in feeding chickens that lay eggs filled with hooch.

Prayers of the congregations were asked at the masses at St. James' church Sunday by Rev. Joseph Deschand, M. S., for Mrs. Mary Collins, who has been dangerously ill the past few days at her home on Main street.

One cannot help thinking how much more money there is to be made over saving trolley fare by walking from Dayville to Danielson by hiking a perfectly good road from Danielson to Providence, if one cares to "save" money that way. It's merely a matter of distance. Playing this game to the limit, one might save a million and yet never have anything.

As Former President Woodrow Wilson lay dying at Washington on Sunday, many Killingly citizens were rating him in their conversations as the greatest American since Abraham Lincoln—and there was nothing of politics in their estimates.

At St. James' church Sunday—the feast of St. Blase—priests of the parish blessed the throats of parishoners who crowded the altar rail after the high mass and following the close of the vesper service.

Miss Margaret Head, his aunt, and Mrs. Daniel F. O'Connell were at La-Salette college in Hartford Saturday for the service at which Francis Macdonald, candidate for the priesthood, received the cross and canture awarded six months after the beginning of their studies to all qualified students. Master Macdonald entered the college early last fall. He is a graduate of St. James' parochial school, Danielson, in the class of 1923.

After an illness that became critical a few days ago, Mrs. Mary Collins died late Sunday afternoon at her home on Main street. She is survived by two daughter, Misses Mary and Susie and a son, William, all of Danielson.

So good they called it their Master Loaf

BREAD that is made of the same sugar, shortening, milk, yeast and flour that you would use yourself. Bread that is firm and wholesome, well baked, yet will not dry out. That is made from a rich recipe, with a sweet, full flavor.

To make this perfected loaf six expert bakers in six New England cities came together and compared recipes, just as housewives do.

Each had been making bread famous in his own neighborhood. But all were interested in the same thing—new ways of making even better bread.

This is the loaf that has pleased the most particular New England housewife. It is firm and wholesome, not fluffed up. It is evenly baked, and moist so that it keeps fresh. Its crisp crust and soft white inside taste like home made.

Now for the first time White Rose, the Master Loaf of the Six Bakers, is being served in a small section outside of New England. Your grocer has it. Ask for it tomorrow—the loaf with the pleasant checked wrapper, like a fresh, clean tea towel.

WOODROW WILSON.

Once more this nation is plunged in mourning by the death of former President Woodrow Wilson, whose closing years had been seriously handicapped because of the physical impairments that he suffered as the result of his devotion to what he considered the necessary service to his country.

Because he was for a number of years professor at Wesleyan university, Connecticut was particularly interested in his career at Princeton and as governor of New Jersey before his election to the presidency. In every instance, however, he displayed a leadership that was brilliant and conspicuous. It was characteristic of him through his political career to work doggedly to a cause once it was championed. There were times when he won and there were times when he failed. In all instances, however, there was no questioning his sincerity.

No president was ever required to shoulder the same responsibilities as those involved when the United States declared war on Germany. Though an ardent advocate of and worker for peace the time came when this country could not stand by strict neutrality. We had delayed getting into the war but once the decision was made the end of the conflict was hastened. But it was not solely the conduct of the war but the efforts for peace and his method of preventing future wars that broke down the iron constitution of President Wilson. He had accomplished much as party leader until it came to participation in the peace conference at Paris and the unalterable stand in behalf of the league of nations. It was in response to what he considered his duty to inform the country regarding this question that he sacrificed his health and hastened his end. He was a very strong advocate of the personal appeal.

President Wilson was a scholar. Many of his writings will go down in history as worthy of preservation. Whatever position he took, and he took it because he believed it was right, he stubbornly defended. He was not actuated by the spirit of compromise, else the ratification of the league of nations with reservations might have been accomplished. He was a man of high ideals, but a hard loser. Those who strongly opposed him were regarded as enemies.

By his death this country has lost a great man. His part in the peace councils made him an international figure and his administration of the office of president places him in a conspicuous place among our chief executives. Without a question his was a life sacrificed for an ideal.

CHANGING COUNSEL.

When President Coolidge named Thomas W. Gregory, attorney general in the last democratic administration, as one of the attorneys to represent him in the oil leasing matters, there was no thought that he might have in any way been connected with any of the oil interests at any time in his career. Facts brought to light since his name was mentioned have disclosed that not only has he been employed as counsel for oil companies but he was representative of E. L. Doheny, the oil magnate, who told about loaning $100,000 to Secretary Fall when he was a cabinet member.

Inasmuch as it was not desired to have the present attorney general proceed with the oil leases, because of his association in the cabinet with former Secretary Fall, it is of course equally undesirable that Mr. Gregory as counsel employed by Mr. Doheny, should not be put in charge of such work. That doesn't necessarily mean that if he should attempt it he would not render impartial service to the president, but it would throw his work open to suspicion from the very start. That is not what is wanted and the president has taken the proper course, upon finding out the situation, in deciding not to retain him.

It is of course highly desirable that all connected with the government's inquiry and prosecution should be clear of all connection with those involved. This is undoubtedly assured by the replacement of former Attorney General Gregory with former Senator Atlee Pomerene, a prominent democrat from Ohio. Inasmuch as such a change was desirable it is fortunate that the situation was disclosed before any further progress was made in the matter.

MOSCOW RECOGNITION BY THE BRITISH.

Not very much time seems to have been devoted to the investigation of soviet Russia, which Premier Macdonald of Great Britain was quoted as promising, before recognition was extended. Possibly it was found that there was sufficient information at hand upon which to warrant recognition in view of the fact that he was committed to such action in advance, while on the other hand it is believed that the British have been moved by a desire to better home conditions more than anxiety to promote the soviet cause.

The action by the British comes at this time, not because of the belief that the death of Lenine offers more favorable prospects at Moscow, but because of the change in the British government. What the influence of this move will be upon other countries can be anticipated to a degree in view of the fact that several and already been figuring on such a step before Lenine's death.

In the extension of recognition no understanding has been reached concerning the matter of claims. These are to be adjusted as the result of a conference at London through the usual diplomatic channels. The hope in Great Britain is that the opening up of the Russian trade possibilities will put an end to its unemployment situation. That was hoped when trade relations were resumed some time since but unemployment developed in spite of it.

Just what interpretation Moscow will place upon Premier Macdonald's action remains to be seen. It is possible that the soviet government will see its chance to place itself more favorably in the eyes of the world, to proceed with reform and to eliminate the reasons for not extending recognition. On the other hand it may regard the situation from the viewpoint that inasmuch as the British have extended recognition without further reforms there is no need for doing anything of the kind and there may be a stiffening of soviet principles instead of a relaxation. It is a matter which many of the nations of the world are interested in, and a situation they will watch closely.

PATENT OFFICE EFFICIENCY.

From time to time attention has been directed to the condition in the patent office in an effort to overcome the delays that are experienced in carrying on the work of that branch of the government service. Even though this is a service that shows a profit to the government it has suffered seriously from a lack of a sufficient force and the lack of experienced examiners.

Methods have been changed so that according to Secretary Work there has been a gain on the accumulated cases of 1,000 a month during the past year, but in spite of the improved conditions it is clear that there is ground for more when it is shown that there are 67,000 patent applications untouched, to say nothing of the trade mark and design cases.

While efforts have been made to increase the efficiency of the patent office force, business of that office has increased, making it all the more difficult to keep up with the demands. This is a government department to which many private corporations look for experienced men, and they get them because they are able to offer much more than the government pays. More examiners and better pay therefore seem to be the means by which the congested patent office can be relieved. It may not be possible for the government to actually compete with private business in the matter of wages but there would be the assurance that fewer employes would be drawn away into other fields. It is the experienced examiner that is of much valuation to the government both as to the character and volume of work turned out, and inasmuch as it is a profit making office stress may well be placed upon more promptly meeting the requirements of the seekers of patents.

ANOTHER GIVE AND TAKE PLAN.

No expectation existed that Canada would undertake to aid this country in the actual enforcement of its dry law. It was hoped as the result of the conference held in Canada during the latter part of last year that a better understanding might be reached whereby it would be possible for this country to more effectively enforce its own law, and such an understanding seems to have been brought about.

What Canada is ready to do is in keeping with what Great Britain has already done relative to the search of vessels for liquor within the limit of an hour's steaming from shore. That was not obligatory upon the part of the British. It was a recognition of the handicap under which this country was laboring and it was a chance for the British to gain something for their steamships.

Much liquor has been sent from Canada to this country against the law. Canada doesn't say that it will put a stop to such exports, but it is willing to inform American enforcement agents of liquor which is being taken from Canadian ports. That means that liquor that is unlawfully taken out of Canada, in violation of that country's laws may continue to come to this country, but that in cases where the law is complied with in Canada the officials of this country will have a chance to interrupt the traffic.

This is a give-and-take arrangement, like the twelve-mile treaty, for Canada wants the right to carry sealed liquor across Alaska to the Yukon in exchange for the information. Inasmuch as it wouldn't make Alaska wet there is no good reason for not making the agreement.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

A little steam in the stove polish will give a lasting shine.

Don't throw away sour milk. Use it for sweet, light bread, tea cakes, pastry and griddle cakes.

Don't open the oven door while pastry is baking until it has been in at least seven minutes.

Serve lemon candy drops in tea for a change instead of lemon and sugar. Add a clove or so, too.

Have plenty of shelves in your kitchen, within the reach of your sink and work table. They will lighten your work immeasurably.

Add a few finely chopped nut meats and mayonnaise dressing to egg yolks and you will have something different from the regulation stuffed egg.

When cooking over a gas stove be careful that food does not boil over and stop up the holes of the burners. If this does happen the burner should be taken off and cleaned by boiling in a washing soda solution.

To remove laundry marks from household linens place linen on clean blotting paper and wet the marks with carbolic acid (poison). Repeat if necessary, then rinse linen in clear water.

Lemon juice applied to brown or tan shoes will remove stains. Rub well into leather and apply brown polish. The stain will quickly disappear.

To prevent the clamps of the food chopper from working loose place a piece of sandpaper, rough side up, around both clamps and screw the food chopper up tight.

If you wish to economize space in your refrigerator keep your food in glass jars, ranging in size from the two-quart Mason variety to the small jelly tumbler. Plates and flat bowls take up a great deal of space.

DON'T LITTER KITCHEN

Don't litter up the kitchen when getting a meal, because it will take hours to "clean up" after the meal is over. Don't put the greasy spoon on the table; it leaves a stain which requires time to erase. Put it in a saucer. Don't crumple up your dish towels. Rinse and hang them in sun. Don't pour boiling water over china packed in a pan. It will crack by the sudden contraction and expansion. Don't black a stove while it is hot. It takes more blacking and less polish.

USES OF SOUR MILK

Never throw away sour milk. Keep it covered with a piece of muslin until required and use for making scones. This will make them beautifully light. Or another way is to strain the sour milk (it must have thick curds) through a piece of muslin and allow it to drip for twenty-four hours. Place it in a basin, add a pinch of salt, form into a pat and you have a delicious cream cheese.

RUB WITH VINEGAR

If a stove has become rusty or if the blacking has burned off, try rubbing the surface with cloth dipped in vinegar and applying the blacking immediately. It will take a better polish, which will last much longer than if the vinegar were not used.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Any excessive nail growth should first be thoroughly softened by soaking in hot water in which a little sodium bicarbonate or borax has been dissolved and then carefully cut or file away.

When you do not succeed with dreams on your skin it is probably due to a sluggish condition. This accounts for the intense dryness and the inability for the pores to absorb the cream. Your skin needs stimulating treatments, the kind that will bring the blood to the surface, such as that from the vibrator. Alternate hot and cold water would help also.

For developing the arms stand with the arms straight out in front of you and the fists clenched, draw back the hands to the shoulders, tightening the muscles and resisting yourself as much as possible. This is splendid for the arms. Repeat it 20 times. Do it again, holding the arms out at each side and drawing them back to the shoulders. Do this 20 times.

Ugly elbows are generally thin and pointed and always are covered with dry harsh skin. Scrubbing is only preliminary treatment, for in itself it dries the skin still further so that it will pick up even more dirt form the atmosphere and dye from a dark dress. But scrubbing is a most necessary preliminary. The elbows should be treated vigorously with a good soap, hot water, and a moderately stiff bristled nail or hand brush. This cleans the skin and stimulates it and opens the pores ready to receive the nourishing oil.

FOR POWDER AND PUFF

A large square box of blue silk and gold lace holds a glass powder box and puff, and set in the inside of the lid is a round mirror. The effect is very charming and as the powder box is of generous proportions the danger of upsetting the loose powder over the dressing table is greatly minimized.

ROSE VANITY BAG

A vanity bag that is shaped like a large rose has a round mirror in the bottom and plenty of room inside for all the powder boxes, lipsticks, etc., necessary to an evening's pleasure. The bags are made of silk in a number of different colors.

SMART RIBBON TOUCHES

Corn-colored voile makes a charming slip-on dress, embroidered in sky blue silk barrel knots and caught under the sleeves—which are no more than banded slits for the arms—with bows of blue ribbon.

Smart evening wraps of white rabbit have a line of narrow silver metal ribbon dividing the long strips of the fur.

CROCHETED COSTUME.

Sports costumes for the girl who likes cold weather are examples of crocheting at its greatest splendour. Bright reds, blues and greens, these crocheted costumes have a satisfactory warm and heavy look, without even hinting at unwieldiness.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Detachable fur collars come with many gowns of silk and crepe. Usually they are of caracul or ermine.

Poplin is a favorite material for dresses and three-piece suits. Usually there is a lining of bright color, or some relief in the way of embroidery or braiding.

Some of the winter brides have returned to the Russian head-dress. This season, however, it is a cabinet of flowers rather than of jewels.

Well-cut beaded dresses are a good choice for the traveler as they may be packed in small space and require no pressing.

Smart frocks on the tube model frequently have jackets of another cloth lined with the same material as the coat.

Handkerchiefs are monogrammed now in the center as frequently as in the corner, and with drop initials rather than an even monogram.

Three very full flounces about nine inches in width form the lower part of a straight-line frock of black satin.

A very attractive evening cape is of white crepe embroidered with silver, and has a rolling collar of ermine.

A popular dinner frock is of colored crepe de chine with cascades of the material from the shoulders or hips, or with overlapping panels.

VOGUE IN APRON TUNIC

Printed silks and cottons are extensively employed in the fashioning of the smartest frocks and their keynotes is that of delightful simplicity. The apron tunic is an integral part of several of the prettiest dresses. Sometimes it is attached to a belt that fastens to the frock itself, but frequently the apron is joined to the waist so that with a change of foundation skirt one may vary the appearance of one's costume.

A pretty fashion is to have an apron tunic made of embroidered net and real filet or Irish lace. This completes a simple frock of chiffon or crepe de chine in pastel colors. The effect is charming.

DANCE FROCK SASH.

A Dresden taffeta dance frock in changeable lavender with rose-purple flowers has an unusual and interesting hip sash combination of Terracua brown velvet and rose taffeta ribbon. The rose ribbon is gathered in long tabs to the plain velvet streamers, and the ends are cut round.

NEW BOUDOIR CAP

The old boudoir cap is replaced by a strip of lace and net ruffles tied in with soft ribbons at the back of the head. Little satin flowers finish these easily adjusted and immensely becoming trifles.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Raise the pile of velvet by stretching the fabric over a wet cloth laid on the face of a very hot iron, and brush it hard while the steam rises.

Laces that are slightly soiled may be cleaned by burying them for a week or so in a mixture of corn-starch and calcined magnesia.

When washing blankets or flannels, add two teaspoonfuls of glycerine to each pint of water. This softens the water and prevents the blankets from becoming hard and felted.

In cleaning real lace, spread it out on a sheet of white paper. Cover with fine calcined magnesia, place another paper over it and press between two pages of a bulky book for a day or two. The powder may then be shaken off and the lace will be found quite clean.

When your sweater gets a windy day, then put in a pillowcase or a twine bag and hang out to dry. Shake it often until dry. All knit or crocheted articles should be dried in this way if you want them to keep their shape. Some dry sweaters on a coat hanger, but the bag is better for knitted things.

ONE-ROOM APARTMENT

The average inexpensively furnished room needs attention first to the windows and the cue for the other decorations is then taken from the curtains. If by good fortune there is plenty of light there can be beautiful draperies in addition to the glass curtains. Rose or gobelin blue hangings make a pleasing and tasteful window and fabrics washable drapery does not need to cost much. The drapery falls just below the window sill and an attractive style is finished with plain hems, is bordered at the bottom with three strips of pinked taffe ribbon to match, two inches, one and one-half and one inch in width respectively. The straight valance is bordered with the two-inch ribbon, which is also used for the sash tie-backs. If the windows are scarce in sunlight it is better to forego the draperies and use only a cream voile curtain, but a graceful valance, bordered with three rows of narrow ribbon and hanging a few inches at each side in a pointed gathered fold, is a pretty and effective touch of color.

MUFFIN PANS

The secret of success in making baking powder biscuit lies in having a soft mixture lightly together. Too much flour and over much handling make the kind that have made the new bride's first cooking attempts the butt of the jokester.

The muffin pan solves the problem. It is no longer necessary to punish over the indefinite rule—"add enough flour to make a soft dough and roll out, etc." The bride of today simply stirs up her biscuits from perfectly definite proportions and with her sifting spoon drops the mixture into greased pans, brushes the tops of her biscuits lightly with milk and has a result that is likely to be superior to that which "mother used to make."

Muffin pans are useful too, for molding gelatin salads, individual meat dishes and desserts, as well as for shaping the baking of clover leaf or shamrock rolls and for the charming little cakes that make a reputation for hospitality at afternoon tea.

PILLOWS OF FELT

Something new in the way of a pillow is one made of pale blue felt that is perforated. The pillow is lined with brilliant orange which shows through the perforated design. An orange cord outlines the cushion.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Sweden was one of the first nations in the world to allow women in its national law-making body.

Statistics show that 90 percent of the money spent for household maintenance in this country is spent by women.

In England there is a society conducted by women for the promoting of long service among servants. Valuable prizes are given.

By shucking 97 bushels of corn in one day, Miss Julia Chesire of Assumption, Ill., claims the championship of that state.

Mlle. Fanny Heldy, popular French dramatic star, not only owns a stable of thoroughbred race horses, but is a licensed jockey as well.

Miss Gertrude Miller, who on Jan. 1 will become Ohio's first woman constable, has already announced that she will be "death" to bootleggers.

Away Goes Eczema PETERSON'S OINTMENT

"One day a druggist told me," says Peterson, "that Peterson's Ointment was the best remedy he sold for eczema. But you'll never make any money on it," he added, "because it heals so quickly that only a little ointment is used." All druggists, 35c.

CLEANS THE WOOD

Before applying polish to a chair or table the furniture should be well wiped over with a cloth wrung out of lukewarm water to which a little vinegar has been added. This cleans the wood and a clean surface will take a much more brilliant polish than a dirty one.

FOR JAPANESE TRAYS

Stains on japanned ware can often be removed by means of a little salad oil rubbed over the surface with a piece of flannel. Trays of this description should never be washed with hot water, as the heat tends in time to cause the japanning to crack. They should, however, always be washed, when necessary, in lukewarm soapsuds and dried carefully with a soft cloth and then polished.

RECIPES

Pineapple cake with cream. Melt two tablespoons of butter in a cast-iron skillet, add one cup of brown sugar and cook until the sugar is melted, but not caramelized. Drain a can of small sliced pineapple from the syrup in the can and arrange them over the following sponge cake mixture. Bake in a moderate oven until sponge cake is done, (About twenty-five minutes.) Remove from oven and carefully invert on a large chop platter, when cold, pipe whipped cream, sweetened and flavored with vanilla, over the top, using a pastry bag and rose tube. To serve, cut pie-fashion in wedge-shaped pieces. The skillet should measure 10 1-2 inches in diameter or a No. 8 size.

Sponge Cake Mixture. Beat the yolks of three eggs until thick and light, gradually add one cup of granulated sugar, beating constantly. Sift together one cup of pastry flour and one teaspoon of baking powder, add alternately to the first mixture with one-third cup of cold water; then fold in the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs. Use as directed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Church and State

Mr. Editor: This writer, if you will permit, would like to give in your columns expression to some thoughts on the above topic, which he assumes many of your readers will read and gladly endorse.

"As if the church had not enough trouble already, Bishop Charles H. Brent and a considerable number of persons who supported an address which he made before the tenth synod of the province of New York and New Jersey, in session at Atlantic City, are apparently determined that it shall have more. Bishop Brent in his address favored church participation in politics. Here are some words from the speech he made: 'The large majority of church members and leaders favor influencing legislatures to obtain necessary laws. No methods have been formally approved, but the purpose is clear. Church and state are working toward a common goal and to my mind, cannot be separated.'"

This writer is proud to say that he is well embraced within the majority, supposed by Bishop Brent to be aching for the reunion of church and state. That emancipation was obtained at great cost and has been hailed as the charter of the church's freedom of thought, spiritual enlightenment and source of progress. But like the creed itself, is now reckoned as a thing of small importance. As far as participation in politics is concerned the man must be near-sighted who cannot see that the church today has more excrescent activities than it can properly attend to, besides its legitimate work. If the church has any excuse to exist in the world at all, it inheres in its Divine Commission, which is "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel" And it is the duty of those who profess to have accepted this commission, to interpret their commission, namely, to discover first, what is "Gospel" and then go to work proclaiming it. Isn't that true? It seems as if this is what the world is hungering for. Yes, it was to the world and not just to ourselves the gospel was to be preached. Now, the world can attend to politics and will without any prompting from the church.

In fact, on what great issue—political or moral— is the church a unit, or ever has been? The church was not a unit on the old-time question of slavery. It never was a unit on the liquor question and is not a unit on prohibition, nor on the tobacco question now. It is not a unit on the league of nations, nor any league proposed to do away with war. What great political enterprize is it ready now to champion as a body politic? Echo gives back only the question.

Some selection of the ills of individuals, families, communities and nations will come—and only come when the gospel is preached, and gets a fair chance at human hearts and consciences; and it is vain to look for relief in any other direction. Give it to us, ye who are ordained to promulgate it, and mark the result.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Few appointments to Britain's first Labor Cabinet caused more surprise than the selection of Lord Chelmsford, who takes the post of First Lord of the Admiralty. No doubt exists as to the ability of his lordship to fill the position, but the appointment nevertheless was a surprising one, for he comes from that house of Conservatism, Oxford University. Lord Chelmsford is the head of a famous family, of whom was the distinguished member perhaps was the Lord Chancellor of former days. He has been Viceroy of India and Governor General of Queensland and New South Wales. He succeeded to the baronetcy just before his appointment to the Queensland post and is the third Baron. In all of the positions he has filled he has distinguished himself by his tact and judgment, and also by his energy and ability. In his college days he was noted for his prowess at sports, being captain of the Oxford cricket eleven.

CREWS OF WRECKED TRAINS HELD BY THE CORONER

Anderson, Ind., Feb. 3—Crews of both trains and the dispatcher were ordered held, by Coroner Jesse Heibert, who began an investigation today into the wreck of two Indiana Union Traction trains near the village of Alphonsis yesterday which took a toll of 12 dead and 45 injured. The Interstate Commerce Commission also is conducting an investigation of the accident.

Arthur W. Brady, president of the Union Traction company in a statement issued today regarding the wreck said the crew of the east-bound train apparently ran past the point where it usually meets the other train near Portville. He asserted however, a more detailed investigation will be made before final responsibility for the accident is determined.

HUMAN CHAIN FORMED TO RESCUE THREE MEN

Croton Falls, N. Y., Feb. 3—A human chain of men and women lying prone on the ice of Lake Mahopac, near here, today rescued three men from a sedan which had crashed through the ice and rested with its top a few feet from the surface.

Two skaters, Jesse A. Collyer, of Dunning, and Robert Marsh, of Lake Mahopac, plunged into the water, broke into the sedan, and pushed its occupants up to the first link of the chain. The three rescued men, Herbert L. Brown, Milton Engesen and Frank Johnson, all of Croton Falls, were said by physicians tonight to be recovering from their mishap, although they had been imprisoned in the car under water nearly fifteen minutes.

Herbert L. McNeely of 508 Boswell avenue this city and Miss Grace Esther Bolton of Cabot, Vermont, were united in marriage Saturday evening at the Methodist parsonage in New London by Rev. Myron E. Genter. The couple was attended by Miss Susan McNeely, sister of the groom, as bridesmaid and Eugene L. Buckley of McKinley avenue, Norwich, was best man.

The bride was a former schoolmate of the groom and was graduated from Goddard Seminary, Barre, Vt., class of 1922. Mr. McNeely was graduated from Goddard in the class of 1923.

JUDGE WALLER DENIES MOTIONS TO SET ASIDE

Judge Charles B. Waller has handed down decisions denying motions to set aside verdicts in three suits which were tried before a jury in the court of common pleas several weeks ago. Motions in all the cases were made by the defendants.

One is the case of Peter Lomacano, real estate agent, of New London against Angelina Tudisco, also of that city, in which a jury rendered a verdict for $600 in favor of the plaintiff for false arrest in connection with the sale of real estate.

Another is the case of the Humphrey-Cornell Co., New London wholesale grocers against Gustave Haulisch and his wife, Katherine Haulisch in which a verdict of $401.26 for groceries was rendered against both defendants. The motion was made by Mrs. Haulisch on the ground that she was not a partner in the grocery store conducted by her husband.

The third is the case of John W. Nolan of Norwich, who was given a verdict of $450 to recover damages from the Norwich Motor Car Co., resulting from an automobile collision on the road between Jewett City and Norwich in which Nolan was injured.

Feast of St. Blase

Commemorating Sunday the feast of St. Blase, bishop and martyr, a doctor who had rare skill in curing throat disease, the throats of the people were blessed, following vespers and benediction at St. Patrick's church, Sunday afternoon.

Patients Resting Comfortably.

Mrs. Elizabeth Olson and Miss Anna Peterson of Jewett City, both appendicitis patients at the Backus hospital, were reported as resting comfortably at an early hour this (Monday) morning.

BOSTON PASTOR PREACHES IN OPENING EVANGELISTIC EFFORT

Nine churches of Norwich—Baptist, Methodist and Congregational—united in a union service Sunday evening at the Central Baptist church when an interesting sermon on The Changeless Christ was given by Rev. Earl Kernahan, D. D., of Boston. The union service marked the opening of a two weeks' campaign to increase the active membership of the respective churches through what is known as visitation evangelism. A good sized congregation attended the service which was opened at 7.30 o'clock. Rev. David A. Pitt, D. D., pastor of the Central Baptist church, leading. The scriptural reading was given by Rev. Dr. Pitt and prayer was led by Rev. E. C. Darbar, pastor of the First Baptist church. Dr. Kernahan was introduced by Rev. J. Harlow Graham, pastor of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church.

After speaking of his long acquaintanceship with Dr. Kernahan, Rev. Mr. Graham said: We are embarking on a kind of evangelism, different from the old kind of evangelism, different in many ways. The method is for the members of the various churches to go out in groups of two and call on individuals and present to them the challenge of the Christian life.

Dr. Kernahan announced that he had chosen for his topic, The Changeless Christ. There are changes everywhere, he said. Scientific theories change, forms of government change, theology has changed and we are changing ourselves. Some of the things we loved we hate and some of the things we hated we love. Even the old home changes. In this chaos of changes the human instinct is to reach up and get hold of something that doesn't change.

We do not need to prove that Jesus is changeless. Here is where we fail. When we are asked who is Jesus, what is Jesus, we turn our backs and walk away. Just because we find words inadequate to define Jesus we turn our backs and walk away. What is beauty? What is poetry? What is a home? What do you do with these things you can't adequately define. Do you shut yourselves up from them? Do you fail to talk about them?

If we find we can't define Jesus adequately should we cease to talk about Him? No. Let's talk about Him and tell others about Him. Jesus is the incarnation of the will, the incarnaiton of the love and the incarnation of the purpose of God. Look at Jesus; walk like Him; follow Him.

Jesus does not change in His teachings. Learn some of the things about Him and you have them forever. A lost man is a man who is not of any more use. He is not passing on the gifts God gave him. What was Jesus' attitude toward the sinner? That of a Saviour. Folks do not need to be judged. They need to be redeemed. Jesus is the same today in His attitude towards sinners as He used to be. Finally, Jesus is the same in His attitude towards children. What was His attitude towards children? 'God bless the little children and forbid them not to come unto Me." Oh, that we could get that attitude.

With reference to the two weeks' membership campaign Dr. Kernahan said: This method of evangelism we are talking about is Jesus' method. It is the practical common sense method. We sell our goods by making actual contacts. When we talk about Jesus let's follow the same method. This plan is not experimental. I have had an average of 137 new memberships a week since I began this work and most of this work has been done in small churches. We go out two by two and we talk with the individuals and urge them to come into the church.

The service was brought to a close with benediction pronounced by Rev. Gurden F. Bailey, pastor of the First Congregational church, Norwich Town. The churches uniting in the movement are: Central Baptist church, United Congregational church, Trinity M. E. church, First Baptist church, First Congregational church, Bean Hill Methodist church, McKinley Avenue A. M. E. Zion church, Grace Memorial Baptist church and Mt. Calvary Baptist church.

Dr. Kernahan has just returned to the east from Iowa where he spent eight weeks in evangelistic work and after leaving Norwich goes to Omaha City where he will conduct a city-wide campaign.

Sunday morning he spoke at the First Baptist church, at noon he addressed the City Bible Class for Men and the Sunday school at the Central Baptist church, at 3.30 o'clock he addressed a union rally at the Norwich Town church, and at 6.30 o'clock he spoke before the union young people's meeting at the Central Baptist church, completing a busy day with his sermon at the Sunday evening service.

MOTOR DRIVERS NEED TO RENEW THEIR LICENSES

With less than four weeks remaining before the expiration of all 1923 licenses for motor vehicle operators, barely 2,000 of the 1924 licenses had been issued by the state motor vehicle department up to the close of business Friday. Over 210,000 operators' licenses must be issued between now and February 29 if all persons now authorized to operate motor vehicles upon the public highways of Connecticut are to have that right continued beyond the end of this month. To accomplish this, licenses would have to be issued at the rate of 11,000 a day or twenty-three a minute up to the time limit.

The main office at the Capitol and the four branch offices, at Bridgeport, New Haven, Waterbury and New London have been issuing drivers' licenses for two weeks, and a large force of clerks has been kept on hand at each office to expedite the work, but the applications have been so few that the clerks have had little to do in the way of giving out licenses. The department urges all who desire to operate motor vehicles in Connecticut after February 29, to make application for their licenses without delay, in person or by mail, to avoid a repetition of the scenes a year ago when there were great lines of people who could not, with reason expect to be served promptly.

EXPECT FIFTY CONTESTANTS FOR CHURCH ESSAY PRIZE

Announcement was made at the Sunday morning service at the Central Baptist church that a donor whose name is withheld has offered a cash prize of $100 to the member of the church who submits before June 1st the best essay on The Programme the Central Baptist Church Should Follow for the Next Fifteen Years. One half of the cash prize, $50, will be immediately awarded upon the decision of the judges, and the remaining $50 will be awarded when the essay is accepted by the church membership. The donor expects about fifty contestants at least.

By the terms of the contest the pastor, chairman of the board of deacons and chairman of the board of managers are authorized to name the judges who will pass on the essays. The close of the fifteen year period will usher in the centennial year of the Central Baptist church.

WELFARE SPEAKER FOR POSTAL MEN'S MEETING

All the employes of the Norwich post office, with sub-station clerks and rural free delivery carriers will attend a meeting this (Monday) evening in Odd Fellows' hall when they will be addressed by Chester Rousch who comes from the department at Washington, where he is connected with the welfare council.

Mr. Rousch will first meet the Norwich welfare council at 7.30 at the post office and from there adjournment will be taken to the hall for the other meeting.

HAD FAMOUS SWIMMER AS DINNER GUEST

Henry F. Sullivan, the noted swimmer of the English channel, who has been appearing at a Norwich theatre, was the dinner guest Saturday of Mr. and Mrs. William R. Means at their home, 112 West Thames street. Mr. Means, who is a Lowell man, was formerly associated in business with Mr. Sullivan in Lowell.

I. O. B. A. LODGE AGAINST JOHNSON IMMIGRATION BILL

At a meeting with an attendance of 800 Sunday afternoon in Roseland hall Market street, the officers of Independent Norwich lodge, No. 309 I. O. B. A., were installed by the sixth deputy grand master Harry L. Gipstein, assisted by District Deputy Grand Master Nathan Fox and Benjamin Roth, all of Hartford, Mrs. Gipstein and Mrs. Roth attended the meeting.

The following officers were installed: President, Joseph Resnick; vice president, A. R. Alexander; secretary, H. B. Cohen; treasurer, S. Rosano; board of trustees, Myer Blumenthal, Israel Hankin and E. Moyell.

Prayers were offered by Cantor S. Jacobson for the health and long life of President Calvin Coolidge and mourners prayers for former President Woodrow Wilson, whose death occurred Sunday. Memorial services were conducted for deceased members of Norwich lodge.

A resolution was adopted opposing the Johnson immigration bill and it was voted to forward this action of the lodge to Senator Brandegee, Congressman Freeman and Judge MacQueen of Hartford, asking them to oppose the Johnson bill.

Arrangements for the meeting were in charge of a committee of which Myer Blumenthal was chairman.

SPECIAL MUSICAL SERVICE BY CHRIST CHURCH CHOIR

A good sized congregation at Christ Episcopal church Sunday evening heard with much appreciation the excellent work of the male choir of 25 members in their last musical service under the direction of Ernest M. Ibbotson, who is soon to leave for Detroit, where he will be the organist and choir director at the church of the Messiah. The service was preceded by a short organ and cello recital in which Eben Learned was the assisting cellist.

Mr. Ibbotson came to Christ church four years ago on Feb. 4 and has maintained the music of the men's choir at a high standard during his service with the church. He is to begin his service with the church in Detroit on Feb. 10 but will spend a short time at his home in Meriden before going there.

WILL SECURE DIVORCE IN RENO IS REPORT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 3.—It became known in society circles in New London and Norwich last week that Mrs. Donald Chappell of this city has gone to Reno, Nevada, for the purpose of securing a divorce from her husband, a prominent man in New London business circles, and a member of the A. H. & F. A. Chappell company.

Mrs. Chappell, a former Norwich resident, whose maiden name was Lydia Balloo Almy, is the daughter of the late Dr. Leonard B. and Carrie Webb Almy, and before her marriage was prominent in society in Norwich. At the death of her father, she and her sister, Mrs. W. Ellery Allyn of Goshen, Waterford, came into a fortune estimated to be about $500,000.

WIFE ACCUSES HUSBAND OF DIAMOND RING THEFT

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 3.—Henry Tetrault of Montauk avenue, a carpenter, was arrested by the Norwich police this evening upon complaint of his wife, who charged him with the of a diamond ring worth about $300 Tetrault was brought to New London about midnight by Sergeant Charles Hammond and locked up. He will be given a hearing in the police court tomorrow.

The alleged theft of the ring occurred several weeks ago and yesterday Mrs. Tetrault complained to Prosecuting Attorney Daniel M. Crean. Tetrault's father resides at 881 Central avenue, Norwich, and a warrant for the arrest of the accused was sent to the Norwich authorities with the information as to where Tetrault might be found.

Mr. and Mrs. Archibald W. Turner of 321 Prospect street entertained Miss Loretta Higgins, her mother, Mrs. M. C. Higgins, Dr. T. A. Crowley of Norwich, Carl Brunner of New York and a few local friends at luncheon after the Rotary club concert Friday evening. Miss Higgins expressed herself as delighted with her reception last evening.—Willimantic Chronicle.

2,000 DEATHS FROM AUTOS IN 15 YEARS

Enough deaths to wipe out the entire population of several Connecticut towns have resulted from motor vehicle accidents in this state in the past sixteen years, according to statistics made public by the state motor vehicle department. Children enough to exceed the combined population of at least two of these towns were among those killed.

The figures show that 2,206 deaths were caused by motor vehicles in Connecticut since 1907, of which number over 600 were children under 16 years old. This includes 269 fatalities in 1923.

About 75 per cent. of the persons thus killed in the past sixteen years were males, the female victims being in a decided minority. In proportion to the number of motor vehicles registered to be operated on the state highways, the record of all other states is worse. Connecticut's success in holding down the number of fatalities better than other states is believed to be due in large part to the increased number of agencies in this state which are interesting themselves in the subject of traffic hasards and safety.

The motor vehicle department has been informed by the Playground and Recreation Association of America that Mrs. Charles A. Goodwin of Hartford is sending out the following letter to many Hartford residents:

"Recognizing the danger of the city street we must sympathize with children whose only playground is in the midst of rushing motor cars, heavy drays and trolleys.

"There are moral dangers too, as well as physical for boys and girls who have only public thoroughfares in which to play. As a certain mayor put it: 'Is is a question of more playgrounds or more money for juvenile courts.'

"Will you help to provide safe playgrounds for these little children by contributing from $10 to $100 (or more or less as you wish) to the Playground and Recreation Association of America? I shall be glad to forward any check you may be so kind as to send me."

Thirty-one children under 16 years old were killed by motor vehicles last year in the largest five cities of Connecticut. There were ten such deaths in Hartford, six in Bridgeport, eight in New Haven, six in Waterbury, and one in New Britain.

REPORT MAN KILLED IN MARLBORO ACCIDENT

Norwich automobile drivers coming in late Sunday night from Hartford reported that they had passed a badly wrecked machine on the road east of Marlboro with the dead body of a man lying nearby. Who the man was that had been killed was not learned. It was reported that the machine had been struck by another car that got away without its ownership becoming known.

Minstrel Rehearsals Started

Regular rehearsals for the mammoth minstrels to be given by Metzler Assembly and White Cross Council, K. of C., have best started, under the direction of Edward T. Connelly, old time minstrel man with the Neil O'Brien show. Mr. Connelly was end man opposite O'Brien and leading tenor soloist of the company and is well qualified to direct and manage a minstrel of this kind. One of the features planned is the mixed chorus and the fact that the ends will be men and women is itself a novelty. It is expected that the minstrels will show before packed houses.

Fire With Little Damage

Squad A of the Central fire station was sent out at 8.10 o'clock Sunday morning for a fire at the home of Charles Gadle at 81 Twelfth street, which however, caused little or no damage. The fire was caused by burning cloth, which had been used to polish the kitchen stove, then put into a basket on a shelf in the house. Smoke was noticed and the call for the department was sent in immediately. The house is owned by Andrew McLaughlin.

Tried in Common Pleas Court.

In the common pleas court at New London Saturday, Judge C. B. Waller completed the trial of the case of Thomas Klitgaard of New London, against the Thomas C. West company for $600, for material furnished to the defendant on a painting contract at Fort Terry. The case had been partly tried at a previous court session.

Arrests by Norwich Police.

Two arrests for intoxication, one for breach of the peace and one for driving an automobile while intoxicated were made by the police on Sunday.

Entertained Luncheon Club.

Mrs. M. D. Millard of the Pequot, New London, last week entertained the Norwich Luncheon club, of which she is a member.

CANADIAN HOCKEY TEAM TOO STRONG FOR UNITED STATES SIX; WINNING 6 TO 1

Chamonix, France, Feb. 3.—(By The A. P.)—Canada won the blue ribbon event of the 1924 Olympic winter games by defeating the United States today, 6 to 1 in the final of the hockey series. It was a fast and furious contest from start to finish. Ten Olympic points are thus added to Canada's total.

The American team went down with flying colors when the referee, Paul Loicq of Belgium, blew his whistle at the end, and the seventh minute was the roughest hockey struggle ever fought out in Europe. The Americans were physically exhausted and stumbling from fatigue.

The Canadians, victors though they were, fully realized they had been through a real hockey match, but the indomitable courage, brilliant individual play and uncanny stick handling of the Americans could not prevail against the smooth clock-like combination work of the sextet from the dominion.

The announcement of Former President Wilson's death immediately after the conclusion of the match, although expected by the hundreds of Americans assembled here, came as a shock to the thousands of spectators still thrilled by the hard battle just witnessed. The announcement was made through the huge amplifiers, and immediately all heads were bared; there was a silence of one minute, while the American flag, second from the top on the Olympic pole, was half-masted.

United States.		Canada.
Lacroix	Goal	Cameron
Small	Right Defense	Ramsay
Drury	Centre	Smith
Rice	Right Wing	McCaffery

There was some claim that the Canadians scored three of their goals from off side, and that 3 to 1 in the score represented in reality the respective merits of the teams. But this was not the referee's view of it.

Small, Drury and Abel starred for the United States. No one stands out prominently among the Canadians; that is why they won. The Canadian team was a well oiled machine. Watson's name may appear oftener than that of his colleagues in the scoring column, but in each instance he was merely the last link in the combination, as Smith, McCaffery to Watson, or Munro, Smith to Watson, and into the net.

On the other hand, Drury, who scored the lone goal for the United States, did so after a single-handed run down the ice, which ended successfully, unlike many other attempts. There was much clever handling of the sticks and artful dodging by the Americans, but Munro and Ramsay, of the Canadians, smothered a majority of the tries.

There was no love lost between the rival teams; that was evident from the moment play began. This was partly due, it was said, to the statement of one of the Canadians several days ago that the United States would be defeated by ten or twelve goals. The game had not proceeded more than two minutes when Watson was bleeding from the nose and Rice was stretched out by the stick in Smith's hand.

Norway, with 91 1-2 points, has what is regarded as a safe lead at the head of the seventeen nations engaged in the sports, and Finland being the only other contender with any possible chance of overtaking her, and that small.

Great Britain has assumed third place displacing the United States by virtue of scoring seven points in the bob-sleigh events and four points in hockey.

Only fifty more points remain to be divided. There are two ski events for tomorrow, and Norway is the favorite.

Norway 91 1-2 points, Finland 76 1-2, Great Britain 30, United States 26, Austria 25, Switzerland 24, Sweden 23, France 19 1-2 Canada 12, Czechoslovakia 7 1-2, Belgium 6, Italy 1.

In the bob-sleigh competition, Switzerland was first with Great Britain second. The time for the Swiss team for the four descents down the 1,444 metre chute was 5 minutes 45 54-100 seconds, averaging nearly 40 miles an hour.

The British team was captained by Major Broome. Belgium was third, France fourth; Captain Horton's British team fifth; Italy sixth. All the teams today negotiated the difficult chute twice without accident.

NEW YORK NET TEAM WINS INTER-CITY TITLE

New York, Feb. 2.—Showing a reversal of form, New York's representatives in the annual inter-city indoor tennis play with Boston made a clean sweep of today's program and won the tournament, six matches to three.

Boston won three singles matches to one doubles match for New York yesterday, but today the Gothamites took all three singles and two doubles matches.

The summary: Boston and New York, singles: Francis T. Hunter, New York, defeated Richard Harte, Boston, 8-6, 7-5, 6-3; Manuel Alonso, New York, defeated James Davies, Boston, 6-2, 4-6, 6-3; Watson M. Washburn, New York, defeated W. W. Ingraham Boston, 6-3, 4-6, 6-3.

Doubles, Karl H. Behr and Dean Mathey, New York, defeated Richard Harte and James Davies, Boston, 5-7, 6-3, 7-5; Manuel Alonso and Watson M. Washburn, New York, defeated W. W. Ingraham and Irving C. Wright, Longwood covered court club, Boston, 6-3, 6-4.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Westerly, Feb. 2. — One-sided was the basketball match held in the state armory on Dixon street, Saturday night, between the Battery E, 243rd Field Artillery and the Shamrock basketball quintet of Roxbury, Mass., resulting in a score of 64 to 16 in favor of the Battery boys. The game was delayed in starting, First Sergeant Clarence Maxwell making the announcement that a telegram received from the visiting team at Providence stated that the visitors would be a half hour late in arriving. An automobile accident was the cause of this delay.

The visitors were a much smaller and lighter weight aggregation than their opponents, which was readily seen by the score at the end of the first half, Shamrock 3, Battery E 24. The second period proved no better for Torrey of the Battery boys had thirteen goals to his credit, McCloy caging a good basket from the side of the hall. The visitors showed an apparent lack of team play. The usual dancing program followed the basketball game until midnight and was very generally attended. The summary:

Battery E.		Shamrocks.
Shortman, Plympton		Sarkis
Torrey	Left Forward	O'Connell
Stenhouse, Spencer	Right Forward	Walsh
Dionne	Center	Driscoll, Lettit
McCloy	Right Guard	Long

Shamrocks, Roxbury: Field goals, O'Connell 3, Sarkis 1, Walsh 1, Driscoll 1, Long 2. Fouls, Long 1.

Referee, D. Harold Rogers; timekeeper, A. Grieg; scorer, Charles Mudge.

Attendance 700 ; Time, two twenty-minute halves.

Score by periods:

Battery E	24	40—64
Shamrocks, Roxbury	3	12—16

SPRINGFIELD GYM TEAM GIVES EXCELLENT EXHIBITION

The Springfield College gymnastic team appeared before a large audience in the Norwich Y. M. C. A. gymnasium Saturday night, giving their exhibition which was of an extremely high order, showing as it did to what extent it is possible to go in the development and poise of the body. One of the features of the team was the fact that each performer showed his ability as being an all round gymnast. The audience responded heartily to each number on the program which included drills, folk dances and exercises on the flying rings, horse, horizontal and parallel bars.

It would be difficult to select the numbers most interesting as constant training enabled the men to perform each of their stunts in a pleasing manner. The tiger leaping rings and horizontal bar work brought forth much applause, and some thrilling stunts were performed. The purpose in having the team come to Norwich was that the citizens might realize the great possibilities there are in systematic gymnastics to develop the body and maintain that poise that goes to make for true manhood.

In the fastest game of basketball ever seen on the Plainfield floor, before a crowd of overflowing capacity, the Plainfield quintet defeated the fast Rec team of South Manchester, by the score of 38 to 24.

The game started off like a flash when Mills, after a few seconds of play, dropped in the first basket of the game from a scrimmage underneath the home team's basket. After this the local aggregation was always in the lead with the exception of a brief period shortly after the second half started when the visitors tied the score at 22 apiece. The score at half time was 18 to 17.

For Plainfield Mills was the leading point getter with six field goals and two fouls, closely followed by Benjamin with six baskets from the floor. For the visitors Benson was the high scorer with nine points.

The home outfit played whirlwind basketball throughout the game and showed a reversal of form to the last appearance here of the visiting aggregation.

Benjamin and Mills both caged the ball on several pretty shots from the floor. Belair had the situation in hand throughout the game and besides playing a whale of a game himself kept his men travelling at whirlwind speed. Provost and Swanson both played a wonderful defensive game holding the Rec forwards to one basket apiece.

In the preliminary game the Buddies experienced little difficulty in trimming the Centreville team, 25 to 10.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

Southern California has 18 golf courses available for winter play.

Wrestling is the newest recognized sport of the University of Oklahoma.

Though 75 years of age, the Earl of Balfour, eminent British statesman, is still a keen lawn tennis player.

Waiters on skates bring tea to skaters at some of the Swiss resorts where the winter sports are in full swing.

Oxford and Cambridge university crews are already training for their annual boat race which has been definitely fixed to take place on April 5.

Ernie Swash, who has held the British amateur featherweight boxing championship for the past two years, has decided to enter the professional ranks.

The sale of "sport togs," including riding, hunting and shooting garments, increased 37 per cent. in the Los Angeles district last year, according to the figures of the manufacturers' tax returns.

The Stribling-Carpentier contest proposed by the Miami promoters has been sent aglimmering by the ultimatum of the Florida governor that no fights between top-notchers will be permitted in the state.

Announcement is made by the National Skating association of Great Britain that the world's figure skating for men and the world's pair championship will be decided at Manchester the last week of February.

Judging from the results of the games which have been played to date in the Eastern Intercollegiate Basketball league race of 1924, this year's battles for the championship won last year by Yale is going to be one of the hardest fought that the league has yet staged.

The French Olympic games committee has refused to accede to the request of the British committee that no program should take place on Sundays during the games. When the games were held at Antwerp four years ago, Sunday was one of the principal days in the schedule.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

"A Woman of Paris" at the Bristol

Charles Spencer Chaplin has entered into a new era in his dramatic contribution to the screen. "A Woman of Paris," he has entered into serious competition with famous directors, producers, and authors, of filmdom, and in doing so he has brought to the screen a new treatment a new psychology, to the photoplay.

Written and directed by himself, "A Woman of Paris" [illegible] first United Artists attraction now playing at the Breed theatre will reveal what the public really wants in the movies; with a little more genuine realism, a little more truth, depicting life as it really is, instead of life as the violent sentimentalists or the equally violent sensationalists have shown it.

Chaplin knows life as it really is. He has lived through so many conditions of it himself—from the poorest and most bitter, up through the various stages to wealth and place. He knows that both heroes and heroines are very human and blemished; that even villains have their white spots.

In "A Woman of Paris" he does not give a romance and plot that is neatly cut and dried and served up in stereotyped scenes. Rather, he convincingly shows life a sthe great majority know it, not preaching nor moralizing, but commenting upon it in interesting fashion. He treats his heroes, heroines and villains with a half-sympathetic, half-cynical, psychological understanding.

While the story follows numerous precedents, Chaplin has nevertheless dealt with his characters in a new and novel way, creating a thousand subtities and nuances, injecting bits of human psychology, keeping the spectators guessing to the end, leaving them to ask themselves what will the end of "A Woman of Paris" really be.

Other pictures on the bill include a Pathe news and an Educational comedy.

Triple Star Bill at Palace Theatre

An announcement extraordinary is made by the management of the Palace Theatre. On their bill for the first half of the week of February 4th, they are bringing to Norwich a bill of extraordinary stars, who have featured for years in musical comedy and vaudeville—in fact, on this one bill there will be three acts that would ordinarily headline a big-time program.

The Emerald Revue, one of these star acts is in itself a real show. Seven people comprise this troupe. They carry a setting of gorgeous scenery and present a unique, distinctly different and original song and dance revue. There is plenty of comedy in the act, as all Norwich theatregoers like to laugh and Mr. Harding realizes that every show should have a lot of comedy features included. For this reason he is bringing to Norwich the popular musical comedy and vaudeville star Mr. Roy LaPearl in an act that is by far the best and funniest that has ever appeared on his stage. Mr. LaPearl's act is indescribable. He is by far one of the funniest men ever seen here. His act is replete with surprise features and Norwich theatregoers are sure to enjoy a hearty twenty minutes of fun and laughter while he is on the stage.

For a Third feature, they are bringing Miss Lillian Gonne, who has just completed a long tour of the better musical comedy houses as a star with Shubert productions. She needs little introduction to steadi theatregoers as she has appeared in the best and finest theatres in America, always starred and always featured. She is an attraction any manager would be proud to offer to his public.

Selma Braatz & Co., who have just completed a tour of the Loew circuit and come to us direct from Loew's Orpheum Theatre, Boston and from other Loew houses in New York have perhaps the most original act of their kind in show business. There are a great many jugglers in vaudeville but no juggling act of just this type has ever been seen here or anywhere for Selma Braatz is a European importation and she brings with her a routine of European novelty stunts and trickery.

Lee and Grace Carmen who complete the show are a dainty couple, who offer a comedy skit interspersed with songs and clever, humorous dialogue. The entire show is without a doubt the best that has ever been seen in this city. No expense has been spared to make this the finest array of vaudeville talent that has ever appeared on any bill. Each act is distinct and different and each act is in a class by itself and each act will bring thunders of applause. The feature picture, Jealous Husbands, directed by Maurice Tourneur" is a phrase that has become recognized as meaning a picture that is "different" in every respect from the ordinary run of photoplays. "The Isle of Lost Ships" and "The Brass Bottle" set new styles in pictures, and now Mr. Tourneur has made "Jealous Husbands," In it the director again reveals a number of innovations.

NEEDED INVENTIONS

An ashless furnace.

Alarm on a householder's pocketbook to warn him when he is spending more than he should.

Automatic speed control for the idiot who tries to pass another automobile while going fifty miles an hour on a narrow road.

A conscience that will induce the loafer in every office to do his share of the work.

A phonograph that will refuse to play, Yes, We Have No Bananas more than fifteen times in 24 hours.

A golf ball that will announce its presence when it is lost in the tall and uncut.

A pup that can be made to understand when the family goes away that it is not leaving him forever, but will be back in a few hours.

Some means by which the two girls behind you in the motion picture theater can be made to listen to the overture in silence, instead of praising about a ride with Harry in dad's car while dad was out of the city on business.

An automobile that can be compressed to pocket size in order to avoid the ten-mile drive to find parking space downtown.

President Of Soviet Republic

With the death of Lenine the position of Kalenin, President of the Soviet Republic, is uncertain. Some claim that his party is strong enough to hold the power. Others point out the fact that the Trotsky faction, consisting of Kameneff, Zinovieff and Stalin, is a powerful one and that they will handle Kalenin out of the way.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Mrs. Leslie Carter [illegible] Shubert Theatre

Once often hears the remark "See yourself as others do." May we suggest a visit to Broadway Feb. 5 to witness Mrs. Leslie Carter as Stella Dallas, a dramatization by Gertrude Purcell and Harry Wagstaff of Olive Higgins Prouty's famous novel of the same name.

"There is a Stella Dallas in every community. She is part of every city, town, and village where there is a Main Street and social barriers. How often are those women misjudged? How many wrongly condemned?

Olive Higgins Prouty's novel tells of a marriage between a man of education and breeding and a woman untutored in the fine points of good taste, crude and intellectually undiscerning, but a generous heart. Can such a marriage be a success? What is the effect not only on Stephen, the father, Stella Dallas, the mother, but upon their strange, beautiful child, Laurel?

The Selwyns, under whose management Mrs. Carter is appearing, feel the cast selected for this production is more than equal to the wishes of both the adapters and author and among them will be found the following: Beatrice Moreland, Margaret Bawkins, Almeda Fowler, Julia Cobb, Ruth Darby, Anne Morrison, Albert March, Mathilde Baring Kay Harrison, Guy Milham, and George W. Howard.

Prices are 50c, $1.00, $1.50, $2.00 and $2.50 plus 15 per cent. tax. Mail orders now. Seat Sale Wednesday, Feb. 6.

Vaudeville at the Strand

Starting today, a new policy is to be inaugurated at the Strand Theatre.

The shows at that popular playhouse will consist of B. F. Keith vaudeville and pictures.

Mildred Andre & Girls in the headline attraction consisting of a company of six people in a symphony of tone and color.

Peres and La Flor in Anything for a Thrill are dancers, equilibrists and ground tumblers.

Stutz & Bingham offer An Original Comedy Oddity.

What held Lenore Vance in thrall? Why did she take money from the rich and give it to the poor? Who was Fargo? What did Richard Taunton decide to do when he learned the truth about the woman he had come to love? Was Moran, the detective, on the right track? Where was the secret panel?

These are a few of the questions that will be answered when you see "The Satin Girl" at the Strand theatre. Mabel Forrest plays the title role in this, her first Grand-Asher starring vehicle, produced by Ben Wilson and directed by Arthur Rosson.

And the mystery keeps pace with the love interest, and the thrills are almost constant. Norman Kerry is featured as the doctor, Richard Taunton; Marc MacDermott is the arch-crook, Fargo. Clarence Burton is the detective.

Adam Hull Shirk wrote, and Arthur Statter with George H. Plympton, adapted, the picture.

Slater Hall Musical Course

On Wednesday evening, Feb. 6th, a joint recital will be given in Slater Hall by Olive Marshall, soprano and Jean Bedetti, cellist.

Miss Marshall is endowed with a voice of great beauty and this young singer has won the marked approval of the public and musical critics in her many concert appearances.

His consummate artistry, his brilliant technic and superb musicianship are the qualities that have made him admired as an artis.

The following program will be rendered:

I Chose a Rose	Stickles
The Shadders	Whitely
The Red, Red Rose	Cottenet
Miss Marshall
Suite Ancienne	Breval
Allegro Brilliante
Adagio
Rondo
Mr. Bedetti

Minuet	Mozart
The Bee	Schubert
Mr. Bedetti
Allersulen	Strauss
The Secret	Speaks
Message of the Rose	James
Chere Nuit	Bachelet
Miss Marshall
Agnus Dei	Bizet

Miss Marshall, soprano with cello obligato by Mr. Bedetti.

The Chickering Piano from the Plaud-Cadden Co., will be used.

Tickets for this recital are on sale at The Cranston Co., Broadway. Tickets $2.00 tax exempt.

Broadway Theatre Follies Notice

Business Manager Joseph W. Standish, who represents the Linton Brothers, whom Manager Davidson has engaged to produce the Hometown Minstrel Follies, which will be played at the Broadway Theatre during the entire week of February 11, is greatly pleased at the types of young ladies and gentlemen who have already signified their intention of going in the forthcoming production. "What pleases me most," said Mr. Standish to a reporter for this paper, "is the fact that all those to whom I have spoken to are keenly alive to the fact that a performance such as this, where they will be under the direction of a highly competent director will give them a good chance to find out if they really have talent—and if appearances go for aught, I am of the opinion that the audience will be agreeably surprised, for I am free to confess they will more than 'make good.'"

The case will then be sent to the next General Assembly at Grand Rapids in May, and is expected to be the leading issue.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Why Is a Sales Slip? by Mr. H. A. Hinman, Sales Manager, The Pettek Press

"What is the use of stuffing a useless slip of paper, recording the sale, into my package when I pay cash? If it's only to prove who sold the goods in case I change my mind and want to bring the stuff back, I think the store is catering to a lot finicky customers and they have more system and red tape than reliable merchandise."

The above remark was overheard by a member of the National Chamber of Commerce, who investigated a fair sized hardware store. The Hardware Man said, "Sure, Sales Books and System cost me a lot of money, but when compared with the cost of doing business without them, my customers and I both profit."

The Hardware Man showed how he used slips for keeping track of stock and for detailed analysis of profit and loss. These were eye-openers. Cash sales slips formed a basis on which to buy new merchandise; a systematic record of charge, or memo slips showed him his customers' [illegible]

A Cash Grocer told how under the old system of doing business often goods were not rung in the Cash Register, because something was forgotten, or a customer had thoughtlessly placed a small package in another basket in his pocket. Now, the order is taken in duplicate when the customer comes in; put up, checked, totaled, and rung in the register. Stock, sales slips, and cash register must tally every day.

Because someone in a hurry forgot to go to the day book, a car of lumber was lost for months; a piano was never charged at all.

These answers to "Why is a Sales Slip" set the Chamber of Commerce man, who was a manufacturer, to thinking that the manifold book idea could be used in manufacturing. He called in a Potter Press Representative, who showed him sales books, charge books, memo books for every purpose, billing systems, tally cards. The result was a tax on 25000 more income than Uncle Sam collected the year before.

"His Children's Children" Triumphs

The Sam Wood Paramount production, "His Children's Children," featuring Bebe Daniels, Dorothy Mackill, James Rennie and George Fawcett and a picturization of Arthur Train's novel of that name, which had its premier presentation at the Broadway theatre last night, treats not of the commonplace story of the "rich man's son," but the new problem in American life, the third generation—the generation that exemplifies the old saying, "It is only three generations from shirtsleeves to shirtsleeves."

The picture shows how the great fortune of a pioneer railroad builder—a typical American figure—reacts through a smug second generation, and in violent, sudden and complete dissension, shatters the whole family to pieces in the third generation—the jazz generation of the present day. It is not only one of the most sensation and melodramatic novels of American society penned since the first novels of Theodore Dreiser.

This production is vested with a cast and general equipment in keeping with the story itself. Some of the amazing features which go to make it intensely interesting, unique and appealing include an allegorical shot of the banquet of Croesus, richest man of ancient history, an exact duplicate of the first Pullman private car and the tragic death of old Peter B. Kayne. The picture locations, almost every one of New York and Long Island ar real. In this respect the production is most remarkable.

Playing in support of the principals is one of the strongest casts ever assembled for picture purposes. It includes Hale Hamilton, Mary Eaton, Marion Hamilton, Katheryn Lean, Warner Oland, John Davidson and a long list of others all well known artists of both stage and screen. "His Children's Children" was adapted by Monte M. Katterjohn, and Al Gilks did the photography.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE-AWAKES.

Be Kind to Animals

Be kind to animals, my friends,
And they'll be kind to you;
For God made them same as us,
And they're His creatures, too.

Be kind to animals, my friends,
And they'll be kind and true;
For what you give will always be Reflected back to you.

Be kind to animals, my friends,
And they'll be kind to you;
For kindness is a winning trait
In everything we do.

O happy day when men shall be
Of one benignant mind;
When they shall all be governed by
The thought of being kind!
—Stokes A. Bennett, in Our Dumb Animals.

October's Bright Blue Weather.

O, suns and skies and clouds of June
And flowers of June together,
Ye cannot rival for one hour
October's bright blue weather.

When loud the bumble-bee makes haste,
Belated, thriftless vagrant,
And golden-rod is dying fast,
And lanes with grapes are fragrant;

When gentians roll their fringes tight
To save them for the morning,
And chestnuts fall from satin burrs
Without a sound of warning;

When on the ground red apples lie
In piles like jewels shining
And redder still on old stone walls
Are leaves of woodbine twining.

When all the lovely wayside things
Their white-winged seeds are sowing,
And in the fields, still green and fair,
Late aftermaths are growing;

When springs run low and on the brooks
In idle golden freighting,
Bright leaves sink noiseless in the hush
Of woods, for Winter's waiting;

When comrades seek sweet country haunts
By twos and twos together,
And count like misers, hour by hour,
October's bright blue weather.

O, suns and skies and flowers of June,
Count all your boasts together,
Love liveth best of all the year
October's bright blue weather.
—Helen Hunt Jackson.

LETTERS OF ACKNOWLEDGMENT

Jeanette Robitaille, Baltic—I thank you very much for the nice book you sent me. I am very much pleased with it.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE-AWAKES.

Good health is the foundation of success in life. When our health goes back on us, as it will if we don't take care of it, we are sadly handicapped. Unless our bodies are clean and healthy we can't get very far up the ladder of success. We may climb up a step or two but there we will stay while others leave us far behind. When boys and girls are ill they can't study or do their work properly—they can't even play. And so if we are continually in poor health, as a great many people are right now, we get nowhere. We just stand still and sadly watch others pass us by with a rush.

Of course nobody likes to be ill. Yet it is largely our own fault if we get ill. There are times when the individual is not wholly to blame for having poor health, but generally the cause of poor health can be traced right back to the individual's own carelessness in not looking after his body properly. Good health is essential if we want to enjoy life as we should. Nobody can be happy or contented if they have aches and pains. They may appear to be happy but they are not.

Here are a few simple rules, which, if followed, will prove big aids in keeping good health. Don't breathe stuffy, foul air. Many people keep doors and windows closed tight and fast all winter to keep the cold out. That is a mistake. There should be plenty of fresh air in our homes at all times. So get acquainted with fresh air indoors as well as out. Drink water freely between meals but sparingly at meals. Chew the food well. Don't swallow it whole. Eat cereals, green vegetables and plenty of fresh fruit. Cultivate early and regular hours for sleep.

Another important rule which should be followed is to guard your teeth. Brush them well daily and if they start to show signs of decay pay a visit to the dentist and let him look them over. He will save them for you. Exercise the muscles and play awhile daily. Exercise keep our body fit and play gives our brain, which we sometimes are apt to overtax, a chance to relax or rest.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE-AWAKES.

Children Today—Citizen's Tomorrow.

Dear Uncle Jed: Today we are American school children going to school, learning all we can on every subject, especially the laws and regulations of our country so that we may be faithful citizens later on in life.

How exciting everything is on "Election Day," people going to vote, men talking all at the same time and giving their opinions on the candidates for election. I wish I could vote, don't you? I'd like to give my opinion about national subjects, etc. Never mind! Our time is coming.

We must do our duty in school, respect authority, and above all—honor, love and respect our dear flag. Tomorrow we will be citizens of the good old U. S. A. working for ourselves and our community. We must always be ready to defend our country in case of war, for remember this: We are the only nation, that is free! Absolutely free from haughty rulers, so, therefore do your best so that there will be one more, honest, straightforward citizen to add to our great American population.

MY TRIP TO OAKLAND BEACH

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awake Circle. I am going to tell you about my trip to Oakland beach. One Sunday morning last summer we started to go to Oakland beach. My uncle had invited us to go so we went to spend all day. When we got there we ate our dinner. After we went bathing. We had a good time at Oakland beach. I hope all the Wide Awakes will go some day.

MY DOG

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my dog. We had a dog and her name was Nellie. One summer we went to Oakland beach. Nellie found another dog and they went to a man's house. We hunted but could not find them. When we got home the man wrote to us and said that Nellie went to his house and died. So that was the end of Nellie.

A RUNAWAY COW

Dear Uncle Jed: I have received your book and I thank you very much. The stories are very interesting. I am going to tell you and the Wide Awakes about a cow that ran away. Once a man went to the fair to sell a cow. He stopped at a store. He left his cow outside untied. While he was buying groceries in the store the cow was scared by something and started to run. At the same time the man came out. The cow started to run faster. The man missed the rope and so took hold of her tail which made the cow run faster than ever. The cow fell over on the man. He was dragged a few feet more when the cow stopped. The man was not bruised badly. The cow was not hurt very badly.

A SELFISH PEASANT

Uncle Jed: A young peasant was sitting on the side of a wood. He was hungry and was praying and begging the gods for a morsel of food.

Suddenly a dwarf appeared nd said that his prayer was heard. He then gave him a pouch and said, "This pouch will satisfy your thirst and hunger, but you must never, consume it at once, and give some to those who ask of you."

The visitor vanished. To his great delight the peasant not only found common bread and cheese in the bag, but also delicate meats and many delicious beverages. He ate heartily and immediately the pouch was filled again. When he saw this he began to lead a shiftless life. While he was going out one day, and old feeble man, came and prayed him to give him a morsel of food. He refused in a brutal tone, and suddenly the pouch and all the food disappeared. He was then compelled to lead his past life.

A BOY'S PRAYER

Dear Uncle Jed: One Sunday a little boy of ten years of age came into a Sunday school class. He had led a very uncomfortble life as a chimney sweep in the service of a hard master. The teacher was talking about prayer, and turning to this little fellow, asked him: And you, my friend, do you ever pray?

Oh yes, sir.

And when do you do it? You go out very early in the morning, do you not?

Yes, sir, and we are only half awake when we leave the house. I think about God, but cannot say that I pray then.

You see, sir, our master orders us to rest a little when we are at the top. Then I sit on top of the chimney and pray.

Ah, sir, very little. I know no grand words with which to speak to God. I say, God be merciful to me a sinner!

ONE DAY IN WINTER

Dear Uncle Jed: It was a cold day and there was snow on the ground. It looked as though the earth had a white sheet over it. I was sitting in the window watching the children make forts and snow men. Some were feeding the snow birds. The trees were bare. Some of the pine trees were green with some snow on them. There was no grass or plants growing. There were a few birds flying. The trees were blowing. It was getting so the sky was dark. There were a few leaves on the trees. But they were very brown. There was a lot of ice.

THE TELEPHONE

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about the telephone. One hot day in June 1875, a young professor was working at a machine. It was a toy in appearence and unlike anything that had ever been made in any country. The young professor had been toiling over it for three years and it continually baffled him, until on this day when he heard a noise coming from the machine. He had been expecting this sound for several months, but it came so suddenly that it took him by surprise. The noise of the machine was the tiny cry of the new telephone, and was happily heard by a man whose ear had been trained to recognize the strange noise of the new comer. There amidst flying bolts and jarring wheels the baby telephone was born. The inventor was a young Scotch American named Alexander Graham Bell. He was born in 1842, came to Canada in 1870, and became a professor in Boston University in 1871.

On his twenty ninth birthday Bell received his patent. He spent a long time trying to improve it before he died. Later the telephone was simplified by other inventors, Dolbear, Gray and Edison. Three million telephones are now scattered in the land of its birth.

AN OLD FARM HOUSE

Dear Uncle Jed: In an old farm house lived a little old lady who dearly loves the place. My first visit there, in the month of September, was a very happy one.

It stood about a mile from the very center of a small town, on a hill a short distance from the road, with a flower garden, and a few flowers still blossoming, in front. Just above the house, on the back side, a large maple tree showed its beautifully tinted top branches. A piazza with a rosebush clinging to it helped to adorn the western side of the house and a picket fence kept the cows from getting into the garden.

Inside were eight rooms and a summer kitchen which had just lately been built. In every room there was a large fireplace. On entering the door we step into the kitchen. A large room with six chairs, a table, a stove and a closet with tin pans in it. There is not a fire in the stove because she has done all her cooking but a fire was crackling merrily in the large open fireplace, sometimes sending a shower of sparks on the stone before it. Above it is a shelf on which shands a couple of candles, three plates and a number of books. Upon a smaller shelf over the table is a large clock and suspended from the ceiling on a string was a dozen ears of corn hung up to dry for seed.

A LITTLE KITTEN

Dear Uncle Jed: I have a little kitten. His name is Tommy. He catches mice, and he sleeps on the foot of my bed. Once when my brother and I were playing, he tried to catch his tail. He did not do it because his tail went as fast as he did. He meets me when I come home from school every noon. He sings when he sees me and runs to meet me, and rubs up against my legs. He follows me up stairs at night but he gets up and goes down stairs before I do.

MADE SPINNING EASIER

Dear Uncle Jed: Would you like to read a story of the man who made spinning easier?

His name was Richard Arkwright. He was born in England. His father was very poor. The boy didn't go to school very much. When he was a man he became a barber. He went all around the country buying and selling hair. He talked to the people about spinning. By 1769 he had made a machine which would spin cotton, wool and flax. Later he became one of the richest mill owners in England. He was called the father of the factory system. Before he died he was made a knight.

A TRIP TO SLATER HALL

Uncle Jed: On Jan. 15th my class was invited to Slater Hall. A lady was going to show us the statues. In seeing the statues I liked the Discus Thrower the best. His head was bent over and he was ready to throw the discus. He looked as if when he threw the discus; he would move his head. He had all his weight on one foot. I liked it very much and would like to go again.

THE FIRST FLAG

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell the Wide Awakes about our first flag. Many years ago when George Washington was at the head of our army, he planned a flag for our country. The flag he planned had thirteen stripes, or bars, and thirteen stars, because there were just thirteen states in our union then.

George Washington took his plan to Betsy Ross and asked her to make a flag out of cloth, like the one he had drawn on paper. She knew how to sew very neatly and swiftly, so she soon made a beautiful flag exactly the way Washington had planned it. This was the very first flag of our country.

A QUEER DREAM

Dear Uncle Jed: Once there was a little girl whose mother and father were dead. They had left her a house of her own. She slept alone at night. One night as she was going to bed she heard somebody pushing at the door. She was very much afraid. But she did not know what to do. She wondered who was at the door. There were two sheets on the bed. She took the sheets and tied them together. After that was done she tied one end on the leg of the bed, and let it hang out of the window. She hung on the sheet till she was on the ground. She ran to the next house and told the lady that somebody was trying to break the door. When she woke up she knew it was all a dream.

HOW I SPENT NEW YEAR'S RAY

Dear Uncle Jed: When Christmas was over, we all had another good time on the following day. The presents I got were as follows; sewing basket, box of writing paper, handkerchiefs, a bottle of perfume, pin and many other things. At night we all went to the room where the Christmas tree stood, and lighted the candles.

On New Year's day my aunt and uncle from Norwich Town were going to come, but I do not know what hindered them from coming. We all had dinner and went to visit a friend. I took my prize book and didn't leave it for a minute until I had finished it. When it was seven o'clock we went home.

MY PET DOG

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my pet dog. My dog's name is Teddy. He is a very clever dog and does many tricks. I take him out in the yard and he jumps over the clothes line. Then he goes in the house and gets a piece of candy. If we don't give him any he won't jump any more. He is one year and a half old and is an Airdale. I hope that some of the other Wide Awake children have pets too.

SQUIRRELS AND THE WEASEL

Dear Uncle Jed: The squirrels were sad. They did not know that it would be a long and cold winter. They did not gather enough food that would last them through the winter. Everynight a sly weasel would come around their tree looking happy and well fed. "I wonder where he gets the food to eat," they said. But they did not know the sly weasel came when they were sleeping. "Lets follow him and see where he gets his food," they said. They rubbed their sleepy eyes and followed him. He led them straight to Farmer Brown's chicken coop and stole. "We will not steal one of the young chickens," they said. They were turning to go home when they saw a crib of corn filled to the brim. "It is not wrong if we take a few kernels of corn from a man who has so much," they said. And to tell the truth they had many good meals till springtime.

MY VISIT TO SLATER HALL

Dear Uncle Jed: On my visit to Slater Hall, the most interesting thing that I saw was Demeter the Goddess of Agriculture. Demeter had a daughter named Persephone. One day the mermaids with whom Persephone was playing asked her to pick them some flowers. The little girl agreed and went off to the woods. After she had an armful and was just going back to the mermaids, she saw a much larger flower ahead.

Without stopping she went over to the flower and was just picking it when the earth opened and Pluto came up with his chariot horses, and took the girl down to the under world.

Demeter grieved and grieved. She felt so sorry that Agriculture failed. At last she sent a wise man, by the name of Mercury, down to get Persephone.

Mercury said, "Will you let this little girl come to the upper world?"

Pluto said, "Why yes, you may take her with you."

Now Persephone had not eaten anything while she was in the under world, because any one that eats in the under world can never come up to the upper world. But before she came up Pluto gave her some seeds to eat. Then Pluto told Mercury that she could not go up.

Demeter grieved and grieved. She finally told Mercury to go again to Pluto.

He went, and Pluto said, "She may go up for half the year but the other half she must stay with me."

Demeter was very happy when Persephone was with her. But she was very unhappy when Persephone had to live with Pluto.

When Persephone is in the upper world, Demeter is very happy and makes things grow. It is then summer. But when Persephone is living with Pluto, Demeter is very sad and does not make things grow. It is then winter.

A LETTER ON THRIFT

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write you a letter on thrift. Thrift is necessary in the home, the city and the school. People should save but not be misers and spend but not be spendthrifts. In the bank our money will be safe and drawing interest.

When we are old we can go to the bank and draw out our money, little by little. The child who goes to the store and buys candy, soda or ice cream, what does he get in return? Nothing but the moment's pleasure. But what about the child who puts it in the bank? In the end he will have enough to live on.

A FOOLISH TRADE

Dear Uncle Jed: There was a boy who was given a handful of pennies and set off for the toy shop. Before he got to the toy shop he met a boy with a beautiful silver whistle and he agreed to give his handful of pennies to the boy for this whistle. The boy, very proud of his bargain, walked away with his pennies and of course the other boy was proud of his bargain too. But when he got home his brothers and his father and mother laughed at his bargain and said, "if you went to the toy shop you could have bought ten whistles and many other things besides that." Often after that he thought of his poor bargain but it taught him a lesson.

MAKING U. S. CITIZENS

Dear Uncle Jed: It is a long time since I have written to you. I want to tell you and the Wide Awakes how an alien can become a citizen of the United States.

When a foreigner wishes to become an American citizen he must, if over 18 years old, go before a federal or state court and declare his intention of becoming a citizen of the United States.

After he has lived in the United States five years, and providing it is two years since his first trip, he may again appear in court, give his oath of allegiance to the United States, and receive his certificate of naturalization. By this process he becomes a citizen of the United States. He is entitled to every privilege granted a native born citizen, except that of becoming president or vice president.

THE BEST STUDY

Dear Uncle Jed: What I like best about school and why. I like the teacher because he teaches us eight subjects. And the best of them is English. English teaches us how to speak properly.

At the same time English forms a taste for good literature. Then we are trained in good habits.

I have an English book in school and before I write down anything about English I first look in the book.

HOW HOUSES ARE MADE

Dear Uncle Jed: I have written to the Wide Awakes once before, but I thought I would write again, and tell them how houses are built. Houses are made of many things. In the northland, it is very cold so the people need very thick walls to keep out the wind. The walls are made of ice and snow. A snow house is called an igloo.

In some countries it is hot all the year round. There the houses are made of branches of trees covered with mud, leaves and grass. In Japan it is warm most of the year. The Japanese houses have paper walls. In some hot, dry countries the houses have no roofs at all. The walls have to be strong enough to keep out wild animals. Some people build their houses in caves underneath the ground. In wet countries the people sometimes build houses in trees.

In the southwestern part of our country live the Indians. They make their houses out of sun dried bricks. These houses are several stories high. They do not have any stairways in them. Those who live in the upper stories climb to their homes on ladders. When they don't want any one to come in they pull the ladders up after them.

American homes are made of wood, stone, brick or concrete. My house like many others, is made of wood. It is built on a stone foundation.

LITTLE TONY

Dear Uncle Jed: There was a little boy named Tony. He was often late at school. The teacher spoke to him many times about being late. A few weeks the teacher told him that if he came late again he would have to bring his mother. Toward the end of that week, Tony came late again. When the teacher saw him coming into the classroom, she said, "You are late again. Did I not tell you to bring your mother?"

"I did bring her," said Tony.

He took a picture out of his pocket and said: "Here she is. This is the only mother I have. She died when I was two years old."

"Who takes care of you now?" asked the teacher.

"There is no one but father who goes to work at six o'clock in the morning. He wakes me up, but sometimes I fall asleep again, and that is why I come in late."

"Poor little Tony," said the teacher, "I am very sorry for you and I will help you. I will send some of the big boys who live near you to call you every day so that you may not be late." Little Tony was now very happy. He felt that the teacher was his friend. During the rest of the year he was the first boy in the classroom.

FOUND AND LOST

Dear Uncle Jed: While I was walking along Washington street, I happened to see a nickel in the gutter. I picked it up and examined it, and found it to be good. Seeing a candy store on one side of the street and an ice cream parlor on the other I did not know what to buy. I determined to toss it up, and if it come down heads I would buy candy, and if it came down tails, I would buy ice cream. I tossed it up and to my great surprise it rolled out in the street and went down the sewer.

Dear Uncle Jed: I will tell you about my pet skunk. He is black and white. I take him to the city on the seat of the wagon. He will bite my hand when he wants me to scratch his ears. He weighs about 12 or 15 pounds. I keep him in a box. He will eat eggs, sweet corn and fish. In the summer I take him out into the lots and raise up stones. He will catch crickets himself. A JOLLY EVENING

Dear Uncle Jed: I will tell you about a jolly time I had Saturday night.

We all had supper early and then dressed. I got my brother ready while my sister washed the dishes. As soon as I had my brother ready I helped my sister.

We had planned to have a dance at our house. Perhaps some of the Wide Awakes will wonder what you call such a dance. We call it a kitchen dance because you dance in the kitchen or any other room.

My uncle arrived about half past seven o'clock with the man who was going to play the fiddle or violin.

My uncle had to go back after another load and my father and uncle made one trip for a load of people.

After dancing was over, we had refreshments, sandwiches, cake and coffee.

BE UP AND DOING

Dear Uncle Jed: Last year my father told my sister Mary that we could have the ground at the end of the garden to do with as we liked. So we made up our minds to raise flowers. Mary went to work at once. She was up bright and early, digging, planting, and looking after her garden.

But while Mary was at work in the morning I was still in bed. When I did get up, there was only time to get something to eat, and hurry off to school. After school I played a while and after that I studied my lessons. Now and then I thought of the garden, but only to put off the work, until, at last, it was too late.

When I saw the flowers in Mary's garden, I was both sorry and ashamed; sorry because I had no garden, and ashamed because I had not done what I ought to do.

It has been a lesson to me, I hope, and after this I shall try to do at once whatever I ought to do, and not put it off.

MY PET CAT

Dear Uncle Jed: I like very much to write to the Wide Awake Circle. I have a pet cat and I like him so much I am always after him. I will run and he will follow me. One day I took him out in my carriage. He was quiet until I started to push. Then he jumped out and ran through the streets. I ran after him. At last, I caught him and put him back. I never took him out in it again for I am afraid he might get killed.

A LOST DOG

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awake Circle. One day as I was walking along the street I met a little dog. It looked very hungry and cold so I took it home and gave it something to eat.

In the evening while we were sitting around the stove playing with the dog, a knock came at the door and mother went to see who was there She found that it was a man inquiring about a little dog. She asked him in to see if it was the one that I had found. Upon coming into the room the little dog saw him and ran to him wagging his tail, for he knew his master the moment he saw him.

The man was very happy in finding his pet so he gave me a small reward for being so kind to his little dog.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY
STARTING FOR THE PICNIC
There are picnics in Summer
And picnics in Spring,
But a picnic in Winter
Is really the thing.
Your ears grow so pink,
And your nose gets as red,
And your hair becomes crinkled
All over your head.
Oh, a picnic in Winter
Is brimful of joy—
At least, so I've heard,
From the Jack Rabbit boy.
"Hurry up, little rabbit!" called Lady Love from the kitchen. "Wash your hands and part your hair down the middle of your back. Breakfast is ready!"
Quickly dressing himself, the bunny boy hopped down the stairs, past the tick-tocky clock, and into the little kitchen.
"What have you planned for today?" he asked, noticing a sparkle in Lady Love's eyes as he held up his face for the morning kiss.
"Uncle Lucky has just telephoned over that he and the Yellow Dog Tramp will be over in a jiffy in the Sledmobile," answered the little bunny's mother. "We are to dress up warmly for the picnic."
"Picnic!" shouted the bunny boy. "How jolly. But mother dear, I thought picnics were only in summer time. Where are we going? And when do we start? And what will we have to eat?"
"Dearest me!" answered Lady Love, as her bunny boy stopped for breath, "leave it all to Uncle Lucky. We shall find out in good time," and the pretty bunny lady carefully folded up the red table cloth so as no to crease the big white roses, for by this time her bunny boy had finished the lollypop stew.
"Now, put on you big woolen muffler," she added as she slipped on her pretty brown sweater and smoothed her string of green beads.
Just then, the sound of a horn came across the Sunny Meadow and Little Jack Rabbit's heart went pitter-patter keeping time to the tick-tock-tock of the old clock on the stairs.
Across the snow and up to the little white gate in the old picket fence came the Sledmobile, dear Uncle Lucky at the steering wheel, the Yellow Dog Tramp, Squirrel Brother Chippy Chipmunk, Little Miss Mousie, Ducky Waddles, Henny Penny and Cocky Doodles on the back seat. But the space beside the kind old gentleman rabbit was left for the little bunny boy. Oh, my yes! Uncle Lucky always wished to have Little Jack Rabbit right next to him. My goodness! How bundled up was every one. One could only see the tip of Little Miss Mousie's nose. Henny Jenny's warm hood almost hid her face and the Yellow Dog Tramp's turned up collar nearly covered his ears.
"Jingle, jingle," went the bells as Uncle Lucky whispered to the little rabbit, "We're going to a sheltered place just beyond the Forest Pool." (And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.)

PIMPLY? WELL, DON'T BE

People Notice It. Drive Them Off with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

A pimply face will not embarrass you much longer if you get a package of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The skin should begin to clear after you have taken the tablets a few nights.

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immeneely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

U. S. NAVAL OBSERVATORY TELESCOPE FOR NEW LONDON DURING ECLIPSE

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 3—After maintaining a watch of the house, 39 Douglass street several nights, the place was raided Saturday, shortly before midnight and when numerous persons, mostly black, were observed to enter the place. Patrolmen Augustus Ray, Frank Philopena and William Manice swooped down on the place and arrested Minnie Kerson, colored, charged with keeping the place and William P. Franklin of 39 Hill St., David E. Clark of 26 Hill street, Edward Spinnard of Salem, June Brown of 558 Main street, Mrs. Angelina Bottomly of Waterford and Leo Fortin of 32 North Bank street, all on a charge of frequenting. The Kerson woman who was intoxicated, was locked up in default of a surety on her bond of $200 for her appearance in the police court tomorrow morning, but the frequenters all obtained surety on their respective bonds of $50 each, for court appearance.

John Tobin, 27, employed by the W. R. Frisbie Company, automobile dealers, was in the police court on Saturday morning, charged with taking an automobile without permission of the owner. He pleaded guilty and was fined $25. Tobin was arrested Friday afternoon following a Reo commercial car, the property of the Frisbie company, being found in a damaged condition on Pequot avenue, corner of Montauk avenue where it had crashed through a barricade fence, erected to protect autoists at that point because of road repairs in progress. The car was badly damaged and Tobin declared he did not remember using the machine.

Thomas Bransfield, 42, son of Patrick and the late Catherine Bransfield, died Saturday at the home of his father, 17 Harrison street. Thieves gained entrance to the branch market of the Soltz company on John street, last night or early this morning, for when Joseph Soltz, president of the company, went to the market he discovered evidence of the burglary. Sergeant Frank Howard under an investigation which revealed that the place was closed at about 11.30 o'clock Saturday night, but when Soltz appeared at the place this forenoon the rear entrance was found open. Whether the door was left unlocked by a careless employe or a duplicate key was used to gain access to the place is not known. The thief obtained $14.50, the money being taken from the cash register.

John Perry of 38 Moore avenue complained to the police this morning because of the practice of boys in playing basketball in the highway and because of the language used by them. Sergeant Frank Howard and Patrolman Courtney going to Moore avenue found a number of youths enjoying the indoor sport in the highway, the lads having a basket and a tub to be fixed on a telephone pole and into which the leather ball was hurled. The youngsters were ordered to carry on the pastime in a field or some other place where their playing would not be objectionable.

The Gulf Refining company has secured an option on the property owned by Joseph Gentilella, corner of Bank and Truman streets. It is also known that the company has obtained options on other properties.

The board of relief has already had complaints from a throng of aggrieved tax payers who received notification of the increase of the valuation of their respective properties. The reason given for the increased valuation was that errors made a year ago placed the value of the property considerably below the correct figure. The reason attributed for the increase, "the result of errors of a year ago in placing a low value," is most strange, for the city employed an expert concern from Philadelphia last year to reach a just and equitable valuation of every building in the city, paying the experts $10,000 for the work, which required several months to perform.

Representatives of the United States have been seeking a site here for a large telescope to be set up to observe naval observatory at Washington the fatal eclipse next January. The submarine base was selected to avoid negotiating for the use of private land. The center of totality will pass over Fishers Island, N. Y., six miles from here, in Long Island sound, but astronomers it is understood will prefer to make observations at a slight angle, rather than directly overhead.

Donald G. Chapman of 291 Sigourney street, Hartford, was taken into custody this evening by Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy, charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. In default of a surety on his bond, Chapman was locked up, pending the convening of the police court Monday morning. Officer Murphy was on duty corner of State and Main streets about 6 o'clock when the machine operated by Chapman was observed being operated in an irregular manner. The officer at once detected the condition of the driver and placed him under arrest. The car was taken to a garage where it will remain until such time as the charge against Chapman is disposed of.

During Saturday night, Lieut. Benjamin Beebe made a visit to places reputed to be gambling resorts in search of evidence of violation of the law, but in each instance the officer was not successful for although he observed numerous persons in each of the places, there were no signs of gambling. This afternoon several officers were ordered to make a tour of the outskirts of the city and to places where it had been reported that trap shooting was a favorite Sunday afternoon pastime, but in only one place, were the officers successful in finding the dice-throwers at work. This was at Morgan park and there about a dozen players were found and as many more watching the game. With the arrival of the officers the gamblers scattered in all directions, no arrests being made.

Justice of the Peace Thomas F. Morton, who has been ill at his home in Waterford with pleuracy for several days, is considerable improved.

The weekly session of the city council will take place Monday evening and there are many matters scheduled to claim the attention of the council.

The board of relief was not in session Saturday, but it will be Monday and it is probably that the board will be kept busy answering questions of aggrieved property owners, value of whose real estate was recently increased by Assessors Frederick Burrows.

WHAT OTHER CITIES DO

The Newport News (Va.) chamber of commerce, in co-operation with the superintendent of schools, has conducted a contest in which prizes were offered to public-school pupils for the best answers to a series of 26 questions on the history, geography, government, transportation facilities and the like, of the city.

Jackson, Tenn., has set aside a five-acre wooded tract to be used as a combined park, children's playground and tourist camp. The association of commerce is promoting a movement by which the various civic, fraternal and labor organizations will provide the equipment and facilities for the park.

The South Bend (Ind.) Tribune has been publishing a series of 29 articles by the chief of police of that city on the subject of traffic laws, with a view to bringing about closer co-operation between the police department and the public.

Will He Succeed Lenine

Kamenoff, acting Premier of Russia, who is being considered as the man to take over the supreme power in the Soviet Republic. He is one of the members of a strong triumvirate composed of himself, Zinoviev and Stalin. Should the extreme group in the Kremlin succeed in grasping the power to name a Premier, Kamenoff will be the man for the post.

The troubles of Louis Alberts, proprietor of the Workinmen's Clothing Store, closed by proceedings in involuntary bankruptcy sometime ago, have not ceased. Besides the banruptcy proceedings, three civil cases pending against him in the Third district court were increased by one more Saturday. Deputy Sheriff Fred T. Mitchell served papers on Alberts Saturday in which he was made the defendant in a civil suit alleging $1000 damages sustained by Andrew J. Martin, proprietor of the Martin House block on Canal street, in which the former store of the defendant was located.

Last Tuesday afternoon, a bankruptcy sale of the contents of the store by Judge Edward M. Burke, trustee, resulted in the auctioning off of four separate portions. The stock of the store was sold to the New England Pants Company of Fall River. Robert I. Alberts purchased the fixtures; a Ford delivery car was sold to Michael Dobridnia & Son and the second hand goods in the basement were purchased by Abraham Edelston. A bankruptcy sale by Edelston was scheduled for Saturday morning at the store, but Trustee Burke, at the time of the sale gave the purchaser forty-eight hours to remove his property. Apparently no arrangements were made for the use of the store with the landlord. When Alberts said to be agent for Edelston, arrived at the store, he found the front door decorated with a padlock reported to have been placed there by the landlord. Procuring a hammer and chisel, Alberts is said to have broken the lock and at this time Landlord Martin put in an appearance and a tussle resulted. A gallery of prospective bargain hunters was on hand to witness the bout. Patrolman Michael Curtin and Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown were summoned to prevent what might have been a free-for-all fight. The service of civil suit papers on Alberts followed. Proprietor Martin and a sister, with assistance stood in the doorway to prevent the entrance of prospective buyers. Alberts' wife and son were also on hand to begin the sale. Meanwhile the door was again padlocked. In the afternoon, Alberts again threatened to break the padlock and Patrolman Curtin, Chief Brown, Deputy Sheriff Mitchell, Attorneys Rathbun, Ledwidge and M. Walter Flynn made their appearance and the episode ended with the departure of Alberts for his home. The bondsman in the civil case was Charles Goldberg.

Goldberg who became surety in the sum of $1,000 bail, the writ to be returned in superior court for Washington county at West Kingston, on February 20th.

Mrs. Max Novogroski has returned to Westerly from a visit with her son, Joel B. Novogroski, a student at Tufts College, Medford, Mass., who suffered a fracture of his left leg recently. Mrs. Novogroski reports her son confined to his bed at his fraternity house and resting as comfortably as could be expected. The doctor anticipated putting the leg into a plaster cast Friday.

At the home of Miss H. Louise Ayers, on Maple avenue, was held the February meeting of the S. D. B. society. The members of the club anticipate contributing to a food sale to be held by the members of Ever Ready Class, of which Rev. Clayton A. Burdick is the teacher. The proceeds of the sale are to be used to help furnish a home for Dr. George Thorngate, who has offered his services to go to China, as a medical missionary to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Dr. Sinclair. Dr. Thorngate is a life-work recruit and has fitted himself for this work.

Miss Irma B. Clark of Westerly was the guest of her mother, Mrs. James McC. Thomson in Bradford, Sunday.

Electrician Sullivan of the New Haven railroad was a visitor from New London in Westerly Sunday.

Frank F. Dodge of Stonington was the guest Saturday afternoon of his father, E. M. Dodge in Westerly.

Mrs. Albert Dixon returned to her home in Westerly, Friday, after a visit with her daughter, Mrs. Austin F. Matthews in Pawtucket, R. I.

Miss Marjorie D. Barber, a teacher in the high school at North Attleboro, Mass., spent the week end of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hiram W. Barber.

Arthur J. McCarthy was a New London visitor Sunday.

Clerk A. T. Martin, of Stonington town court, was in receipt the past week of the following letter from J. F. McLaughlin, chief probation officer of the probation department of the superior court, Worcester, Mass. In Clerk Martin's reply to the letter Feb. 3 he said that there is no record against Antonio Gallucci as appearing in the Stonington town court.

Probation Department, Superior Court, Worcester, Mass.

Police Headquarters, Stonington:

Dear Sirs: Have you any record against one Antonio Gallucci, claiming to live at Westerly, R. I., aged 25, single, white, occupation electrician, height 5-5, 167 pounds, father's name George, mother's name Frances and who informs us that he was arrested in your city about June 1922 for larceny of an automobile.

Any information that you can give us will be greatly appreciated if forwarded at once.

Very truly yours
J. F. McLAUGHLIN,
Chief Probation Officer

Dated Jan. 31, 1924.

In a special session of the Third District court, Sunday night, before Judge Michael J. Turano, John P. Heyworth of Pawcatuck, arrested Fred T. Mitchell of the Westerly police, pleaded guilty to a charge of drunkenness. He was fined $5 and costs of $3.80, total $8.80, which he paid.

National Director of Girl Scouts, Mrs. Jane Deeter Rippin is to be present in Westerly this (Monday) afternoon at 3.30 in Calvary Baptist church she will speak to the officials of the Westerly Girl Scouts and representatives of local women's clubs. Following this meeting tea will be served. This (Monday) evening at 7.45 in the assembly hall of Westerly High school a public address will be given on Girl Scout work being done in America. Mrs. Rippin comes to Westerly from a busy Sunday passed in Providence where numerous talks and addresses on Girl Scout work were given by her.

Sunday afternoon at her home, 78 Stillman avenue, occurred the sudden death of Mrs. Marion Harrington. The death of Mrs. Harrington was caused by acute indigestion as she sat in her chair. She is survived by Arthur C. Harrington an engineer at the Westerly Wet Wash laundry.

About six o'clock Saturday evening, near the West Broad street railroad bridge there was an automobile collision between a new Auburn sedan, owned and operated by Rev. Dwight C. Stone and the Mack truck of Henry Panciera, of Bradford. The mishap occurred when Rev. Mr. Stone accompanied by his young son, was proceeding down Liberty street and collided with the Panciera automobile being driven down West Broad street. The sedan sustained a broken windshield, headlights and twisted bumper. Mr. Stone's son was slightly cut by broken glass.

The February meeting of the Westerly town council is to be held in the council chamber of the Westerly town hall this (Monday) morning at 9.30 o'clock. It is expected that the Westerly tax commissioners will have some matters to present to the Westerly town fathers at this time.

Samuel H. Davis was chosen president at the annual meeting of the Winnepaug Golf club Saturday evening, there being a large attendance of members. Other officers elected were vice president, William Clark; treasurer, Arthur L. Perry; secretary, Frederick S. Opie. The treasurer's report showed the financial condition of the club to be an improvement over that of a year ago. The report of the secretary showed a membership of 347, there being 230 chafter members, 73 associate, 30 junior and 15 playing members. From J. Frank Champlin, proprietor of the Ocean House, Watch Hill, was received a letter and his proposition of $600 was acted on favorably to give permission to his guests to use the Winnepaug course. The club members were told what had been done during the past year in the way of improvement in the golf grounds.

More than 25 employes and guests of the Westerly post office were present Saturday evening at a banquet tendered Postmaster-elect Thomas F. Lenihan at Elm Tree Inn. Among the guests were Post Office Inspector Charles H. Pendleton, ex Postmasters Eugene B. Pendleton and Charles J. Butler and Winslow N. York, former postmaster at the Watch Hill office. Robert H. Hazard was toastmaster, followed the serving of the turkey dinner.

Fred S. Opie of Westerly left town this (Monday) morning for New York en route to Florida, where he will pass several weeks.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

SATURDAY'S MARKET

New York, Feb. 2.—Intermittent profit taking failed to check a resumption of the upward movement in today's stock market, which was featured by the impressive strength of the low-priced railroad shares. Dividend paying rails, however, failed to share in the advance.

St. Louis Southwestern common and preferred advanced approximately 5 and 3 points, respectively, and Wabash preferred 9 moved up 2 3-8 while Texas & Pacific, Western Pacific preferred, Seaboard Air Line preferred, Wabash common and the Pere Marquette issues advanced a point or so. Buying of this group was based on improved earnings and speculative expectation of a resumption of dividends next month by the Southern Railway, Wabash and St. Louis Southwestern companies.

Steels held relatively firm on reports of steadily increasing operations and higher pig iron prices. U. S. Steel closed fractionally higher at 106 3-4 and moderate activity was noted in Crucible, Bethlehem, Penn Seaboard and Gulf States. Steel companies are expected to benefit from the improvement of the oil industry which is expected to materially increase its demands for pipe and oil drilling machinery.

Another advance in the price of Mid-Continent Crude was offset by the latest disclosures in the oil inquiry at Washington, which brokers report has had a restraining effect on the trading in oil shares. Standard Oil of California and Pacific Oil, which were heavy yesterday, made good recovery today. Royal Dutch jumped more than 2 point and shell transport 2.

Specialties recorded the best gains in the industrial group. Hayes Wheel, Woolworth, Savage Arms and Otis Elevator advanced 1 3-4 to 5 1-4 points, all at new high levels for the year.

Tobacco issues yielded readily to profit-taking. Lorillard dropping 3 points, Schulte 1 1-2 and a number of others yielding fractionally. Wilson Packing dropped about 2 1-2 points on the announcement of a new stock issue and United Fruit broke 1 1-4 on one sale. Pan-American issues held relatively steady.

Sterling exchange moved up about 2 1-2 cents in the early trading and then fell back to around $4.35. last nights close. Other exchanges showed only nominal changes.

The weekly clearing house statement showed increases in most principal items. Loans discounts and investments gained $76,276,000 over last week; reserve of member banks in the Federal Reserve bank increased $8,423,000 and net demand deposits jumped $130,191,000. Aggregate totaled $527,713,000, leaving excess reserve of $3,210,980, an increase of $19,735,640 over that of a week ago when a big deficit in reserve was reported.

NUMBER FIVE

ing to influence in Washington and launched a legislative program which included repeal of the tariff, revision of the currency system, new styles of control of the trusts, the creation of many new government agencies, and such a multitude of other legislative business that congress and the country had difficulty in keeping up with it.

Congress thought Theodore Roosevelt a "dictator" and an "autocrat" but it soon found itself dancing to Woodrow Wilson's tune and at first it danced very obediently and with very little grumbling. Mr. Wilson early confessed that he had a "one track mind" and he proved to congress early in his administration that he knew what he wanted and how to get it. He had a cabinet, it was true, but he consulted it after he had determined what he wanted to do. When he wanted a bill introduced in congress he frequently drew it himself and if it hesitated on passage he summoned the leaders—and it passed soon thereafter. In dealing with the cabinet he did his own thinking and conducted much important business of the various department direct from the White House.

Hardly had Mr. Wilson gotten himself turned around when he had his first foreign situation to deal with. It was with Mexico and was a legacy from the preceding republican administration. The republican chieftains said they left it for Mr. Wilson because they didn't want to embarrass him in dealing with it. The democrats declared the republicans had "passed the buck." It came to a crisis when Huerta, the dictator, seized the reins of government, and President Madero and Vice-President Suarez were murdered. Mr. Wilson had very fixed ideas of his own on succession to the presidency by assassination. He thought it pretty general in Central America and he told confidantes it was going to stop. He withheld recognition from Huerta and the situation boiled until Huerta's troops attacked some American blue jackets at Tampico and Mr. Wilson ordered the occupation of Vera Cruz by the American army. The official reason given for the occupation was that the German ship Ypiranga was about to land arms and ammunition for Huerta and the occupation was to prevent it. The United States demanded a salute to the flag, which, critics of the Wilson administration took delight in pointing out, never was given.

Events in Mexico solved their own problem in a few months when Carranza, another newly risen leader, ejected Huerta, who fled. American troops were withdrawn from Vera Cruz, and later President Wilson extended formal recognition to the Carranza government. But in 1920 Carranza in turn fled in the face of an armed revolution and the Mexican problem came back to a republican administration for settlement. "Watchful waiting" was not alone Mr. Wilson's.

Mr. Wilson was much criticised for "weakness" in handling the Mexican situation, but his friends said he saw a world-war coming and had told them he "did not propose to have the United States caught with one hand tied behind its back." He did not propose to be engaged in a war with Mexico at such a time. At all events, the world war broke the same year. Woodrow Wilson added his appeals to the futile effort to stay it, sitting by the bedside of his dying wife on a memorable August 4, 1914. Mrs. Wilson passed away that day, and with a world taking fire about him, he took her body to her girlhood home in Rome, Georgia, for burial. The president was almost prostrated with his grief, and returned alone to the White House to face his burden. Mr. Wilson's friends always said that from the first Mr. Wilson saw it would be a world war and that the United States eventually would be drawn in. But he realized that the country drawing its population from the states of Europe which were going to war would face a much divided sentiment and a very difficult situation. His first words to his countrymen were a caution to strict neutrality.

Asked Congress to Declare War.

Mr. Wilson's efforts were devoted to keeping his country neutral until the submarine outrages began. He was at first unable to believe that the atrocities had the sanction of the German government but was convinced when they s

WEATHER

Conditions

The western disturbance has continued to move slowly eastward with gradually increasing intensity and it was centered over Missouri Sunday night. It has been preceded by rising temperature in the Ohio and lower Mississippi valleys and the southeastern states and attended by snows and rain in the upper Mississippi and middle Missouri valleys.

The disturbance that was central over Missouri Sunday night will move slowly eastward during the next two days and it will be attended by general precipation east of the Mississippi river within the next two to thirty six hours. Mild temperature will continue over the middle and southern sections east of the Mississippi river Monday and in the middle Atlantic and South Atlantic states Tuesday.

Winds

Noth of Sandy Hook: Fresh north and northeast and weather overcast and unsettled Monday; possibly local snows or rains.

Sandy Hook to Hatteras: Fresh and east and southeast and weather overcast, probably rains Monday night.

Forecast

For Southern New England: snow or rain Monday or Monday night and Tuesday; no decided change in temperature.

BRIDGE FIGURES SHOW GREAT INCREASE IN MOTOR TRAFFIC

A graphic illustration of the growth of automobile traffic in Connecticut is obtained from a study of a compilation of returns from the three toll bridges in the state which became free by law on January 1st. Figures compiled at the office of the state highway commission showing the business on the three bridges at New London-Groton, Saybrook-Old Lyme and Haddam-East Haddam reveal a tremendous increase in both pleasure car and motor truck transportation.

In the case of the motor truck, an increase of approximately 500 per cent in traffic over those main fire bridges since 1915 is shown, while, at the same time, passenger vehicle traffic grew about 300 per cent during the same period.

With the steady progress of the automobile, a natural and not unexpected result has been a proportionate falling off in the traffic of horse-drawn vehicles. Those are shown to be constantly decreasing.

An example of the remarkable strides taken by the automobile is contained in a comparison of the traffic in passenger cars and trucks at a single point in 1915 with 1923. Eight years ago about 81,000 motor vehicles of all types traversed the Saybrook-Lyme bridge on the Boston Post road during twelve months, while last year no less than 257,000 vehicles passed the same point during a similar period.

Likewise, at the same particular point, for example, approximately 2,000 horse-drawn vehicles were charged for passage over the bridge under the toll system in 1915 whereas during last year only 668 paid fees to cross the bridge.

Following is a comparative statement which shows the steady advance made by motor cars, together with the gradual decline year by year of the horse-drawn vehicle on Connecticut highways:

SUDDEN DEATH OF THOMAS McCLIMON SATURDAY

Thomas McClimon, one of the best known residents of Preston, died at 2.45 o'clock Saturday morning from a shock, at his home in that part of Norwich. Mr. McClimon retired as usual Friday night, evidently in good health at that time.

Mr. McClimon was born in Greeneville on July 1, 1866, the son of Thomas and Maria McKee McClimon, and his education was gained in the schools of Preston where his parents lived soon after his birth. Later in life he became engaged in farming and was successful. He had also represented the town as first selectman and as assessor.

Surviving are three brothers, William, James and Walter McClimon; also one sister, Miss Isabel Annie McClimon, all of Preston.

Mr. McClimon was well liked by everyone who knew him. He enjoyed farming and kept in touch with improved methods. In habits he was steady, honest and industrious and in his death the community has lost a faithful citizen.

Extinguished Grass Fire

The fire department was called out Saturday morning at 11.31 o'clock for a grass fire on the lot owned by August Heber, corner of Baltic and Beech streets. There was no damage and the fire was quickly extinguished.

Forest Guide John Adams was on the scene and with several firefighters had extinguished the fire that burned over about five acres of grass land.

General business conditions in India have been improving.

CHILDREN GIFTS OF GOD, MEANT FOR GOD, SAYS PRIEST

Preaching to a congregation which filled auditory and galleries, at the 9 o'clock mass in St. Patrick's church Sunday, Rev. Myles P. Galvin, senior assistant, continued his instructions on The Ten Commandments, taking up the Fourth, "Honor thy father and thy mother." This commandment, he said, covers the mutual duties of parents and children; and for Sunday he considered the obligations of the former.

The primary duty of parents toward their children implies love. Not alone human love, but the realization that, since children are the gifts of God, true love for them is something far above mere natural affection, reaching beyond this world into the next, love supernatural. Since they came from God, they belong to Him; and in case it should be God's will early to take them to Himself, it is the part of the Christian parent to accept God's decree with resignation, believing that He knows what is best.

The duty of the parents to the child begin before the latter's birth; and the preacher explained the obligations of both mother and father from the standpoint that they are held responsible for the child's corporal and spiritual welfare. Once the child is born, even though born in poverty, the duty of father and mother to guard, cherish, protect and care for it was set forth. Parents should love all their children impartially. In this regard, the incident of Jacob's overweening love for Joseph, the bitterness which it caused among his other sons and the almost tragic consequences, was cited. The mistake of many parents in foolishly indulging children was censured. "Give them food, clothes, advantages—but give them a good whipping when they deserve it!" was the advice.

Father Galvin referred with delicacy yet with clearness to that topic upon which the Roman Catholic church is as adamant—the subject flippantly discussed in modern times as "birth control." The parents who refuse to accept God's gift, who destroy the unborn child, are guilty of a double murder. Since they kill, not alone the body but the soul of the child.

The evil done by fathers who spend upon drink, gambling or other brutal indulgence that money which should go for the comfort of wife or children was held up for reprobation. Likewise the preacher had the strongest censure for the careless, untidy, irresponsible mother, who fails to keep her home neat and attractive for husband and children, or who lets the latter go out unkempt, untidy and unclean. Water and soap are cheap, the preacher said, and often the neatest home will be that of the mother, who, although poor, has the determination to have cleanliness all about her.

Summing up, children are gifts from God. It is the duty of parents to so care for and train them that they may be returned to God as nearly spotless as is possible.

Following Saturday's confessions, hundreds of men, women and children received holy communion from Father Galvin, or from Rev. Rocco J. Guerriero who assisted him in administering the eucharist.

Life of Christ at Y. M. C. A.

The afternoon meeting at the local Young Men's Christian association Sunday proved very interesting. The feature of the hour was the showing of some fifty slides of the life of Jesus Christ from the manger to the cross. Secretary Edwin Hill explained the pictures as they were thrown on the screen, drawing lessons for daily life from the experiences of Jesus. The slides showing the trial, the mob crying "Crucify Him," the Christ bearing His own cross, the crucifixion and resurrection were very impressive. During the service Hugh Kinder rendered vocal solos, which were all appreciated, especially his solo "Nearer My God to Thee," while the hymn slides were thrown on the screen. Joseph S. Adams operated the lantern in an efficient manner.

Next Sunday the first part of the moving picture feature, "Les Miserables" will be shown and the other two parts will be shown on the two following Sundays.

Mrs. Fleming Recovering From Illness

Friends of Mrs. J. D. Fleming are pleased to learn that she is now at her home, No. 26 Lincoln court, Meriden, having returned from the Meriden hospital where she had been a patient for special treatment. During her stay in the hospital Mrs. Fleming received various gifts from Norwich friends for which she is grateful.

While in Norwich she was active in charitable work in St. Patrick's parish, always having her automobile ready for service of others. Norwich people are always welcome to call on her at her home, in Meriden whenever they are stopping at that city.

Miss James Managed Entertainment

Under the management of Miss Mary S. James, formerly of this city, who is a member of the American Legion auxiliary of Schenectady, N. Y., the auxiliary gave a successful entertainment Friday evening with a programme given by a harpist, reader and Scotch dancers and pipe major.

SIGNS OF EXPANSION IN THE HEAVY INDUSTRIES

New York, Feb. 3—(By the A. P.)—Among the chief topics of interest in financial and business circles during the past week were further signs of expansion in the so-called heavy industries. Steel production is again on the increase after the year-end shut downs. The U. S. Steel corporation is running its mills at 90 per cent. of capicity, the best rate in several months, while the independent plants are working at something like 75 per cent. of capacity.

Prices, moreover, are firm and buying has increased. Steel makers are encouraged by the greatly improved situation in the oil industry, where prices are advancing rapidly, and look for a strong demand for oil country goods. They also have large orders from the railroads for track material and rails. Automobile manufacture and building construction meanwhile go on a pace.

Railway car loadings for the week ended January 19 amounted to 895,- [illegible] setting a new high record for any week in any January. This sharp recovery in loadings was interpreted as confirming reports of increased activity in other industries and to indicate that the recent slump in traffic was due merely to holiday suspensions.

From the Commerce Reports

Optimism is ruling business in Italy. Money is easier and the efficiency of labor has increased.

Give Peace in Our Time

Lord of Hosts, Almighty Power,
Hear us in this solemn hour,
While the struggling nations cry:
"Help us, save us, or we die."
From its strife the world release;
Bless it with Thy holy peace!

Through the agony of years,
Through its madness and its tears,
Heroes, who have gladly died,
Mighty spirits glorified,
Led a warring world to Thee!
Martyrs for its liberty.

Thou canst heal its bitter strife,
Wake its sleeping soul to life,
Lift its weakness into power.
Father, in this solemn hour,
Through its guilt its yearning see;
Take Thy weary world to Thee!
—By Mrs. George G. Barker in Boston Transcript.

In February

The birds have been singing today,
And saying: "The spring is near!
The sun is as warm as in May,
And the deep blue heavens are clear."

The little bird on the bough
Of the somber snow-laden pine
Thinks: "Where shall I build me my house,
And how shall I make it fine?

"For the season of snow is past;
The wild south wind is on high;
And the scent of the spring is cast
From his wing as he hurries by."
The little birds twitter and cheep
To their loves on the leafless arch;
But seven foot deep the snow-wreaths sleep
And the year hath not worn to March.
—John Addington Symonds in Philadelphia Bulletin.

WILSON ENTOMBMENT TO BE WITHOUT POMP OR SPLENDOR

Simple Rites of the Presbyterian Church at 3 P. M. Wednesday in the Home on "S" Street Will Precede Services at the Chapel—President and Mrs. Coolidge Will Attend Both Ceremonies—Non-Commissioned Men of the Army, Navy and Marine Corps Will Bear the Body and Form the Escort From the House to the Chapel—The Body Will Be placed in a Marble Vault Beneath the Floor of the Washington Cathedral.

Washington, Feb. 4 —(By the A. P.) —America's war president will be laid to rest here Wednesday with a simplicity of religious service befitting the closing years of his life. No splendor of official honors will mark the entombment.

But while this decision was maturing amongs those he held closest in his heart, the name of Woodrow Wilson was again ringing around the world today in an outpouring of tribute to a leader who had given life itself in service for mankind.

Time was, not so long ago, when that name kindled the war-stricken millions of Europe to frantic hopes that the vision that shone before his eyes could be wrought in a world reborn to peace. Time was when the tramp of armed hosts on parade; the surge of tens of thousands straining to glimpse his erect figure; greeted him in the great capitals of Europe. The world hung upon his words as seldom, if ever before upon the utterance of any man, and yet, after another day, he will be laid to rest for a space in a marble vault on the hills overlooking the city with naught but the brief ritual of the church to solemnize his entombment. The shouting and clamor ended for him and with it all the pomp and circumstance of greatness of place when the heavy burden of the presidency slipped from his tired shoulders nearly three years ago.

That was the decision reached today by Mrs. Wilson. The day of her long, brave fight for her stricken husband's comfort and peace co.. ed, even with his death. Upon her must fall the duty of decision as to the manner and place of entombment, the weighing of the claims of the nation to pay highest honors to the dead against her knowledge of his dislike of the show and stir of heavy ceremonials.

Government Honors Declined.

While machinery of government stood ready to surround the ex-chieftain with all the honors it have devised to tender (hen it dead. President Coolidge placed every agency at his command at the disposal of the bereaved family in arranging for the funeral. The army, navy and marine corps stood ready to play their part in a great pageant of sorrow such as only men who have been commanders-in-chief of America's fighting forces may know.

There were those in high places who argued strongly that it was befitting that Woodrow Wilson, the war president, should be given up for a time in death to the keeping of his countrymen that he might be rendered the homage they would do him for the greatness of the place he had held. For his entombment was offered that shrine of American patriotism, the memorial amphitheatre at Arlington where America's unknown from France holds his faithful watch forever. No quibble, Mrs. Wilson was told, would be permitted to keep this fallen war leader from sharing that glorious vigil in the Virginia hills.

But it was not to be, and for a time, at least, Woodrow Wilson will sleep as any honored American citizen may sleep, in a vault set in sacred surroundings. Men may decide later that a great memorial shall rise to his honor, but for the present he will go forth from his home for the last time to lie deep in a marble vault beneath the floor of Bethlehem chapel at Washington cathedral while men and women and children come and go at their prayers above him.

The only military touch at the funeral, aside from the uniforms of the diplomats and high officers who will attend, will be the little squad of men of non-commissioned rank of the army, navy and marine corps who will bear the body and form the immediate escort from house to chapel. There will be for this dead chieftain no motionless honor guard about his casket night and day, no filing past of shuffling thousands for a last glimpse of the dead, but the fighting men into whose careful hands he will be given in the last journey will be World war veterans, as he was.

Simple Religious Services.

Before the services at the chapel there will be simple rites of the Presbyterian church at 3 p. m., on Wednesday in the home on "S" street, where death found him. The family service will be held there and only a few of those closest to him in life will share in it.

To represent the American people in this brief service, President and Mrs. Coolidge will attend but there will be many who know a great personal loss for whom room cannot be found. Details of the home ceremony had not been announced tonight beyond the fact Rev. James H. Taylor, pastor of Central Presbyterian church, where the former president worshipped in Washington, and Rev. Sylvester Beach, in whose congregation he sat in his years at Princeton, will conduct the service.

For the rest of the honors to be rendered a conference at the White House was required during the day President Coolidge calling Secretary Weeks in after the latter had been to the "S" street home to reiterate the tender of co-operation.

Admiral Grayson again spoke for the bereaved family at the White House, telling of the desire of Mrs. Wilson that the public services be as simple as possible and her wish that the casket should rest for a time in the vault below the great cathedral that looms partly completed over the city from the ridge of hills to the west. There could be no questioning her wishes and it was so arranged, despite the very great feeling in many quarters that a solemn and imposing public display of mourning should follow the service at the house.

Service Men Will Control Crowds.

As the plans stood tonight there was little still to be arranged beyond the precautions necessary to keep the way clear from the house to the cathedral. It is scarcely more than a mile up the broad sweep of Massachusetts avenue to the gray stone edifice that even in its uncompleted state juts boldly up against the western sky line of the city. Along that roadway soldiers, sailors and marines will be stretched to aid the police in keeping back the crowds, and these and the twenty-four non-commissioned men marching beside the hearse will be all that the United States can do to honor the bier of this former commander-in-chief.

Bethlehem chapel lies beneath the main floor line of the cathedral of which only the imposing eastern facade is yet in place. Within the gothic circle of stonework is the sanctuary with the nave and the north and south transepts still to be erected. All about are the temporary structures of the builders, but directly beneath the sanctuary lies the crypt chapel, deep amid the massive stonework of the foundations and with great stained glass windows facing eastward to the rising sun. The chapel is also known as Nativity chapel and throughout the decorations of its stone and woodwork runs the story of the birth of Christ.

Description of the Vault.

In the center of the floor of the chapel is a great slab of marble inset so that it forms a part of the flooring, with only the brass plates that cover steel eyes to permit the slab to be lifted marking it from others about. It is part of the flooring of the center aisle through which worshippers come and go at service time. Below is the vault with no other opening. It lies twelve feet beneath the floor and is fifteen feet square in ground space.

Already there sleep in the recesses of the vault a number of those whom the diocese would honor. There lie Bishop Satterlee, in whose memory the chapel is dedicated, and Bishop Claggett and Bishop Harding; and there too lie Henry Vaughan, the architect in whose brain the great building first took shape.

And there for a time will lie the casket containing the broken sheil from which the dauntless spirit of America's war president has burst its way at last. Whatever final resting place may be chosen for it; however great the memorial that may one day be reared to contain it, there can never be more assurance of peace and reverence than will surround it in that deep hewn marble vault.

Services at the cathedral before the casket is lowered to the vault will be as simple and brief as those at the home. Bishop Freeman will conduct them, aided by the two clergymen of Presbyterian faith with whom the dead man worshipped through long years. There will be no sermon or full ritual; only prayers and the hymns with the soft toned organ and the surpliced choir of men and boys to aid.

Chapel Is Small.

The chapel is so small that even with all seats removed and the few who can be admitted grouped close about the entrance to the vault, less than 600 persons can be crowded into the building.

There is no foreign government but wishes to share in the last tribute to the dead president. At the state department arrangements are being made that this may be done, always with Mrs. Wilson's wishes for little display or pomp held in mind. To give formal expression to the nation's grief, President Coolidge and all the members of his cabinet will stand beside the vault during the services with the great ones of official life about them.

And thus, with reverence and deep grief, but with almost nothing of splendid ceremony or pageantry, Woodrow Wilson will be laid to rest.

NOT LEGAL TO SUSPEND ACTIVITIES OF THE GOV'T

Washington, Feb. 4.—(By The A. P.) —Steps to suspend all activities of the government on Wednesday, the day of the funeral of Woodrow Wilson, were brought to a halt tonight by discovery of a law passed in 1893 expressly providing that executive departments of the government may not be closed as a mark of respect for a former official.

An executive order closing the departments was written out yesterday but signature was withheld until the date of the funeral was learned. President Coolidge was on the point of signing it today when the 1893 law was discovered.

Several suggestions as to a way out of the difficulty were discussed. One was that each department head inform the employes under him that they need not report for work, thereby actually but not technically closing the department, but this step, it was felt, would not accomplish the desired purpose of showing respect for the former president.

No decision having been reached, directions for a cabinet meeting were sent out although earlier in the day it had been decided to dispense with the session.

EULOGIES IN CONGRESS FOR WOODROW WILSON

Washington, Feb. 4.—(By The A. P.) —The clamor of partisan dissention was stilled in congress today in deference to the passing of Woodrow Wilson.

Neither in senate or house was any speech made or any action taken except with the purpose of paying tribute to the dead.

On the senate floor, where so often in past years the foreign policies of the fallen president have been the center of bitter contention, those of all parties joined in extolling the qualities of high idealism that guided him through the dark days of the great war.

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, leader of the republican and arch-enemy of the league of nations, was one of those who spoke in praise of Wilson the man. He said he had felt in common with others "a very deep sympathy" for the sufferings of Mr. Wilson "during his long illness and shared the general feeling of profound sorrow at his death. He described the former president as "a man of remarkable ability and of strong character to whose lot it has fallen to play

Catholic Priest Shot in Bridgeport

Rev. Father Dahme Fatally Wounded by Unknown Man on Main Street About 7 p. m.

Bridgeport, Feb. 4—Rev. Father Hubert F. Dahme, pastor of St. Joseph's German Catholic church, was shot and fatally wounded by an unidentified man on the street shortly after seven o'clock tonight. The shooting occurred on Main street in the heart of the theatre district.

The shooting occurred at 7.45 o'clock. According to a story told the police by a negro boy, Father Dahme and an unknown man were walking south on the west side of Main St. Just as the two men stepped off the sidewalk to cross High street, Father Dahme's companion suddenly turne dand drawing a revolver snot the priest in the head. Father Dahme fell on his fact on the street.

The assassin, according to the negro boy, ran west on High street and was out of sight in a minute. The only description of the assissin, by two boys who saw the shooting, was that he was of medium size, about 35 years old, and wore a heavy brown coat.

The shooting occurred opposite the Lyric theatre. The crowd were startled at hearing the shot of a revolver. As far as the police have been able to ascertain none of the theatre crowd saw the assassin.

Father Dahme died in St. Vincent's hospital at 10.10 without regaining consciousness.

While the entire police department was searching the city in search of the murdered, detectives at headquarters were questioning the housekeeper at St. Joseph's rectory for a possible motive.

Father Dahme was born in Achem Bavaria, Germany, and after completing his early studies there he came to this country entering Brighton seminary in Boston. He was ordained to the priesthood in Hartford 29 years ago. After remaining in St. Thomas seminary in Hartford for a few years, he came to Bridgeport, and in 1900 was appointed pastor of St. Joseph's church. He was about 56 years old.

He is survived by his mother, four brothers and a sister, all in Germany.

Father Dahme was curate in Westerly in Michael's church where he supplied for several months at a time when Fr. Briscoe was the curate.

COMMUNICATION IN WEST BROKEN BY SLEET STORM

New York, Feb. 4—Wire communication between the eastern and western parts of the United States was almost entirely broken tonight by a rain and sleet storm that blew out of the northwest from Canada and centered about Chicago which was completely isolated after eight o'clock except from northwestern points over which the storm had passed.

In a roughly drawn area from the eastern boundary of the Dakotas to the western rim of the great lakes the storm snapped telephone and telegraph wires. During the day the transcontinental wires were hampered, several important points being cut off at times and important circuits, such as those of the associated press, were re-routed to the south and west by way of St. Louis while other protective service to Pacific Coast newspapers were provided by a line crossing Canada from Winnipeg to St. Paul and Denver.

PASSENGER TRAIN SNOW-BOUND AT GREEN BAY, WIS.

Toledo, Ohio, Feb. 4—A radio message was intercepted here by L. J. Higgins, an electrician, asking that officials of the Northwestern Railroad at Chicago be notified that one of their passenger trains is snowbound at Green Bay, Wis., and that immediate assistance is needed.

Higgins said the message was sent from WPAP at Waupaca, Wis., and stated that telegraphic wires are down and all efforts to reach Chicago have been unavailing.

The message picked up by Higgins said:

"Northwestern train snow-bound near Green Bay, Wis. Notify Chicago offices of railroad that passengers are in need of immediate help."

NEW WAGE SCALE FOR N. H. ROAD ENGINEMEN

New Haven, Feb. 4—Representatives of the locomotive engineers and firemen of the New Haven road today conferred with officials of the road on the new wage scale and working agreement for the coming year. The original demand was for a 20 per cent. wage increase but it is understood that a compromise on a five per cent. basis will be taken into consideration.

It is expected that it will take a week or two to effect an agreement after which time a committee representing the conductors and firemen will be heard.

Petitions to Padlock 290 Places in N. York

New York, Feb. 4 — The United States district attorney's staff went before Federal Judge Knox today with 290 petitions for injunctions which would padlock New York saloons, cabarets and restaurants for persistent violation of the Volstead act.

The government attorneys obtained one such padlock order against a saloon on the West street waterfront and one tentative decree effective against the Gypsy Land cabaret in the theatrical district if prohibition is violated in that place within the next 10 days.

A petition for an injunction against Shanley's Forty-Third street restaurant was dismissed when it was learned the place had been closed months ago, allegedly because prohibition ruined business.

Undaunted at the sight of only one padlock order as a result of the day in court, the prosecutors announced they would proceed tomorrow against the other defendants, and that they were preparing bills against 400 more.

Actions against the Chateau-Thierry hotel and Leonard's ringside, both in the Times square section, and against the Greenwich Village mill are first on the docket for tomorrow.

DISMISSED FROM COLLEGE BECAUSE OF HIS MARRIAGE

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 4—Herbert C. Porter, sophomore in the College of Applied Science, Syracuse university, whose marriage to Miss Genevieve V. Bamford, Watertown High school, announced last Tuesday after a secret ceremony New Year's day, has been dismissed from the university by order of Chancellor Flint, it was made known today.

The chancellor said the dismissal of Porter was in order with the edict in which he placed a ban on student marriages.

Since the ban went into effect, a year ago, there have been numerous marriages among university students. In some cases if the students could show conclusively he was in a position to support a wife and the nuptials were not the result of a rapid fire courtship and a subsequent elopement, leniency was shown.

Elopements and secret marriages of any kind are decidedly out of the curriculum of the university tolerance, however, the chancellor said.

PARENTS HELD FOR MURDER OF DAUGHTER

Salem, N. J., Feb. 4—The body of six-year-old Miriam Atkinson, recovered from a well under the kitchen floor of her home in Woodstown, was today shown to her parents, who are in jail, here on a formal charge of murder.

Mrs. Bessie Atkinson, the mother, sobbed, as she view the small white casket, and begged to be allowed to touch the forehead of the dead child. Permission was granted her.

Robert Atkinson, the father, after glancing at the body, declined to make any comment, stating he had "told all he knew of the affair." A preliminary autopsy performed locally failed to reveal any traces of violence. Examination of the viscera for indications of poisoning has been delayed by the refusal of the state laboratories at Trenton to handle the case. Laboratory officials said it was not within their authority. The body was taken to Collingswood for burial late today.

MEXICAN REBELS RETREAT BEFORE FEDERAL FORCES

Mexico City, Feb. 4.—(By The A. P.) —President Obregon's hope for a decisive battle with the rebels on the shores of the Yoguria lagoon, near Valle De Santiago, was not realized, for the revolutionists retreated after an unimportant skirmish with the federal vanguard early Sunday morning. The forces of the rebel general Manuel M. Dieguez, dispersed in numerous bands over a vast area, probably with the purpose of counteracting the combined movement against him by the federal General, Gonzalo Escobar, and General Juan Jose Rios.

Escobar was in front of the rebels with the task of cutting off their advance toward Guadalajara, while Rios was in the rear of the rebels, driving from Salvatierra in order to cut off the retreat of Dieguez toward Morelia. These advices are contained in reports received today from federal aviators.

BOBBED HAIR AND SMALL HATS THE VOGUE FOR GIRLS

St. Louis, Feb. 4—Bobbed hair remains in favor and is a prime consideration of millinery designers, who for spring fashions have provided small hats of cloche, small poke and a close fitting shape, with brim upturned in front, the Millinery Jobbers' association today.

Shapes taken from the Directorie Period of France, will be featured, the announcement said, those effected by mildly being provided for young girls and the bobbed haired misses, and those more mannish styles inherited from milord being taken for the matrons toque.

While for the moment the predominating mode is declared to be the black Milan crown with black taffeta brim, spring styles will be colorful under the influence of the far east.

TREE ESCAPED CONVICTS SHOT DEAD BY GUARDS

Jefferson City, Mo., Feb.—(By the A. P.)—All three of the convicts who escaped from the Missouri penitentiar yearly today were shot and killed shortly after eight o'clock tonight by prison guards, who chased them from a barn about two and a half miles east of the city, according to reports received at the prison. The men fled from the barn and were riddled with bullets fired by the guards as they ran across an open field, the official said.

MARLIN PLANT, NEW HAVEN, SOLD AT PUBLIC AUCTION

New Haven, Feb. 4—The Marlin plant, a war-time munitions factory, was sold today at auction to Mrs. Lillian S. Haskell, of New York, for $50,000. Mrs. Haskell held a $150,000 mortgage on the property. The machinery was not included in the sale.

FORMER COLLEGE PROFESSOR WINS THE $100,000 BOK PRIZE

Charles Herbert Levermore of New York, a Student of International Relations—Identity Disclosed at a Public Meeting in the Academy of Music, Philadelphia—The Winning Peace Plan Was Selected Out of 22,165 Submitted—Mr. Levermore was Born Oct. 15, 1856, in Mansfield, Conn—Graduated from Yale College in 1879.

Philadelphia, Feb. 4.—(By the A. P.)—Charles Herbert Levermore, of New York, student of international relations, writer and former college professor, tonight was announced as the winner of the $100,000 prize offered by Edward W. Bok, Philadelphia publisher for the best plan to preserve peace among the nations of the world.

His identity was disclosed at a public meeting in the Academy of Music under the auspices of the Philadelphia forum and the policy committee of the American peace award.

As his name dropped from the lips of John W. Davis, Mr. Levermore came forward and received the $50,000 check, representing half of the prize given by Edward W. Bok, of Philadelphia.

The winning plan, which was made public January 7, was selected out of 22,165 submitted.

Briefly, the plan provides for American cooperation, under certain reservations, with a modified league of nations without the United States becoming a member. It also provides for adherence to the world court with the Hughes reservations, and for a commission of jurists to codify international law.

The winnter of the plan, the text of which was made public some weeks ago, the name of the author being kept secret, has long been a student of international affairs and has written a number of books on that general subject. He has been an instructor in various colleges, including the University of California and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and for eighteen years was president of Adelphi college, Brooklyn. He was born October 15, 1856, in Mansfield, Conn., and was graduated from Yale college in 1879. He also studied history and politics at Johns Hopkins university and received the degree of Ph. D., in 1886. He is a member of the republican party.

In 1913 Dr. Levermore left Adelphi college to become director of the college and university bureau of the World Peace Foundation in Boston. He returned to New York in 1916 to do secretarial work for the World Court League and later for the New York Peace Society and the League of Nations Union. Since 1917 he has been secretary of the New York Peace Society.

When the American Association for International Cooperation was formed he was named secretary and with other officers of that body helped form the League of Nations Non-Partisan Association in 1923.

In addition to numerous other publications Dr. Levermore is the author of a series of year books on the league of nations, chronicling the achievements of the league during each 12 months. Three of these have been published and a fourth is being prepared.

In acknowledging gratefully "the signal honor conferred upon me by the committee of judges and the generous reward that comes with that honor," Dr. Levermore said he felt "deeply conscious of the binding obligation which an honor places upon the recipient."

"The experience that culminates this evening," Dr. Levermore added, "constitutes for me both a crown and a challenge. It calls to continued service in the ranks, among those who are ever marching toward universal international cooperations for the common welfare and for the maintenance of peace with justice under law."

Coopration with other nations in the days of the two Hague conferences, Dr. Levermore asserted, "was equally acceptable to both of our great parties. "Such democrats as" Judge Parker, William Jennings Bryan, George Gray and John Bassett Moore supported it. Among republicans it was powerfully promoted from the seats of the mighty by Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft, by Andrew W. White, John Hay, Joseph H. Choate, and, last by not least, Elihu Root.

"Unfortunately since that time that earlier happy accord has been broken," he said. "This beautiful ideal has been enveloped in unlovely disguises of partisan ambitions and rivalries and envenomed by personal animosities. But beneath these alien wrappings the spirit yet lives."

The peace award winner paid tribute to former Presidents Wilson and Harding, say "it seems to me that all these statesmen have been responding, some more conspicuously than others, to underlying and controlling forces of centripetal international gravitation toward better democratic unity.

"These are the forces which made The Hague conferences possible and which made our entrance into the great war finally inevitable. These are the forces which are day by day drawing all nations together into closer interdependence, even against their wills. These forces are stronger than petty and selfish loyalties. No politician and no government can override them or set them aside or change their direction for long. Who can fight against the stars in their courses?"

Dr. Levermore recalled an excerpt from a letter President Harding wrote to Bishop Gailor when he had been in the White House two years and three months. It read:

"I do not believe any man can confront the responsibility of a president of the United States and yet adhere to the idea that it is possible for our country to maintain an attitude of isolation and aloofness in the world."

Proceeding, Dr. Levermore said:

"In the burst of moral fervor with which President Coolidge concluded his now famous message we find these sentences: 'Our first duty now is to help give stability to the world. We want idealism. We want the vision which lifts men and nations above themselves.' In that vision the league of nations cannot be a 'closed inclosure.'

"Some folks are born to be internationalists, some to be internationalists. We all known that the differences between these two groups cut across all existing party lines and do not coincide with the actual cleavages between democrats and republicans. The common welfare of nations touches each state, particularly the great states, at many points.

"A common welfare means common needs and common responsibilities. The need of one is the concern of all. So is even the desire of one; for it is now true of all of us around the world as never before, that we are, inevitably, members of one another."

LOCKED IN ROOM SEVEN DAYS BY INSANE BROTHER

Coatsville, Pa., Feb. 4—Locked in her room without food or water for seven days by a brother who had suddenly lost his mind, Miss Mary Mooney, of West Nottingham township, Chester county, died today from starvatio nand gangrene which developed as the result of a burn on the arm. Two dogs, locked in the room with her, were nearly dead when the women's plight was discovered by neighbors.

A week ago, Miss Mooney, who kept house for her brother, Isaac Mooney, a prosperous farmer, fell against a red hot stove and burned her arm severely. When she rushed to another part of the house to ask her brother's aid in dressing the wound he grabbed her up bodily, carried her to her room and locked the door. Later he returned with two dogs and locked them in the room with his sister.

Yesterday neighbors, inquiring regarding the whereabouts of Miss Mooney, noticed that her brother acted queerly. Police who went to the farm to investigate were met by a fusillade of shots from a double barreled shot gun and one of the officers was slightly wounded before Mooney finally was overpowered.

Forcing the door of Miss Mooney's room, the yfound her unconscious and the dogs so weak they could scarcely stand.

PLANS FOR PREVENTION OF SMUGGLING OF LIQUORS

Ottawa, Feb. 4.—Plans developed by the recent United States and Canada conference for the prevention of the smuggling of liquor across the international line have been sent to the cabinet council for ratification. It is understood that the plans will be ratified and announced simultaneously here and at Washington.

It is believed that the agreement provides for cooperation between Canadian and American customs agents to the extent that those on the United States side of the border will be furnished with information on the clearance of liquor shipments believed to be destined for the United States.

Exchange of witnesses and records and a new idea for the handling of stolen property are said to be features of the plans.

As a reward for cooperation in the prevention of smuggling, Canada, it was said, may be granted the right to transport liquor across Alaska to the Yukon territory.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

Republican and democratic leaders in congress eulogized Woodrow Wilson and then both the house and senate adjourned out of respect to his memory.

Advices were received by the state department disclosing a definite revolutionary movement against the de facto government of President Gutierrez of Honduras.

A SHARP REACTION IN STERLING EXCHANGE

New York, Feb. 4. — Sterling exchange, which had a sensational rise of nearly 10 cents last week, forfeited nearly one-half of its gain today, dropping 4 1-2 cents to $4.30 1-2 on comparatively light trading. Other exchanges yielded in sympathy.

Absence of a demand for sterling bills, which were pressed on the market, was the only reason given for the sharp drop by local foreign exchange dealers, who reported that the local rates merely reflected the earlier weakness in London.

LENINE MEETING HELD IN MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

New York, Feb. 4.—Fifteen thousand persons who crowded Madison Square Garden to capacity and several thousand more in an overflow meeting at the Central Opera house tonight heard radical speakers extoll the late Nicolai Lenine, premier of Soviet Russia, while 500 policemen and detectives, drawn from every precinct in the city, maintained order.

BROKERS' MESSENGER AND SECURITIES MISSING

New York, Feb. 4.—Police announced tonight that Jack Lombardi, messenger for Hirshfeld and Stern, stock brokers, disappeared today with securities valued at $100,000. Lombardi, police said, entered the employ of the firm two weeks ago when he was engaged through an employment agency.

TORNADO IN INDIANA CAUSED $100,000 DAMAGE

Evansville, Ind., Feb. 4—A tornado accompanied by rain and hail, struck at Haubstadt, Indiana, 17 miles north of here late today causing damage estimated at $100,000 to orchards, outbuildings and barns. Telephone communication was cut off.

WILLIMANTIC

In honor of her approaching marriage, February 21, with James McNally, of Norwich Town, Miss Marcella Kegler was given a surprise party Monday evening at the local Tea Room by employes of the Rockville Willimantic Lighting Co., office. Miss Kegler was escorted to the Tea Room at 6 o'clock where she was met by sixteen friends. The party opened with a supper with the following menu: Fruit cocktail, chicken patties, green peas, ice cream, cake and coffee. The merrymakers then assembled in an ante-room where the future bride was presented beautiful gifts of cut-glass, linen, silver, pictures, etc.

The rooms were prettily arranged in Valentine decorations, with Valentine napkins, place cards and favors of red paper cups and saucers filled with candy hearts. The gifts were cleverly placed in a large Valentine box. Felicitous thanks were expressed by Miss Kegler, before the party adjourned to attend a motion-picture show. Others present were: Margaret Hutchins, Bessie Hochberg, Elizabeth Humes, Eleanor Moriarty, Eleanor Foote, Vesta Stone, Albertine Coutue, Corinne Burgess, Doris Phelps, Evelyn Beaulieu, Rae Havrin, Margaret Prue, Jane Reid, Laura Snow and Helen Loisell. The decorations were by the Misses Moriarty and Beaulieu.

Charged on two counts, reckless driving and operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor, Charles Carpenter of Windham pleaded guilty in the Mansfield town court, Monday forenoon, and was fined a [illegible] plus costs

Justice of the Peace George H. Andrews, [illegible] driving under the influence of liquor and $25 for reckless driving. A thirty day jail sentence was also imposed, but was suspended.

Carpenter settled for the entire bill which amounted to $141.95. He was arrested Sunday afternoon after his machine, an Essex, had collided with a Dort car driven by Forrest Adams, of Stafford, opposite the Cold Springs farm in the town of Mansfield, a short distance from the city line on the Stafford-Willimantic road. Adams stated that he noticed that Carpenter was approaching him in a reckless manner and he turned his machine over to one side of the road but he could not avoid a collision. The cars crashed, Carpenter's machine striking the Dort car in the left rear wheel. The Dort was pushed off the road and the two rear wheels were demolished. The left front wheel on the Windham man's machine was pulled off and the axle bent.

State Policeman John Highrain, of the Stafford Springs barracks, was called and after an investigation placed Carpenter under arrest. Bonds of $300 were furnished by a local business man.

After the court session a warrant was made out for the arrest of Louis Reil of this city, who was riding with Carpenter at the time of the accident. Reil was presented in the Mansfield court at noon and pleaded guilty to intoxication. Justice of the Peace Andrews imposed a fine of $7 and costs, amounting to $21.25 which was paid.

The State Police barracks at Stafford Springs will probably become known as the habitat of the "Five H's". Through a peculiar coincidence the family name of each of the five officers stationed at the barracks has H for its initial letter. The officers are, Sergeant Harmon, Officers Hulburt, Hardesty, Heinold and the newest arrival at the barracks, Officer Highrain.

Twenty visitors from various cities throughout Connecticut will be in this city this (Tuesday) evening to hear Walter W. Husband, United States commission of immigration at Washington, D. C., deliver his lecture at the February meeting and supper of the local Chamber of Commerce. The Willimantic chamber was fortunate in securing a speaker who is so thoroughly acquainted with the immigration problem which is stirring the entire country. The visitors will come from Norwich, New London, Putnam, Manchester, Hartford and New Haven. Mr. Husband is considered one of the country's foremost authorities on this vital problem and there is eagerness to hear a message from the inside on immigration. Supper will be served at 6:30 o'clock by members of the Woman's Relief Corp and after a short business session Mr. Husband will be introduced.

There are two changes in the faculty of Windham high school as the second half of the year begins. Miss Edith W. Moore of Richmond, Ky., replaces Miss Freure as teacher of freshman English; and Mrs. Marion Maxwell of Manchester, Conn., has been secured to substitute for the remainder of the year as science instructor, succeeding Miss Lillian Sherwood.

Miss Moore was graduted from Maryville College, Tenn., and has taught with success for two years. She has been granted an A. M. degree by Columbia University for a year of graduate study in methods of teaching English. Mrs. Maxwell is a graduate of Syracuse University and has taken two courses in Teachers' College. She has taught in the high schools of East Hartford and Haverhill, Mass., with ability.

Although the new teachers are well qualified the loss of Miss Sherwood and Miss Freure is a serious one to the town of Windham. Proof is again given to the high esteem in which the local high school is held as a recruiting ground. Within recent years it has furnished eight teachers to Springfield alone, and over twenty to Hartford, New Haven, Waterbury and similar cities where higher salaries are paid for this type of service.

Miss Freure has been connected with the Windham High faculty since September 1921, was beloved by all her pupils. She was president of the local Teachers' club last year and was the organizer of the high school dramatic club in which she directed several short plays in the school assembly and before public audiences. Miss Freure has already started work in Erasmus High school, Brooklyn, N. Y., which place is near her home.

Miss Sherwood has been in Windham High school since September 1919. She took a sincere interest in the personal welfare and progress of her pupils.

In addition to day work, Miss Sherwood taught the continuation class in evening school where her teaching was marked with success. Miss Sherwood began her new duties as teacher of science in the high school of Bridgeport Monday morning of this week.

Mrs. Joseph Cyr, 30 Windham was given a surprise party at her home recently on her sixty-first birthday. A musical program was carried out and games were enjoyed. The hostess served refreshments and a decorated birthday cake with sixty-one candles was cut. Among other gifts Mrs. Cyr received gold pieces from Miss Irma Cyr and Master Ulcide Sylvester.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Henry Cyr, Mr. and Mrs. Hormisdas Cyr, and daughter Irene, Mrs. Rose A. Sylvester and family, Vivian, Delvina, Lillian, Leona, Aquilla and Ulcide Sylvestre, Charles Pelton and Edward Sharkey of Rockville.

Rev. William H. Gane, 72, died suddenly from uraemic poisoning at his home, 324 Valley street Monday morning at 3.30 o'clock. Mr. Gane was born in Ingersoll, Ontario, Canada, July 10, 1851, a son of W. H. H. and Elizabeth Guesford Gane.

Mr. Gane was a Congregational clergyman for over forty years. He had been retired from the ministry for some ten years. His first pastorates were in Canada, and he was later pastor in Petersborough, N. H., for a period of seven years and at Greenfield Hill for a similar period. Prior to his retirement he held a pastorate in Jewett City where he had been for six years. At the time of his death, Mr. Gane was the senior member of the firm of Gane and Son, Church street, printers, but he retired from active duties about a year ago. He started in the printing business in September 1913. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emeline Gane; a son, William S. Gane, a daughter, Mrs Norman Pultz of this city; and two grand-daughters, Sylvia Gane of this city and Doris Bowen of Melrose, Mass. Mr. Gane was a member of Peterborough Lodge, I. O. O. F.

Charles Eldridge, of Willington, who died Friday afternoon after a short illness with pneumonia was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Eldridge and has always lived on the home farm with his sisters, Miss Mary Eldridge and Miss Annie Eldridge. He also leaves a brother, William Eldridge and two half sisters. The funeral was held Sunday afternoo nat 2 o'clock at the church on the hill with prayer at the home at 1.30 o'clock by Rev. Earl W. Darrow of Holyoke, Mass. The services were largely attended by townspeople.

Charles Edward Stanley died late Sunday afternoon in Stetson Corner, Brooklyn, after a long illness. Mr. Stanley had lived there for about two years. He leaves his wife, Mrs Sa[illegible]Row Stanley; a brother, John H. Stanley of Norwich; and three sisters, Mrs. A. H. Thuotta of Boston, Mrs. H. M. Hart of Laconia, N. H., and Mrs. J. K. Martin of Concord, N. H.

Rev. W. O. Berckman of Colchester conducted a committal service at the grave, at the funeral of Mrs. Amelia A. Bennett which were held Sunday afternoon. The bearers were, Clayton Easterbrooks, Fred Woodward, Walter Greiner and Charles H. Buckingham, J. C. Lincoln Co., were in charge.

A session of the Columbia town court, held Monday morning, with Justice of the Peace Hubert P. Collins on the bench marked what will probably be the final chapter in the long standing fued between Mayor Lasky and Steve Eisler, both residents. Grange Juror Joseph N. Clark was prosecutor, Lasky was charged with assault and battery on Eisler on Saturday, January 19. Lasky pleaded not guilty through Attorney Gaucher of this city. Eisler testified that on various occasions since last July Lasky's cows and horses had wandered onto his property and had caused considerable damage. The owner had been notified of this state of affairs but he had taken no steps to prevent further inroads being made on witnesses's property. January 19 Eisler found one of Lasky's horses in his barn and he went to his neighbor and told him about it and as Lasky was taking his horse Eisler warned him that this had better be the last time that his stock bothered him. Lasky is alleged to have struck Eisler, knocking him down, then kicking him in the face and injuring his eyes. Dr. W. L. Higgins of South Coventry testified to giving medical treatment to Eisler, who was badly marked up and had a bloodshot eye.

Lasky admitted that there had been a fight, but he could not recollect how it started. He denied deliberately kicking his opponent, although it might have happened while they were rolling on the ground. Lasky said that Eisler tore off one of his trouser legs and tried to bit his ankle.

Lasky was found guilty by Justice Collins and a fine of $5 and costs, amounting to $26.15 was imposed and paid.

John White of Scotland will be before the town court at the town hall in that Place Tuesday night charged with operating his Ford auto truck without registration or markers. Upon complaint of a Scotland party, Officer Highrain of the Stafford Springs barracks went to Scotland Sunday afternoon and made the arrest. White was released, when his automobile was put up in a local garage as surety for his appearance in court.

Do Your Teeth Shine

Like so many teeth you see now?

Make this free test

Here is a way to whiter teeth, which millions now employ. A way to cleaner, safer teeth. You see the results in added beauty wherever you look today. Let this test show you what it means to you.

Combat that film

Teeth are clouded by a film—that viscous film you feel. Under old ways of brushing much of it clings and stays. It soon discolors and forms dingy coats to mar the beauty of the teeth.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs breed by millions in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea.

Modern science has found ways to fight film. One disintegrates the film, one removes it without harmful scouring.

Protect the Enamel

Pepsodent disintegrates the film, then removes it with an agent far softer than enamel. Never use a film combatant which contains harsh grit.

Many careful tests proved these methods effective. A new-type tooth paste has been created to apply them daily. The name is Pepsodent.

Now that method is bringing to homes the world over a new dental era.

Many new benefits

Pepsodent also multiplies the tooth-protecting agents in saliva. Dental science has in late years proved all these things essential.

Learn what they mean to you. Send the coupon for a 10-Day Tube. Note how clean the teeth feel after using. Mark the absence of the viscous film. See how teeth become whiter as the film-coats disappear. You will be amazed and delighted. Cut out coupon now.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

W. C. T. U. meeting, Wednesday, at 3 p. m., at the Salvation Army headquarters.

AT THE PALACE

One of the best juggling acts ever seen on a local stage is presented by Selma Braats and Co., Miss Braats, who comes to the Palace theatre direct from the Loew theatre in Boston is recognized as the most original feminine juggler on the American stage. She came to America recently after a successful tour of the European stage and brings with her many of the clever stunts of the continent. Her act is undoubtedly the best in its line now playing in big time vaudeville.

Leo and Grace Carmen have a clever little novelty singing and patter act that gets across in fine shape. The act is original in its humor and the singing of Miss Carmen is indeed a treat.

Miss Lillian Gonne, former musical comedy star, is seen in a clever act that amply displays her talents as an entertainer. Miss Gonne's act is decidedly unique and one that pleases as the artiste is very versatile and cleverly flits from one character to another portraying each with exceptional ability.

Roy LaPearl has what is billed as "The Act Indescribable", and that is just what it is. Mr. LaPearl is a clever comedian and his act is one that always appeals to the audience it is one of those acts that has to be seen to be appreciated.

The Emerald Revue, an Irish minstrel act with seven people, is the closing act and is one that is very good. The singing and dancing number given by the company are very good.

The feature picture is Jealous Husbands, featuring Jane Novak and Earle Williams together with the youthful star Ben Alexander. A comedy and news weekly complete the bill.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Mrs. Leslie Carter

Of special interest to the theatergoers of Norwich is the announcement that on Friday next, at the Broadway Mrs. Leslie Carter will appear in a dramatization of Olive Higgins Prouty's novel "Stella Dallas" be Gertrude Purcell and Harry Wagstaff Gribble.

With Mrs. Carter have always been associated the finest traditions of the stage and the announcement of her appearence in any city is hailed with delight.

"Stella Dallas" is a story of a wife, a husband and the other woman. Interwoven with the lives of these three is the future of an only daughter and upon the wife, Stella Dallas, devolves the problem of the unavoiling of those ties which would mean for the adored and adoring daughter unhappiness. The story is handled in a straightforward manner and without that suggestiveness which usually haunts the triangle. The book has been one of the most read of the year and the announcement that Mrs. Carter was to play the title role of the dramatization by Gertrude Purcell and Harry Wagstaff Gribble immediately made the play one of the outstanding successes of the year.

Mrs. Leslie Carter in any city and in any theatre means capacity houses and standing room only. Manager Danielson of the Broadway theatre is now receiving mail orders, which when accompanied by cash, check or money order are filled in the order of their receipt. Prices 50-100-150-200-250 add. 15 per cent. tax.

Sale of seats opens at box office Wednesday Feb. 6, 10 a. m.

Vaudeville Proves Popular at the Strand

The new policy of vaudeville and feature pictures at the Strand opened Monday and is proving popular. The vaudeville bill offered for the first half of the week is a very well arranged variety program with clever artists. The feature act is composed of a rich setting, attractive dancing, music, both vocal and violin constitute the symphony of tone and color presented by Mildred Andre and company. Mildred Andre and company is a quintette of versatile artists. There are four clever and attractive girls and a man. The six together make the symphony of tone and color a rainbow.

Perce and La Flor have one in store for you. They do anything for a thrill and they jeopardize their necks for one. Peres and La Flor are dancers, ground tumblers and equilibrists. It is in this last that they provide the thrills. Back somerset from an 18 foot ladder to a hand stand certainly is sensational. This is their feat de resistance.

Harry Braden is called The Optimist. In a dozen minutes of song and patter he succeeds in giving the brighter side of life a high polish.

In the original comedy Oddity presented by Stutz and Bingham is comedy singing and talking. Comedy of the bright, breezy kind, singing of the lilting melodious kind, by players of the thoroughly likeable kind.

Gimme The Makin's Making's of fun and songs are all Eddie Allen and Doris Canfield require. With makings they can turn out as nifty a skit as could be desired. They have the makings and the result is a skit called Gimme the Makins. It is a dozen minutes of conversation and song, conversation that is witticism after witticism, and songs well sung by pleasing singers.

The screen attraction The Satin Girl, Mabel Forrest plays the title role in this, her first Grand - Asher starring vehicle produced by Ben Wilson and directed by Arthur Rosson.

And the mystery keeps pace with the love interest, and the thrills are almost constant, Norman Kerry is featured as the doctor, Richard Taunton; Marc MacDermott is the arch-crook, Fargo, Clarence Burton is the detective.

Adam Hull Shirk wrote and Arthur Statter with George H. Plympton, adapted, the picture.

Breed Theatre

While no massive structures or colossal sets were erected for the production, the great star's first serious production, the settings were designed with infinite care and carried out with a fidelity to detail to be in keeping with the story. The boudoir and apartment of Marie St. Clair, the character portrayed by Edna Purviance, is most exquisite. While gaudy to a degree it is in keeping with the life she lives. The furnishings and draperies are the finest of French importations, showing a no small fortune in interior decorations. The home of Pierre Revel, the richest man in Paris, reveals the most dignified interior settings ever exhibited, all carried out in good taste, presenting to a degree the character of this man of wealth and pleasure.

The cafe dining room of the Paris hotel is an exact replica of a world famous Parisian rendezvous, depicting such true to life atmosphere it makes the spectator feel he is sitting at another table interestedly watching a subtle drama of life being enacted before him, forgetting that he is in artists and art models and hilarious parties presents such realism of life in the Latin quarter of Paris, that anyone who has visited these famous Parisian haunts will feel as a participant in the scenes.

The rural scenes and peasant life of France are portrayed in settings of piquant charm and sweetness, presenting a distinct contrast to the surroundings of the life in the gayest city of the world.

The Pathe news and an Educational comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Palace

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame," the massive and much heralded film production of Victor Hugo's story masterpiece which swept into overnight fame in New York, will be given its local premier at the Palace theatre Sunday, when it begins a limited engagement.

Never before, it is said has there been offered a picture production representing so stupendous a cost—$1,500,000—never a film presentation so exact in its details, so artistic in its conception, so wonderful in the acting of its 75 principals, two hundred sub-principals and in the handling of the mob scenes in which more than 3,000 persons take part.

Lon Chaney, admittedly the finest interpreter of unusual character roles on either stage or screen, plays the stellar part of Quasimodo, the deformed bell-ringer of Notre Dame, with Ernest Torrence as Chopin, the underworld king; and Patsy Ruth Miller as Esmeralda.

Carl Laemmle, who founded Universal City out in Southern California, it is said, has achieved something there which awakens the utmost admiration. He has taken Hugo's rather turgid melodramatic novel, and after building a replica of Paris' famous cathedral, he has retold Hugo's story in pictures—vital, vivid pictures that hold the attention and excite the admiration by their undeniable power and beauty.

The spirit of the story is Quasimodo, the hunchback, as elemental creature, twisted in body and restricted in mind, who haunts the great church. Quasimodo, as Mr. Chaney presents him, is said to be a grotesque monster, and yet under the forbidding aspect the actor succeeds in making the character human and pitiful. His daring poses on the projecting gargoyles of the cathedral, his bold descent, stone by stone, of the front facade of the great church, his hazardous swinging on the great bells at the risk of his life, the gruesome scene of his castigation in the market place and the pathos of his final act as, dying, he rings his own death knell on his beloved bells, are features, it is said, that make the Hunchback of Notre Dame" the most noted film production to date.

In constructing the Cathedral of Notre Dame at Universal City an army of carpenters, masons and other mechanics were employed. The building is an exact replica in every detail as the famous cathedral looked in 1482. It is declared to be an extraordinary feat and an archeologic and technical triumph. In addition to the cathedral, other historical sets include exact reproductions of the Court of Miracles, Place du Parvis, Palace de Justice, interior of the Bastille and seven Noble Mansions. This give a faint idea of this, the accredited most important production, not only in the history of the Universal Film company, but of that of any producing concern in the world. Wallace Worsley was the director.

Among the other principals in the big cast are: Norman Kerry who plays Phoebus; Tully Marshall, as Louis XI; Raymond Hatton as Grimgeire; Nigel de Brulier, as Don Claude and Gladys Brookwell as the crazy Godule.

"The Hunchback of Notre Dame," is being presented by a regular "road company" just as regular theatrical attractions are offered. The company carries its own special orchestra which renders the special score written for the production by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld, the noted New York impressario. Because of its great cost of production, it is to be shown only in theatres given to regular theatrical productions. Only ten companies have been organized. It is announced positively the production will not be seen in movie theatre within the next year or more, if then.

BON TON CORSET EXPERT AT THE SPECIALTY SHOP

Dainty and enticing were the models in blue and silver or in shades of pink, in the newest Bon Ton corsets, demonstrated Monday by Miss Milne, at Caron's Specialty shop, 140 Main street, Norwich. Miss Milne is direct from the Bon Ton Salon in New York, so that patrons may feel sure of having the very latest models, as the proper foundation for the spring frock or suit.

The new design is extremely low, and has a V-dip at the waist-line in the back which gives grace to the figure. Another novelty is the rubber insert at the side, while for full figures there is shown the model with elastic thight-reducer over which woman exclaim in delight. The daintiest, yet most durable coutil or broche is used in developing these corsets. The front lace design continues strong in favor, while the Unda-Bak style, with either front or back lace, is a charming cor-set. Newest of all is the brassiere cor-set with side fastening, which appeals to women who favor sports wear. This is in pink and comes in all sizes; the price is $1.50. Miss Milne fits these splendid corsets, so there is no risk of a misfit. The Bon Ton style is priced from $3.50 to $15. The reliable Royal Worcester models range in price from $1.50 to $3.50 and the wonderfully reducing Adjusto, the salvation of the woman of full figure is selling this season at $5. Miss Milne is making appointments for every day this week, for fitting and giving corset advice.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

At a conference held in the rooms of the Girls' club, Monday afternoon, steps were taken for holding a well baby conference in Danielson, at the town hall, February 8. Dr. A. E. Ingraham, director of the bureau of child hygiene of the state department of health, outlined the program proposed for Danielson and the methods to be taken in arousing the interest among mothers that is necessary to the success of the undertaking.

To this end, a house-to-house canvass will begin February 11, and will cover the entire borough. Mothers will be interviewed and every effort made to interest them in having babies brought to the conference—all babies from birth to six years of age, and especially supposedly well babies, that the children may be examined, weighed and generally checked up with a view to definitely establishing their exact condition of health by scientific methods. If any weakness or physical fault is found, it will be made known to the mother, who may refer the matter to the family physician. Such conferences have been held throughout the state with impressive success, and it is hoped to do as much, without charge, for Danielson's babies as has been done for those of many cities and towns.

Mrs. Alfred L. Reed is chairman of the committee that will be in charge of the house to house canvass, in which it is hoped every mother of young children will become interested.

At Monday's meeting Mrs. L. S. Ingalls represented the Girls' club, Mrs. A. L. Reed, the Killingly Woman's club; Mrs. James Merrick Paine, the town school committee; Mrs. A. H. Armington the Civic Federation; Miss Helen Perkins the D. A. R.; Mrs. L. E. Kennedy the Catholic Woman's Welfare council. The chamber of commerce will cooperate in the conference, but was not represented at Monday's meeting.

The conference will be well organized. Interpreters will be on hand that every facility for understanding what is done and why it is being done may be available for mothers who do not speak or understand English.

When he pleaded guilty before Judge W. Fenner Woodward, in the town court, Monday morning, Adelbert Hebert of Goodyear, caught in the net of raiding officers Saturday evening, was fined $300 and costs, a total of $340.20, and given a sentence of 30 days in jail, execution of the sentence being suspended during good behavior.

Hebert was fined $100 on a reputation charge and $200 on keeping with intent to sell. Some moonshine and part of a still were seized at his place.

The case of John Valle, arrested Saturday night at a house on Academy street where a small amount of liquor was seized, was continued until this morning that Valle might have opportunity to confer with counsel. Continuance also was allowed in the case of Antonio Perry of Goodyear, whose place in that village was raided Saturday evening. Perry has retained counsel and the case will be heard Thursday.

Obadiah Butler, of the Connecticut [illegible] and his associates in control of the company, were [illegible] Monday. The [illegible] questions was not given out, but it had to do with a possible [illegible] of the [illegible] confronting them. [illegible] is announced that [illegible] holding was over a [illegible] have turned over to [illegible] trust for voting purposes. [illegible] block of nine [illegible] shares required from the Tracy [illegible] the necessary [illegible] has been obtained from [illegible] this voting trust [illegible] have possibly as much as two-thirds of all the outstanding [illegible] common and will be [illegible] the policy of the corporation regardless of the [illegible] holders of this issue of stock.

P. J. Caldwell, who has been a dominant figure in the affairs of the Connecticut Mills company for the past decade, is now numbered among the minority stockholders of the Class A common stock. His contract as sales representative of the company will be terminated in April, it is understood.

Before Justice George Torrey, at Central Village, Monday afternoon, the cases of Moosup persons ordered into court as the result of Saturday raids in that town were disposed by imposing heavy fines and costs. The accused were charged with keeping with intent to sell. Fines of $200 were imposed in each case. With costs these amounted in the case of John Jonchzyzak to $272.42, in the case of Mary Lepack to $268.44, and in the case of Celina Lavallee to $258.04. Officers who took part in the raids were in attendance at the court session.

Sealed bids were received Monday for the contract of constructing the proposed addition to the plant of the Paco Manufacturing company. The bids were filed with Francis E. Stone of the Danielson Development association, which will undertake to finance the construction of the addition. No subscriptions have been solicited as yet, the committee in charge desiring to know in an exact way how much money will be required before proceeding to raise the money.

Success of the association's program will mean much industrially to Danielson. What it will be able to do will be ascertained within the next few weeks.

At the home of his sister, Mrs. Agnes Barrowclough, at Dayville Four Corners, Monday afternoon, funeral services for Joseph Foster, for many years a resident at North Oxford, were conducted by Rev. Albert Jepson of Warehouse Point, formerly the pastor of St. Alban's church, Danielson. Burial was at North Oxford. The bearers were Byron Barrowclough, Joseph Foster, William Foster, Seth Foster, Ronald Mowry and Harry Brearly. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Monday afternoon, at the undertaking rooms of A. F. Wood, a funeral service for Mrs. Carl Newcombe, who died in Foster, was conducted by Rev. H. H. Conklin, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were J. A. Olsen, F. H. Greener, Henry E. Anderson and Winfield Colwell.

In some of the villages of Killingly harvesting of the season's supply of ice is now underway. The ice being put up is 10 and 11 inches and of good quality. Cutting of Danielson's supply is not underway as yet. Ice, where the cutting is to be done, made some gain Sunday and Monday, but is not heavy enough for profitable cutting yet. Another cold wave of three or four days' duration would make the ice ready for cutting.

This (Tuesday) evening when the chamber of commerce meets it is expected to have before it for consideration the petition of the clerks of the borough—or those of them who have signed, and this is the majority—for a Thursday half-holiday throughout the year excepting at the Christmas season. To the clerks this petition is all important. The chamber also may take some action relative to a bonus for the ex-service men.

Miss Margaret Sullivan of Academy street will leave today (Thursday) for a visit with friends in Hartford.

Henry McDermott of Woonsocket was a visitor at his home here over the week-end.

State police from the local barracks were at North Woodstock, Monday afternoon, in connection with the prosecution of cases against persons engaged in a raid in Woodstock during the early hours of Sunday morning.

Mrs. C. B. Wheatley has sent cards to friends here from St. Cloud, Fla., where she is spending the winter.

Mrs. Bousquet of Whitinsville is visiting relatives in Danielson.

Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Arrigan of Carroll street are entertaining Mrs. Arrigan's niece, Miss Josephine eBaudry, of Providence.

In the Black Hill section, between Central Village and Canterbury, Monday afternoon, the same group of officers that raided in Moosup Saturday night made three more successful raids in the Polish quarter and ordered the men raided to appear in court at Central Village this afternoon.

Skating is in great vogue with Danielson's young people just now, though a light snowfall during Monday promised to spoil the ice for the time being.

A young man who went on the warpath at Central Village, after loading up with firewater, smashed out windows in Lawrence's store and in what is known as the Tillinghast building a little farther along the street. He paid for his indiscretions in court on Monday.

Numbers of ex-service men here are resentful over the propaganda against the granting of a bonus and do not like the idea of the chamber of commerce passing on the matter if the vote is to be adverse.

Tuesday of next week there will be observed in the schools of Lincoln's birthday.

The flag on the state armory and other flags in town were at half-mast Monday, out of respect to Former President Woodrow Wilson.

PUTNAM

Some cases were assigned for trial, judgments ordered, uncontested divorces granted, and a number of other interesting things done at the short calendar session of the Windham county superior court Monday, Judge George E. Hinman presiding.

Of special interest was the appeal filed in behalf of Dr. William D. McCormick of Willimantic, from the decision of the state board of health in revoking his license to practice medicine and surgery in this state. Notice of the appeal will be served on Stanley H. Osborne, health commissioner of Connecticut, and James E. Hare, secretary of the eclectic examining board. This appeal, filed by Attorney Samuel B. Harvey of Willimantic, is practically identical with the one filed during the past month by Mr. Harvey in behalf of Dr. Raymons C. Prisque, of Dayville, whose license also has been revoked. The matter is made returnable in the superior court for the county on the first Tuesday in March.

Dr. McCormick began practice in Willimantic in July of last year. He formerly practised in the town of Mansfield.

Of particular interest in Putnam was the matter presented to the court in relation to the affairs of the Manhasset Manufacturing company by Judge Sabin S. Russell of Danielson, counsel for the receivers, this being for authority to compromise claims by and against the Sterling Tire company, a Delaware corporation.

Judge Russell explained that the Manhasset company has claims on five contracts with the tire concern for $328,000. Included in these claims is a bill of $20,760 for tire fabric actually delivered during 1920. The remainder of the claims of the mill company are based on the alleged refusal of the tire company to accept other deliveries as called for in the contracts.

Against these the tire company has counter claims approximating $651,000 and based on alleged failure of the mail company to make deliveries in accordance with agreements existing between the contending corporations.

By the time receivers for the mill company had been appointed on Oct. 25, 1923, there was pending in the supreme court for the state of New York an action in which the Sterling Tire company had been made a defendant by the Manhasset company.

Also at that time the tire company had instituted suit against the mill company in a federal court in Massachusetts, seeking through this action to recover $111,000 for failure to deliver material as per contracts. In connection with this action the tire company had attached property of the Manhasset company in Massachusetts and also money the mill company had in banks in that state.

Meanwhile negotiations between the tire company and the mill company were underway to compromise all the claims and progress toward an agreement had been made. These negotiations have continued since the appointment of the receivers and have reached a state where the tire company has given the mill company a certified check for $1,000 and notes amounting to $9,780. With the approval of the court, Judge Russell said, the concerns will exchange releases of all claims against each other, excepting the notes for $9,780 mentioned, and will discontinue all court actions. This accomplished will be a great aid to the receivership, for with the mill properties and cash in Massachusetts banks released from attachment, the receivers will be in a position to expedite the sale of the mill company's property.

The court directed Judge Russell to prepare the necessary order.

During Monday's session of the of the court, Attorney E. C. Morse, representing Mrs. Rood in the case of Nellie Rood vs Alfred W. Rood, appeared, to present a motion that the court punish Mr. Rood for contempt of court because of Rood's failure to pay his wife alimony of $200 and a $4 weekly allowance for their child, as ordered when their divorce action was tried here, during December. Attorney S. B. Harvey, who represented Mr. Rood said that he is informed by Mr. Rood's brother that an effort to get the $200 was being made and that the money probably would be paid over within a few days. Mr. Harvey said that he did not dispute the charge that neither the alimony nor weekly allowance had not been paid.

Judge Hinman said that he did not want to commit Rood out of hand, but if the money is not forthcoming by the next short calendar session of the court he would commit him at that time.

Several uncontested divorce matters were heard during the session. Mrs. Laura A. Tourtellotte of this city was granted a decree from Alfreton A. Tourtellotte, on the ground that the husband had been habitually intemperate. The couple were married January 24, 1914, and have three children. Mrs. Tourtellotte told of the constant excessive drinking by her husband and of how it cost him his job with the Grosvenordale company about a year after they were married. Thereafter they went from place to place, living for a time in New Haven and later in Worcester. At times the husband left her, twice he sold their furniture, she testified, once getting $50 for their household goods, this while he was on a drinking spree. His gross intemperance continued over a period of six years. Last May Mrs. Tourtellotte left him and has since worked to support herself and aid in keeping her children.

In allowing the decree Judge Hinman, upon request of counsel, ordered Tourtellotte to pay alimony at the rate of $10 per week. Tourtellotte is a boss painter, it was represented in court, and capable of earning at least $7 a day.

On the ground of desertion, a divorce was granted Bert A. Lewis, of South Windham, from Docena G. Lewis. The couple married September 3, 1917, and desertion was on April 10, 1920. Mr. Lewis told the court that his wife declared upon leaving that she did not want to live with him any longer. Mr. Lewis, represented by Judge Frank H. Foss, did not ask for the custody of a child born of the union.

Alice C. Montville was granted a divorce from Peter J. Montville. The ground was habitual intemperance. The couple married here March 2, 1905. Montville previously had been married and was a widower with children. Excessive and constant drinking of liquor by Montville finally led to a rupture of the peacefulness of the home. Four years ago Mrs. Montville left her husband in August and remained away until November. He continued to drink and eventually threatened her life, she said. She left him finally in 1922. Mrs. Montville says she is now working in Woonsocket.

The final matter up for consideration at the session was a motion to hold Carl A. Stahnke in contempt for failure to pay almony to his wife, Harriet J. Stahnke, of Bethany, this state. This couple have been in the courts of the state in divorce proceedings for several years and there have been two trials, with another pending. In one instance the wife was the plaintiff, in the other the husband brought the suit. They have children. After the second trial, the couple having children, Judge Avery did not grant a decree, but sought to have the contending couple reconciled. This did not come about. Under a court order, the father has custody of the children, but according to counsel for Mrs. Stahnke, has declined to allow Mrs. Stahnke to visit them during a period of two weeks each year, as the court issuing the custody order stipulated. Neither has Stahnke paid his wife alimony since last April, and her counsel said she is in need of the money because, on account of an injury she received when her husband struck her, she is unable to work very much.

Judge Hinman reserved decison and took the papers in the case. He said that he would see Judge Avery next week for a review of certain phases of the case.

Cases for next week and the following week were assigned as follows: Thursday, February 14, at Willimantic, first case, Clinton C. Rood vs Dominick Mendillo; second case for for Thursday, the 14th, Queenie Watson vs John Beckett; third case for the 14th, Laura B. Corcoran vs Thomas J. Corcoran, Jr.; February 19, at Putnam, Blanche Lamiotte vs Arsene Lamiotte; second case for the 19th, The Danielson Trust Co., Admr., vs E. Winfield Scott; February 20 at Willimantic, Special assignment, James L. Stice Handle Mfg. Co. vs the Windham Handle Co.

Court adjourned without day.

Monday, funeral services for Miss Mabel Rust, 13, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Rust, was held at the home of her parents in the Manhasset village. Burial was in Grove street cemetery. The child died Friday after a long illness. Children of the sixth grade of the Israel Putnam school, where the little girl was a pupil, and children of St. Philip's Sunday school sent flowers.

There was interesting discussion Monday of what action the common council will take at its regular monthly meeting this (Tuesday) evening on accepting the resignation of Prosecuting Attorney John F. Carpenter, the resignation effective Wednesday, and as to appointing to fill the place.

In the window of a Main street store an illuminated plan of the proposed enlargement of the Grove street cemetery is shown. Also a reproduction of the TourtelIotte Memorial chapel now being erected there. A card announces that the cemetery association will receive subscriptions to carry out the development of the cemetery as planned and that subscriptions will be received by N. A. Ballard. Much money will be required by the association in carrying out its development plans as a very considerable amount of grading will have to be done.

Revision of the constitution of the consolidated stock exchange with amendments designed to safeguard the investing public, was announced by President Laurence Tweedy.

RENEWING AUTO LICENSES.

At the end of 1923 there was a great hue and cry because those who sought new markers for their cars were obliged to wait in line for a considerable period in order to get them in time so that the cars would not be out of commission. It was of course the natural result of procrastination. Great numbers delayed until the last moment and expected to be waited upon like a flash. Every such instance has its irritations, for nearly all have a different excuse, but in every case it emphasized the importance of refusing to wait until the last week or day, when the renewal could have been obtained with little or no delay after notification was given that the markers were available.

Is it going to be the same way regarding the drivers' licenses? The licenses expire the last day of February. Such licenses are for the full year. There is no pro rata cost for part of the year. The license costs the same whether the person is to drive for one month or twelve. That being the case there is no excuse for present drivers who intend to renew to delay taking out the license until later in the year.

With application forwarded early in the month there should be no trouble experienced in getting the 1924 license before it is needed. The same is true of those who can present their applications and get their new ones on the spot. If they appear early they will escape the congestion and delay that come from waiting until the last minute. They will avoid confusion for themselves and others and make it possible for the clerks handling the licenses to meet their responsibilities in a prompt and satisfactory manner.

Unfortunately it is not the few but the many that are disposed to procrastinate. It stands to reason that the thousands who must be served are going to get better service if they get in their applications so that the new licenses can be issued over a period of four weeks than they will if they wait until the 27th, 28th and 29th of February and find it necessary to wait until long lines of their fellow procrastinators are waited upon. Those who want to avoid the rush should know by this time that it is a good idea to get in early—early in the month and early in the day.

UNFAIR TO DENBY.

Whether the further disclosures that have been made by E. L. Doheny before the senate oil investigating committee relative to the part which his money had had in obtaining the services of men in influential positions in the democratic party will have any effect upon the demands that Secretary Denby resign remains to be seen. There seems to be no question, however, but what an injustice is being done the secretary of the navy. It hasn't been shown that he was connected in any way with the $100,000 which were loaned to former Secretary Fall by Mr. Doheny and it hasn't been shown or hinted that Secretary Denby ever received a penny of Doheny money or was friendly to him.

Thus far the only charge that has been made against Mr. Denby is that he didn't block the leases, the claim growing out of the matter of fact manner in which he signed the leases without personally going into them, but after he had received the advice of his department experts. The charge against Secretary Denby is based upon the claim that he was lax in administering such an important transaction, but it gives no consideration to the difference of opinion that exists relative to the question of conservation of the oil lands and the claim that the oil from the government fields was being drawn off and would be lost unless development of the government land was undertaken.

The attack upon Mr. Denby has the appearance of being political. No wrong doing has been fastened upon him. No oil has been spattered on him. It is possible for congress to undertake impeachment proceedings but that hasn't been done. Efforts thus far have been to railroad him without giving him a trial. In other words the senate is doing its best to apply the principles of lynch law to a member of the cabinet instead of establishing his guilt, or bringing him to trial that it might have the backing of any proof in such demands as it makes.

CANADA'S DOUKHOBORS.

Canada has been anxious to get more immigrants and has been offering special inducements to people of the British Isles to get them to locate in the dominion. Canada has been losing some of its people at a time when it is by no means oversupplied. But while it has suffered from emigration to this country it is even now experiencing further losses in the departure of the Doukhobors, about 10,000 of whom have either gone or are ready to go to Russia to make their homes, and more are interested in such a migration.

The Doukhobors are not Canadians but they have made Canada their home for the last quarter of a century. They are a fanatical religious class that originally came from Russia. They sought Canada as a place where they could carry out their own ideas. They have experienced no opposition of any serious extent and they have been highly industrious farmers. Thus the departure of such a large number from western Canada means a serious economic problem for Canada to face.

These people are going back to Russia under promises from the soviet government of lands to cultivate, but inasmuch as they will carry back with them many millions of dollars which they have earned in Canada they will be an important acquisition. Whether they will find soviet Russia to their liking remains to be seen. Canada will endeavor to replace them by immigrants who are assimilable. The Doukhobors were never material for the melting pot. They clung together and lived to themselves and under their own ideas, insofar as they didn't clash with established laws. But these were intensive agriculturalists and it is natural that Canada should not only regret to see them go, but be anxious to have others take their place who will settle in western Canada with a view to permanency and to becoming Canadians. Those that wander about the world in groups do not contribute much to the citizenship of the localities in which they temporarily reside. They create abnormal conditions when they come and the same when they go.

AMERICAN TREES FIRST.

A protest that was effective was that which was made by a nurserymen's association against the idea of sending to Europe for the purpose of getting trees to be used as memorials for the American soldiers who fell in the World war. Why such a move to go out of the country for elms or other trees is hard to understand. Naturally it aroused opposition among the nurserymen and they will be strongly supported in their attitude.

The idea of utilising trees for memorials is not new. Boston in being disposed to employ them is but following examples set in many sections of the country. But the Boston plan of sending a man to Europe to get such trees was a new one. It gave the impression that desirable trees could not be found in this country. That was a reflection that could not be suffered in silence.

The protest has spoiled, of course, a European trip for a Boston official but it has not only saved that needless expense but it will mean the employment of American elms or trees of other kinds for memorial purposes. The lives may have been given on European soil but there is no reason for supposing that there are not sufficient and appropriate American trees for such a purpose. It has been repeatedly shown that this country deserved to give greater attention to reforestation but so far as known our stock of shade trees has not ebbed to the point, either in number or quality, where it is necessary to go abroad for them. The nurserymen are to be congratulated for their protest, and Boston has avoided a lot of additional criticism by changing its plan as it did.

OUR HIGHWAY FATALITIES.

It is an awful indictment on the present day use of highways that is made by the fatality record in the highways of the state during the past 18 years. It is lamentable that 2308, of whom 600 were children under ten years of age, should have been killed by motor vehicles in accidents which to a large degree might have been prevented.

There is satisfaction in knowing that the record in this state is much better than in others, but it doesn't overcome the need of applying all possible measures for increased safety, or of impressing the need of it upon all users of the highways.

With the record of 259 fatalities in 1923, of which 32 were children, exceeding the figures for 1922, how many will be numbered in the list when 1924 has run its course? Unless safety efforts on the part of all users of the streets are put forth in greater measure than they have been in the pastlast year's record can be expected to be broken. The number of automobiles is increasing. That means that the highway menace is increasing also, and it means that more auto drivers must take care to respect the rights of others and that all users, whether as drivers of vehicles or pedestrians, must look well to their own protection. The highways of today are not what they were 25 years ago. They have undergone great changes in the last ten years and it cannot be overlooked that the dangers are there and must be guarded against by each and everyone. There can be none too many preventive measures and neither can there be too much personal effort in behalf of accident prevention.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to the Bulletin)

Washington, D. C. Feb. 4—Even the political enemies of former president Wilson join in the expressions of regret at his passing on. Death is the leveler here as in all other corners of the earth, and bitterness is repressed or eliminated from all reference to the former president. Few men will do in his case, as did Senator Heflin, aggressive democrat, of Alabama when speaking on the floor of the senate of the late President Harding this week. Mr. Heflin made such allusions to the late President Harding, that Senator Lodge stopped the debate with the words "Let the dead rest", in which he was upheld by the entire senate regardless of partisanship, except Mr. Heflin who shouted "if I can't talk now I will do so tomorrow."

What effect the death of Mr. Wilson will have on the political outlook for the 1924 presidential election is not yet forecasted. His name has been used as the framer of democratic policies, although those who are on the spot realised that he was in no condition to take an active part in the campaign and his influence would be mostly "in name only". Mr. Wilson never seemed to favor the elevation of Mr. McAdoo to the presidency and the Wilson supporters are said now to be on the point of following that course. All of which is however, only rumor. It is more than a rumor however, so far as Washington is concerned, that the coupling of the name of Mr. McAdoo with the Sinclair oil investigation has put his candidacy into a different status. The democrats in the senate who have demanded the impeachment of Mr. Fall and who have introduced the name of Mr. Coolidge in an attempt to prove that the administration "knew what was going on" as they express it, are aghast at the revelation that one of their own presidential candidates not only knew "what was doing" but had received a fee of $250,000 from the oil people and is even now, while a candidate, receiving a retainer of $50,000 a year. The opinion here is that while Mr. McAdoo had a perfect right to act as counsel for the company, he held such close relations to the oil magnates as to tie him up as a candidate, if such relations were deemed improper for Mr. Gregory, Mr. Lane and Mr. Garrison, and are to be a subject for condemnation regarding republicans connected with the Harding administration, other than Mr. Fall, who seems to have been directly concerned. The revelation of the McAdoo interests came as a bomb to the senate. Only a few hours before Heflin had used extreme language in denouncing any and all who had connection with the great oil interests and Teapot Dome.

Whatever the result, one thing is sure, the Teapot Dome, as a campaign issue has been demolished, and men who have followed congress and presidential campaigns for a quarter of a century, say that never before have they known the bottom of a "great issue" to drop out with such completeness as did the plan to make oil scandal the main issue next fall, and make a "grand killin'" on that score. What seemed a perfectly good campaign issue was demolished between sun and sun. Mr. Coolidge is apparently unperturbed and determined to sift the whole matter to the bottom and "clean up the alleys" with even more zest than Washington is today attending to cleaning up its slums.

Hearings are the order of the day at the capitol, and have even cut out the popularity of select morning concerts and luncheons for the society women of the capital. The Bok investigation has faded from view, in the greater light of Teapot Dome; but tomorrow a new series of hearings begins before the judiciary committee of the senate, of which Brandegee of Connecticut is chairman, that bids fair to set a new pace for fireworks. It is on the proposed new constitutional amendment framed by the woman's party to give women so called "equal rights." It is said that the ladies are cooking up some new fangled stunts that will be decidedly dramatic, and that the women opposed to the amendment won't be far behind in doing their share to keep it from a favorable report by the committee. The fight has not begun, for Wednesday is the first date set for the hearing but by another week there ought to be some revelations that will make interesting reading.

After the week of much besmirching and partisan recrimination, death and sorrow, the award of a medal of honor to Commander Walter A. Edwards, U. S. N., came as a pleasant interlude. The award was made in honor of action by Edwards when commander of the U. S. S. Bainbridge in the Marmora sea in 1922. It was then that a French ship transport blew up and Edwards saved 483 lives by having his ship lashed to the burning transport in a heavy sea and in the midst of a raging December storm. President Coolidge pinned the medal on the commandant's breast in the presence of Secretary Denby and members of the staff.

Washington newspapers of republican faith are printing the result of a straw vote taken by the Farm Journal of Philadelphia on presidential preference. The five leading men were Coolidge 2162, Ford 718, McAdoo 665, Capper 344 and Johnson 324. There were a dozen or more others mentioned, but out of them LaFollette was the only man to touch the 300 notch. The immense lead given in the Coolidge figures proved immensely pleasing to the republican managers here.

Magnus Johnson, senator from Minnesota, has raised a commotion at last. But it was not on the floor of the senate, as had been expected. When the dirt farmer read a clipping from a Minnesota paper which a Washington correspondent had sent his paper on comments concerning certain farm bills in which the senator takes an interest, Mr. Johnson did not lose a minute in rushing up to the senate press gallery and "taking it out" on the correspondent. His attitude was so belligerent and his words and epithets were so entirely "out of order" that in less than a jiffy, a half hundred newspaper men crowded around the irate senator and cries of "throw him out" filled the air. Then it was that James P. Preston, superintendent of the press gallery got into action. He took the angry senator by the arm and led him from the room to the private elevator and persuaded him to return to his own domain. This incident was all the more interesting as Johnson had announced his intention of covering the democratic and republican conventions as a reporter for a syndicate of newspapers, that has engaged him for that purpose. He will then lose his senatorial standing for the time being and must conform to the strict press rules that govern the organization of trained newspaper men who are assigned to "cover" the big conventions. It's a case of live up to the rules or quit the job. And after the one experience the dirt farmer senator has given the newspaper men, they are wondering how it will end when he temporarily becomes one of them.

Congress is still hoping to adjourn before the national conventions called for June. What it will then have accomplished beyond the passage of appropriation bills is hard to forecast. As things are now running there will be but little done beyond that.

The reporting out of the Mellon tax reduction bill along the line fixed by the secretary of the treasury was a great triumph for Congressman John Q. Tilson of the Third Connecticut district. It was Tilson who held firm to the administration policy all during the debate in committee and who stoutly refused to yield to a compromise till the battle had been fought. "I wasn't trained to run away before a fight began," said Tilson, "and I shall not do so this time." Tilson served in the Spanish war, the trouble on the Mexican border and has had a pretty complete all round military training. And in spite of the urgent compromise attitude of Chairman Green of the ways and means committee and of floor leader Longworth, Tilson stood pat for the policy of the administration and at last won out. Tilson is a high up member on the ways and means committee. Standing shoulder to shoulder with him in the battle royal was Mills of New York, who by the way, is to be the chief speaker at the Lincoln day banquet at New Haven February 12 given by the Young Men's Republican club.

A good many people here attribute the entrance of Senator Reed of Missouri into the presidential candidate list, to the McAdoo oil retainer, for Mr. Reed did not make his announcement till that had come to the point of disclosure and was unquestionably known to the Missouri man among the first. Mr. Underwood is keeping entirely quiet so far as political comments go, and is still regarded as the most probable compromise candidate at the June convention, as matters now stand.

FROM LUCILLES DIARY

From the moment I heard that Uncle Bob and Betty were planning to drive up to Minneapolis for the wedding anniversary party of the Gifferds I was simply wild to go. I told Uncle Bob that if he would only take me along I should love him forever.

"I should hope that you would do that anyway," he answered, laughing. "But I guess we can squeeze you in, Lucile. I'll speak to Betty about it." (I was telephoning to him at his office.)

"Oh, Uncle Bob," I pleaded, "please say yes right now, so that I can make my arrangements. That's an old darling!"

"Oh, all right, Lucile. We are going to start early on Sunday morning, so don't you dare be late, young lady."

"Of course I won't," I promised.

I should not have been the least bit tardy if it had not been for cousin Fannie's carelessness. I went to the theater on Saturday evening with Dexter Haines and when I came in about 12 o'clock I was so tired and sleepy that I felt I must let some one else take the responsibility of waking me in the morning, so I went to Cousin Fannie's room and asked her to call me at 5. She answered drowsily that she would, but she did not. It was not until Uncle Bob rang our bell at a quarter to 6 that she knocked at my door.

"Oh, Cousin Fannie, it's all your fault. Why didn't you wake me? You promised to. Don't you know you did?"

"I remember something about it now, but I was so sound asleep that I thought it was a dream—your coming in and asking me."

"Well, I depended upon you," I said. When I got into the car I told Uncle Bub how I happened to keep him waiting. I did not wish him to blame me, and I don't believe he did, but Betty laughed in that irritating skeptical way she sometimes does.

We stayed all night at a comfortable hotel in Eau Claire, and Uncle Bob said he was dreadfully tired from driving hard all day. He would not take us to the movies as I suggested. "It's bed for me," he said. "If you girls wish to go, all right, but I need all the sleep I can get."

"I feel the same way," agreed Betty, so of course there was nothing for me to do but to go to bed at half past 8. I consoled myself with the thought that I was getting some refreshing beauty sleep. At 4 in the morning I woke, quite fed up with slumber. It occurred to me that it would be a good idea to wash my hair in the nice soft water I had discovered in the bathroom, which was between my room and Uncle Bob's and Betty's. I gave my hair an excellent shampoo, rinsing it over and over again, thinking how lovely the rain-water would make it look for the anniversary party. Fortunately there was an electric fan on the shelf of the cupboard, so I connected that, and dried my curly locks perfectly, while I read the novel I had bought. I lay down at 6 again with my hair in just a wonderful condition. I never saw it look more beautiful.

It seemed to me I had not been asleep five minutes when Betty woke me.

"Get up, Lucille," she ordered quite crossly. "Bob says we are to start immediately and get our breakfast at the next town."

"What's the idea?" I asked.

"You woke Bob at an unearthly hour, letting the water run and run, and he's up and determined to get started. I'm such a good sleeper that I didn't hear you, but he couldn't sleep a wink after you disturbed him. Why, didn't you close the door between our room and the bathroom?"

"Why, wasn't it closed? I didn't notice it."

"You never notice anything but your own desires, Lucile," she said cross.

To change the subject I asked her whether she had ever seen my hair look more glossy, and she merely sniffed most inelegantly. Chicago News.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The new Fine Arts Commission which has been created to advise the British Government in reference to the erection of statues, fountains and similar memorials, has as its head the Earl of Crawford, premier Earl of Scotland, and one of the most interesting members of the peerage. Lord Crawford is a trustee of the National Portrait Gallery, and has a considerable acquaintance with the history of sculpture, having published a book on that subject in 1916. His father, whom he succeeded in the title in 1913, was celebrated as a scientist and bibliophile, and as the possessor of one of the finest stamp collections in the world. The present Earl was educated at Eton and at Magdalen College, Oxford. Previous to succeeding to his title he had sat in the House of Commons for 18 years. He was a junior lord of the treasury from 1904 to 1905 and later served as president of the Board of Agriculture and Fisheries.

Stories That Recall Others

The Deadly Gas Fumes

A 16-pound turkey was sent to Mr. X as a present. The gobbler was placed in a box in the garage and Mr. X gave him special attention, never failing to point out to members of the household and to his friends the apparent well doing of the bird. The day came for the feast and Mr. X marched forth to battle—to find the gobbler lifeless. The exhaust fumes from the two autos had presided the axe. For days Mr. X was informed that anyone should have known the danger of the deadly fumes, but no one mentioned it in time to thwart the untimely end.

With Climbers Attached

Early morning "setting up" exercises of a sedan of popular make provided a few thrills for the crowd. The car sped through the avenue and in endeavoring to turn the corner skidded on some ice and in doing so came in contact with a guy wire from a telephone pole to the ground. The car slid up the cable a length or two, more or less, hesitated for a second, slid backward and then toppled to its side and lay still. The driver hastened to open the door on the top side and crawled out.

"Come on, you fellows, give me a lift," he shouted. The lift was provided and the car snorted on its way with no noticeable damage.

POETRY

A Winter Midnight Song

Wintertime I like t. wake
In bed at noon of night;
And list the noise the wild winds make,
And give my fancy flight.

Ah, go one knows a as half-a-dream
As him my bed I lie
What fairy visions flit and gleam,
And grand my inward eye.

Not for the frozen, frigid poles
Does happy fancy care,
By balmier paths to greater goals
Her frolic pinions fare;
To phantom streamers Borean
She will not look, nor list,
She only heeds fair Summer's call
And hies her feet have kist.

Ay, snugly tucked away in bed
Bewitched, my spirit goes
To revel mid the perfumes shed
By Lilac, and by Rose;
The Lemon ripple in the gale,—
At me they laugh and nod;
Gay butterflies above them sail
By paths known but to God.

A wild-rose petal fragile floats
Upon a glistening brook;
The Lilies lean their lissome throats
And snow-white brows to look,
While flexile Willows sway and shine
Above the pebbled stream,—
And all this loveliness is mine,
Bed-nested, half a-dream.
And so regaled I'm onward waft
To greet the wintry morn;
But not downcast; from my dream-craft
A promise I have borne;
And in my heart still bides a charm,
And in my ears a tune:
Through breath of blossoms blithe and warm
I hear a lilt of June.

—Samuel Minturn Peck in Boston Transcript.

The Mountains

How'er the wheels of Time go round,
We cannot wholly be discrowned.
We bind in form, and line and hight,
The Finite to the Infinite.
And, lifted on our shoulders bare,
The races breathe an ampler air,
The arms that clasped, the lips that kissed
Have vanished from the morning mist;
The dainty shapes that flashed and passed
In spray the plunging torrent cast,
Or danced through woven gleam and shade,
The vapors and the sunbeam's braid,
Grew thin and pale; each holy haunt
Of gods or spirits minstrant
Hath something lost of ancient awe;
Yet from the stooping heavens we dread
A beauty, mystery and might.
Time cannot change nor worship blight.
The gold of dawn and sunset sheds
Unearthly glory on our heads;
The secret of the skies we keep;
And whispers, round each lonely steep,
Allure and promise, yet withhold,
What bard and prophet never told.
While Man's slow ages come and go,
Our dateless chronicles of snow
Their changeless old inscription show,
And men therein forever see
The unread speech of Deity.

KALEIDOSCOPE

"A Hearse Is a Poor Vehicle to Come to Church In—Why Walk?" This sign on the bulletin board of the St. Andrew's United Brethren church of Des Moines started the congregation by a violent bleeding at the nose talking and going to church.

What is believed to be the smallest church in the world is a little stone chapel dedicated to St. Anthony, situated five miles east of Ft. Atkinson, Ia. The outside measurements are 12 by 12 feet. The chapel seats a congregation of eight.

Rum runners along the Jersey coast will be chased by speed boats driven by twin airplane motors capable of 40 miles an hour. These boats can race to the twelve-mile limit and back in 40 minutes. They have no masts, cabins or side lights, and travel like hydroplanes.

Horace Greeley did not say, "Go west, young man" first. This expression was first used by John L. Soul in 1851 in the Terre Haute Express. Greeley later used the sentence in an editorial entitled, "Hints Toward Reform." Later Greeley reprinted the article and explained that he was not the originator of the expression.

The supply officers of the United States army make annual expenditures of public funds amounting to many billions of dollars in times of peace and billions in time of war. BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. —(Adv.)

OBITUARY

Mrs. Lucian Clark

Mrs. Mary J. Clark, 87, one of Willington's most loved and respected women, widow of Lucian Clark, passed out at Norwich Sunday evening where she was making her home with her daughter, Mrs. Robert Hull of 7 Nelson place. Mrs. Clark was taken ill some four months ago with heart trouble which ultimately caused her death. Mrs. Clark was born at Willing, Conn., Nov. 6, 1837, the daughter of William and Mary Tyrrell Still. For some time she made her home in Mansfield and Hartford where her husband was engaged in the silk business but after a period of years returned to Willington where the greater part of her life was spent and where she was the oldest member of the First Baptist church. Mrs. Clark was a devoted mother, a woman of sterling integrity, strong personality, of high intellect, sweet loving disposition, with always a desire in her heart to do something to promote the happiness of others. In 1851 at the age of nineteen she was united in marriage with Lucian Clark of Mansfield. Four children survive her, Mrs. Nettie Russell and Mrs. Ida Dewkins of Denver, Colorado; William L. of New Britain, Conn.; and Mrs. Robert Hull of Norwich, also three grand children, Miss Mildred Clark, Mrs. Vera Dunham and Mary Louis Hull and one great grandchild, Howard Dunham. Mrs. Clark is the last to go of the ten brothers and sisters.

After listening to protests from John H. Barnes, representing Michael Levine, and from Henry F. Ulmer and George E. Pitcher against the construction of a 320-foot turnout by the Connecticut company on Williams avenue, along the southerly end of Chelsea parade, the court of common council, at its February meeting in the council chamber Monday evening, adopted a resolution giving the trolley company leave to withdraw its petition asking approval of its plans for the new turnout. The trolley petition was received at the January meeting and at that time the council set Monday evening as the date for a public hearing on the matter. The main objection to the turnout was that the street is too narrow and that if the turnout was constructed there would not be room for the parking of automobiles on the street as the trolley cars would interfere with the machines. It was also pointed out that with trolley cars on the turnout it would not be possible for machines going in opposite directions to pass each other. Another argument set forth was that Williams avenue is not a public street but a part of Chelsea parade and that therefore the council had no jurisdiction in the matter.

The meeting was called to order about 8.15 o'clock by Mayor Milo R. Waters and the minutes of the previous meeting, according to custom, were accepted without reading.

The clerk read the return of publication of the new ordinance relating to excavations in city streets and then read the return of publication of the order for a hearing on the Connecticut company's petition, asking the council to accept the plan for the construction of a turnout on Williams avenue at the southerly end of Chelsea Parade. Mayor Waters then declared the hearing open.

Samuel Anderson, local superintendent of the trolley company's lines, explained the need of the new turnout. He said the old turnout, the one at McKinley avenue and Broad street, is inadequate to give good service to the patrons of the Yantic line, and that the new location was better suited.

John H. Barnes said he appeared in behalf of some of the people opposed to the new turnout and that he would like to question Mr. Anderson.

Mr. Barnes—Where is the present switch?

Mr. Anderson—At McKinley avenue and Broad street.

Q.—How long has it been there?

A.—Since the road was built; about 35 or 40 years.

Q.—Have you just discovered that the switch is inadequate?

A.—No, sir. At the time the switch was built we were sending only single truck cars over the line.

Q.—What car does that switch accommodate? Only the Falls car?

A.—Yes. We have fifteen-minute service there.

Q.—What benefit will result from having the new switch?

A.—It is a four-minute run from the square to the McKinley avenue switch. The patrons on the up-car have to wait three or four minutes at the switch for the down-car.

Q.—What advantage would there be in the new location?

A.—We would gain about two minutes on the run to the Falls. When there are functions at Slater hall we have to shift our cars around.

Mr. Barnes—I would like to ask the company's engineer some questions. How long would this switch be?

Q.—Does your map show the distance from the southerly rail to the curb? Can you give me the distance?

A.—About 5 8-10 feet.

Q.—Is it more than 6 feet anywhere?

A.—Yes. At one point 6 6-10 feet.

Q.—Of the 320 feet how much is over 6 feet?

A.—The greater portion.

Q.—What is the greatest width?

A.—6 6-10 feet.

Q.—That is what you call a "side location?"

A.—Yes. I can't recall a single turnout in the state that is 150 feet. They are all longer.

Q.—That doesn't change the statute, does it?

Q.—Can you tell us what benefit this is going to be to the Connecticut company?

A.—It will be of considerable benefit to the service.

Mr. Barnes then questioned Michael Levine, a property owner on Williams avenue. What land do you own there? he asked Mr. Levine. Does your land run up to Washington street and down Williams avenue? How far?

Mr. Levine—About 300 feet.

Q.—Do you intend to build there?

A.—Yes.

Mr. Barnes—Explain to the council your opposition to this plan.

Mr. Levine—It would injure the whole street. You couldn't park an automobile there and with cars and automobiles passing there might be accidents.

Mr. Johnson—It would be possible to allow a foot more to provide more clearance.

Henry Ulmer spoke in opposition to the trolley company's plans. I use Williams avenue, he said. There is hardly a time I go through there, going west, but what I have to drive in the track to allow other machines to pass. I think it would be a detriment to put more tracks there. I have heard it said that it is not a public highway but part of Chelsea Parade. I hope the council will not act on the petition because I don't think it has a right to do so.

There are a great many reasons for not granting this petition, said George E. Pitcher, civil engineer. They come here with an incorrect plan. On the plan I see they have located a curb. I have been up there twice looking for the curb. The first time I took a magnifying glass and I couldn't find the curb. There is no curb there. It is a paved gutter. A "side location" requires a five-foot clearance to the nearest obstruction. Who has the power to reduce that width?

Mr. Barnes—Has Williams avenue ever been accepted by the city?

Mr. Pitcher—It has not.

Mr. Barnes—Is it part of Chelsea Parade?

Mr. Pitcher—As far as I can find out, it is. The Broad street switch was laid 53 years. It has taken them 53 years to find out that it was not in the proper place. They have come in here with a plan that does not cover the statutes. They can't get the required width without taking down either one row or the other of the elm trees. I think it is a shame to cut down trees to accommodate the trolley company.

Mr. Barnes—I sympathize with the Connecticut company. There is no reason why a property owner or street should be blockaded by a switch unless there is absolute need. The Connecticut company is not doing the business it did in the past and never will. There is no reason why the Broad street switch couldn't accommodate the patronage now. If that switch, 320 feet long, is placed there it will be 6 6-10 feet from the southerly end of the track to the curb. When trolley cars go through there it will be impossible for automobiles to pass, or to park in front of the property. You may be sure there will be some accidents.

There is a law that governs this matter. Before you can grant this petition it is necessary for the Connecticut company to secure an order from a superior court judge reducing the minimum width of clearance. I claim that the council has no jurisdiction because Williams avenue isn't a street of the city of Norwich. With all due respect to the Connecticut company, I think it is your duty to reject this petition.

As no one else wished to be heard on the matter the mayor declared the hearing, which consumed approximately an hour, closed, and the council recessed for five minutes. When the council reconvened a resolution giving the petitioners leave to withdraw was adopted on motion of Alderman Henry Gebrath.

Petitions Received.

The council then proceeded to the regular business of the meeting. Petitions were received and disposed of as follows:

From Gertrude Ahearn, to connect her premises, Summit Park, with the public sewer in Summit street. Referred to public works committee.

From Charles A. Rathbone, to connect his premises, Crane avenue, with the sewer in West Main street. Referred to the public works committee.

From Dominick Charles, asking that a tree be removed from in front of his premises, Cliff street, as he wishes to lay a sidewalk. Referred to the public works committee and tree warden with power.

From A. Stalanowis asking the street lighting system be extended from 240 Mohegan road to his property on Curtis street, referred to the police committee.

From Hugh Strang asking that a tree in front of his store, Central avenue and 10th street, be cut down. Referred to the public works committee and tree warden.

Complain of Gas Works

From residents of Greeneville calling attention to the fact that the G. & E. plant has recently had installed automatic stokers and that as a result quantities of gas fumes, smoke, etc., are thrown from the chimneys creating a nuisance, and asking that steps be taken to remedy conditions. Referred to the special committee appointed at the last meeting to confer with the gas and electric commissioners regarding conditions in the department.

From C. A. Yerrington and others asking the installation of a light at Laurel Hill and Yerrington avenues. Referred to the police committee with power.

Parking Reservations for Busses

From Norwich Chamber of Commerce asking that steps be taken to provide a parking reservation for the three bus lines running into Norwich. Referred to the mayor and police committee to report at the next meeting. Mayor Waters said that the bus men want to come into Franklin Sq., and that he is opposed to this. He said efforts have been made to find locations for the bus lines but the locations picked out have not met with the approval of the bus men.

Safety on Laurel Hill

From Norwich Chamber of Commerce asking that steps be taken to protect automobilists coming down Laurel Hill by placing safeguards near the bridge and at the junction of Laurel Hill avenue with Talman St., to prevent machines toppling over the bank onto the railroad tracks or into the river. Referred to the public works committee. Alderman Gebrath stated that this matter has been under consideration by the public works committee and that a suitable fence will probably be placed there soon.

From the trustees of Norwich Lodge No. 430, B. P. O. E. and others asking for an arc light on Park street. Referred to the police committee with power.

From W. A. Pitcher asking that a tree in front of No. 124 Prospect St., be trimmed. Referred to the public works committee and tree warden with power.

Also open letter from George Casgrove on the gas and electric department was voted filed without reading.

Councilman Aldrich called attention to a dangerous place at the end of the second West Side bridge where he said there is a stairway leading to the river bank without protection at the top. Matter was referred to the public works committee.

The monthly reports of the street commissioner and city treasurer were accepted. Alderman P. F. Sweeney, reporting for the police committee, stated that three electric lights have been installed in response to petitions.

On recommendation of the public works committee the petitions for Charles A. Rathbone and Gertrude Ahearn, received earlier in the meeting were granted.

Preparing G. & E. Report

Mayor Waters stated that the special committee appointed at the last meeting to confer with the gas and electrical commissioners on the conditions in that department had met the commissioners and that the commissioners are preparing a report for the committee. The report was one of progress and the mayor said he expects a full report will be made at the next meeting.

The quarterly report of the auditor of the water department finances was received and accepted.

Bill for Christmas Tree

The following claims were received:

Andrew and Mary Wolenski presented a claim of $60 for the Christmas tree erected at Union Square during the Christmas season. The bill is made out to "Norwich Chamber of Commerce, City of Norwich or Henry E. Davis". The claimants stated in their written explanation which accompanied the bill that the Chamber of Commerce had informed them that the tree was given by the city and they understood that it was cut down by Henry E. Davis. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

Claims for Damages

A claim from Mrs. David Lyons, through her attorney, C. W. Cassidy, as the result of a fall on Main street due to ice and snow, in January, was referred to the finance committee and corporation counsel.

A claim from Arthur E. Kimball of Danielson for damages to his automobile when it fell into a hole on Baltic street, November 25th was referred to the finance committee and corporation counsel. The amount of the claim is $14.70.

A claim from Henry Durr for damages to his automobile Jan. 11th, when the limb of a tree fell on top of the machine while Mr. Durr was driving through Asylum street was referred to the finance committee and corporation counsel. The amount of the claim is $75 and the claimant's attorney is Andrew B. Davies.

The council unanimously adopted a resolution ordered the flag on the court house to be at half mast for 30 days out of respect to the late Woodrow Wilson and ordering the offices of the various departments of the city to be closed during the funeral hour Wednesday.

Fire Station for Falls District

The council then accepted a deed from Eda M. Cook transferring to the city a lot of land on the Joseph Perkins Road which lot is to be used for the erection of a fire station. The purchase price of the land is $3,300 and a resolution adopted by the council authorizes payment from the appropriation made last year for the purpose of providing a location for a fire station to take care of the Falls district.

Alderman Bliven said he had been asked by E. O. Redler to inform the council that Mr. Redler objects to the proposed fire station being located so near his home on the Joseph Perkins road.

Alderman Crooks presented a resolution authorizing a committee of three, including the mayor, to confer, with the Connecticut Company officials regarding the increase in trolley fare rates. The mayor appointed as the other two members of the committee Alderman Crooks and Councilman Shea.

Mayor Waters announced that he had appointed Harold T. Robinson, Alderman Patrick F. Sweeney and Councilman P. Russell Smith city assessors. The appointments were approved by the council.

Department Bills

Department bills were then approved as follows: Department of cemeteries $269.01; fire department $5,618.07; water department, $3,701.43; public works department, $10,067.57; park department, $235.70; gas and electric department, $81,240.63; finance department, $1,702.91; police department, $5,236.47; street lighting $1,428.49.

The council adjourned shortly after 10 o'clock.

DESCRIBES SERVICE COUNCIL WORK FOR P. O. MEN

Employes of the Norwich post office and men connected with the postal service in towns surrounding Norwich gathere dat Odd Fellows' Hall Monday evening when a talk on Service Councils was given by Chester G. Roush, Assistant Director of Service Relations, U. S., postoffice department, Washington, D. C.

Mr. Roush came here to address the members of the Norwich Service Council and other government postal employes and his talk was most interesting, clearing up many points, throwing light on the work of the service relations department.

The employes of the postoffice department, said Mr. Roush, number over 860,000 people or about the population of Vermont and the business is the biggest of its kind in the world. People have been educated to expect service by this department and it has been perfected to such a degree that a letter dropped in a post box in northern Maine goes to Northern Alaska for two cents.

Not many years ago Will Hays came into office in the postoffice department. He saw a need of something for the employes, and we are now developing ideas along these lines, seeking to improve conditions.

The councils are of two kinds, national, comprised of 20 men, 3 delegates from each association of workers, and the local council made up of big city offices and smaller cities.

In the Service relations department we want things to originate outside, we want you to think out thinks that would make working conditions better, apply them and if they are successful pass the word along that other offices may benefit. Your postmaster is really a department manager and you are expected to work with him in making these betterments.

Another thing that is being done is to simplify the postal laws and regulations, cutting out about one third of the useless articles.

We are all working for two things, first, to make a living; second, to do something worth while and have a good time while doign so. The carrier is a part of the community, and if one bunch of men earn their money it is the postal bunch. People, however, take them for granted as they are always there. The postal service is efficient. That is why you should be allowed to have an opportunit yto point out errors and aid in making working conditions better.

If a big corporation can let their men organize, the postal department certainly should, and this is the reason the service councils were organized. We cannot put the thing in motion over night but we are working.

We have found good and bad postmasters, but thank goodness they average 98 per cent. good. In the inspector line we have made radical changes. We have picked men best adapted for work and assigned them one kind of duty, and now the inspector is not a man looking for trouble, he is an auditor, a man seeking to aid you solve your problems.

We are going back to the physical examinations, are to publish training manuals to teach the new men just what to do, and the plan is to have a man learn one definite job, advance to another, and in this manner learn the entire system of the office.

Comig to appropriations, let me say that the administration has decided to cut the budget and save and save they are. We tried to get $100,000,000 for new buildings, alterations, improvements, etc., and got nothing. We then asked for $100,000 to better lighting conditions and got nothing, so you see they are cutting expenses.

The parcel post is the canal that has crowded us out of house and home and the big job of the department is to solve the problem. Plans outlined include segregating this department, raising the tariff on parcel post and change the method of handling.

In closing let me say that the postmaster is the boss, the council cooperates with him, thrashes out ideas and then settles them. If the postmaster cannot settle them send them in to my department and we will try to do so, and will send a representative here if necessary to work out the problem.

Following the talk of Mr. Roush, Postmaster Casper K. Bailey spoke briefly stating that of all the men he had been over there had never been a corps of more efficient, industrious and harder workers than the postal employes. The people, he said, little realize the tremendous amount of work these men handle and with no appropriattion, inadequate help, get the mails out on time.

Previous to the address of the evening Herb Smith's seven piece orchestra delighted the audience with a number of popular selections. Another treat on the program came when Francis J. Murtha, president of the Norwich council, announced that J. Warren Kane would favor the members with several tenor solos. Mr. Kane in fine voice sang Old Refrains, In the Garden of My Heart and a number of encores which were greatly enjoyed.

At the close of the meeting Mr. Roush again spoke and informed the members that Saturday half holidays could be secured by getting together, solving the problems in Norwich and getting the work done. These half-holidays run during the summer months and are enjoyed by offices in many cities.

Refreshments of sandwiches, cake, coffee, pickles and cigars were passed out after the meeting which was one of the most enjoyable held by the department in many months.

The members of the local service council of postal employes are as follows:

Postmaster Casper K. Bailey, Assistant Postmaster William A. Wells, Superintendent of of Mails William L. Fletcher; city carriers, Francis J. Murtha, John L. Counihan, James T. Carey; clerks, Maurice J. Buckley, William R. McCord, Joseph A. Donnelly; rural carriers, Edwin J. Edwards.

Officers of the local council are Francis J. Murtha, president; Joseph A. Donnelly, secretary.

The council meets the first Monday evening of every month at the post office.

President Murtha appointed the following committees for Monday night's affair:

Buffet lunch: Michael J. Murphy, (chairman) John W. Haselden, John L. Counihan, James T. Curry, Maurice J. Buckley, James L. Tourtelotte, James J. C. Stanley and Joseph A. Donnelly.

Finance: Michael J. Murphy, James J. C. Stanley.

PROMISE BEST AUTOMOBILE SHOW NORWICH HAS SEEN

At the meeting of the Norwich Automobile Dealers' association, held Monday at the Wauregan house, final plans were completed to make the coming automobile show in the state armory outshine many shows of similar character held in larger cities. When the show opens on the evening of the 6th, continuing on each afternoon and evening for the rest of this week, the patrons will find that no expense has been spared to make this a memprable showing of cars, an events that all automobile enthusiasts may look forward to with keen appreciation of delight. Music, entertainment, decorations and all other details have been made with minutest care toward the end that a show will be had that anyone, young or old, failing to see will have cause for regret. Features that have already created much interest are the gifts that are to be given away, namely checks for $100 and $50, that can be applied toward the purchase of any car exhibited at the show.

WOMAN WITH BLACK EYE; MAN WITH WRIST CUT

Effie Allen Cooper, 47, of 93 West Thames street, and Peter Bilecki, 47, were locked up at police headquarters Monday night on intoxication charges. Effie was found on West Main street with a black eye and Bilecki was picked up on Thames square with a gash in his wrist and had to be sent to the hospital to have it sewed up before he was put into a cell. Effie claims that some man by name of Peter hit her and it is believed that the injuries that the two showed can be associated with the topsy turvy condition found at Effie's home where dishes were smashed, furniture overturned and the floor spattered with blood.

Visited Tuberculosis Sanatorium.

Sunday afternoon members of the Ladies Auxiliary of the Richard F. Hourigan Post, V. F. W., visited the tuberculosis sanatorium where they distributed food among the ex-service men. The boys were glad to see the women as in preceding visits and were very grateful for the food received.

Has Your Husband Got Indigestion?

Nothing creates domestic discord quicker than an attack of indigestion, and nothing gets rid of indigestion quicker than Bisurated Magnesia. No man can be sweet tempered, good natured or even fair minded when his stomach is constantly sick, sour, gassy and upset with after-eating distress. If your husband has stomach trouble neither scold nor pity him, but help him by seeing that he has a supply of Bisurated Magnesia (either powder or tablets) constantly at hand. A teaspoonful of powder or two tablets taken in a little water after meals will instantly neutralize the acids in his stomach that are causing his trouble and he can enjoy his meals with no more fear of indigestion. Bisurated Magnesia is the special form of Magnesia used by thousands to neutralize stomach acidity and quickly overcome Indigestion—do not confuse with Milk, Carbonate, Block or Citrate of Magnesia. Insist on Bisurated. Its action is safe, prompt and sure and it can be obtained at small cost from any reliable drug store.

A RELIABLE COUGH REMEDY

Why experiment with unknown remedies for that cough or cold when you can secure FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND? It is a safe and reliable remedy for the relief of coughs, colds, hoarseness. Equally beneficial for young and old. Mrs. Anna Cornell, Bridgeton, N. J., states: "I bought FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND for my cold and find it great." Insist upon the genuine. NORWAY WINS TITLE IN OLYMPIC WINTER SPORTS; UNITED STATES FOURTH

Chamonix, France, Feb. 4.—(By The A. P.)—Norway made a runaway race of the last two ski events in the Olympic winter sports today, winning first place in the whole series with a total of 124 1-2 points, 58 points to spare over Finland, which finished second with 76 1-2 points.

Great Britain took third place with 40 and the United States was fourth with 29.

The Norwegians showed splendid form in all the events in which they competed. They were in admirable physical condition and displayed great efficiency in all branches of winter sports, with absolute supremacy in the ski events.

Great Britain, in scoring one point more than the United States did so with the aid of ten points from the curling competition, in which only three nations were entered, while, on the other hand, the United States against eight nations represented in the hockey matches took second place but scored only five points.

The standing of the nations on the final accounting was: Norway 124 1-2 points, Finland 76 1-2, Great Britain 30, United States 29, Sweden 26, Austria 25, Switzerland 24, France 19 1-2, Canada 11, Czechoslovakia 4 1-2, Belgium 6, Italy 1—Total 391.

Nine points of the 400 for the sixteen events were not allotted, three points being withdrawn in the military ski race and six in the curling.

The ski jumping contest has aroused considerable dissension and there is keen disappointment, certainly among the Americans, over the decision of the jury in placing Anders Haugen of Minneapolis, the American national champion, fourth — behind Thams, Bonna and Haug, all of Norway.

American Jumper Leads.

Haugen, the American star, led the field with a jump of 50 metres, while Thams and Bonna each covered 49 metres, and Haug 44 1-2. In reaching the decision the judges took into account style and action, whereby Thams was allotted 18.96 points, Bonna 18.68, Haug 18.00 and Haugen 17.91.

General disapproval of the decision was voiced by a large section of the sporting fraternity assembled here, and Mayor Leach of Minneapolis, has declared his intention of filing a protest. It was expected that Haugen would be placed after Thams, whose jump was perfect, but that he would receive no better than fourth was not contemplated. The jury was composed of a Norwegian, a Frenchman and a Czechoslovak.

Omtvedt is Injured.

Ragnar Omtvedt, another member of the American team, also had hard luck, suffering a dislocation of the knee in the contest, after covering a distance of 46 metres. Omtvedt was otherwise injured, but the attending physicians expect him to recover speedily."

Haug of Norway won the combined speed and jumps contest, with Stromstad, Norway, second, and Grottumsbraten, Norway, third. Okern, of Norway, was fourth, Nilsson, Sweden, fifth, and Adolf, Czechoslovakia, sixth.

Only 22 men were placed, Sigurd Overby of St. Paul, Anders Haugen and Johnny Carleton, American rhodes scholars from Dartmouth, being 11th, 21st and 22nd, respectively.

Le Moine Bateon of Minneapolis, was placed 14th and Harry Lein of Minneapolis, 16th in the distance ski jumps out of twenty-six placed.

The Olympic winter sports just concluded are described by those who attended them and those who have taken part as a great success, the organization of the games meeting with much praise. The lesson to be derived from the contests is that the northern nations, Norway and Finland, will bear watching in the athletic events next July at Colombes, for it is understood that their representatives are training hard, with a determination to win.

Withdraws Protest.

Later Mayor Leach withdrew his expressed intention of entering a protest against the decision of the judges in the ski jumping contest, remarking to the Associated Press correspondent: "I do not like the decision at all, but, after consideration, I have decided not to file a protest. There are rules and regulations governing such contests. A protest on the question of the interpretation of these rules by experienced men would not get us anywhere. But it certainly is tough."

Albert Stenge, the Czechoslovak judge said regarding the competition: "Haugen's form and style were very poor. He could not begin to compare with the three Norwegians placed ahead of him. The American threw all style aside and bent all efforts only upon distance.

"You saw what happened a few minutes after the competition when Thams, jumping alone, cleared 57 metres and a half, and likewise Bonna. As far as Haug's jump of 44 1-2 meters was concerned, it was perfection itself."

Omtvedt is resting quietly tonight at the Chamonix clinic. His wife is with him, and his physicians say that his knee will be immobilized for some weeks.

"I am sorry I cannot go home with you boys," Omtvedt told the party of Americans which left Chamonix this evening. Haugen, Overby, Batson and Lein proceeded to Paris, and will return to the United States immediately.

Batson and Lein came all the way from America to take two ski jumps.

Mayor Leach will remain here for a few days and Carleton will go to London.

COLLEGE STARS ENTERED FOR WILCO A. A. GAMES

New York, Feb. 4.—John Romig of Penn State college, former intercollegiate and national two-mile champion, and Harry Helme, of Georgetown, who won the national indoor two-mile championship as a schoolboy three years ago, have entered the Olympic 5,000-metre race at the Wilco A. A. games February 16.

Romig is back at Penn State taking a post-graduate course, and training under Nat Cartmell, for the Olympic tryouts. Helme has a record of 9.33 for two miles and according to reports, is running in the form he displayed three years ago when he was ranked among America's finest distance running prospects.

This pair is expected to make it interesting for Joie Ray, Elmer McClane, University of Pennsylvania, and Walter Iggins, former Columbia university star, who also are entered in the Wilco feature

FIRPO COMING BACK TO AMERICA ABOUT APRIL 1ST

New York, Feb. 4.—Luis Angel Firpo now plans a re-entry into this country April 1 or 2 for his 1924 pugilistic campaign, during which he hopes to "lick Wills and Dempsey," Captain Thomas W. Sheridan, skipper of the American Legion, which arrived from Buenos Aires, said that was what the boxer told him just before sailing.

"When Firpo came down to the ship at Buenos Aires, he had about 5,000 fans trailing him," said Capt. Sheridan. "We had to keep him inside as the stevedores stopped work when he walked out on deck. I fed him a plank steak, American style, and he told me that is what he intends to train on here. He was in training that day—he ate only about three pounds."

"STRANGLER" REFUSES TO BE KISSED BY BATTLER

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Battling Siki, the Senegalese boxer, caused Ed "Strangler" Lewis, heavyweight wrestling champion, to jump out of a ring here the other night, it was revealed tonight.

Siki didn't challenge Lewis.

Instead, he tried to kiss the heavyweight champion, following the French custom.

The Senegalese refereed an exhibition match in which Lewis appeared. When the "Strangler" was declared the winner, Siki started to throw his arms around him to implant a kiss on the cheek, and Lewis took it on the run.

PLAINFIELD HIGH MEETS STONINGTON FIVE TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Plainfield, Feb. 4. — The Plainfield High hoopsters are to clash with the Stonington High quintet tonight (Tuesday) at the Plainfield Community house. The Stonington boys are reputed to be experts in their line, and the game bids fair to be a fast one. The Plainfield team is fresh from a defeat by Killingly on Killingly's floor last week, and the members are out to retrieve their reputation before they play Killingly again. The Plainfield five will meet Killingly on Plainfield's floor in two weeks, so they are out to run up a bunch of straight wins before that time. Stonington is expected to be the first. Plainfield will present its usual lineup: West and Williams, forwards; Dorrance, center, and Allard and Gallup covering the guard positions. These boys are all fast, and an interesting evening is predicted for the Stonington boys. But—Plainfield cannot put on a winning team without money. She has not been clearing expenses on the last few games. Therefore this is a good opportunity for the townspeople to prove practical interest in the team.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL MEET AT "Y" ON WEDNESDAY

The fourth annual series of athletic meets between the Greeneville, Broadway and Elizabeth street grammar schools will begin Wednesday of this week, when the Elizabeth street school meets for its preliminary meet for the purpose of selecting its best athletes for the final meet. The various meets in the past have aroused much enthusiasm among the school boys and girls, and it is expected that this year's meets will surpass all the previous contests

Because of his interest in seeing the school kiddies compete in sports and to encourage the competition, J. A. Ferguson the Main street jeweler, has contributed a handsome trophy cup, to be awarded to the school winning the most points in the final meet.

The schools will meet separately for preliminary meets, and after selecting their best athletes will meet for a final meet to take place in the "Y" gymnasium, Tuesday, February 19th.

The events for the coming series will be as follows: Potato races, obstacle relay race, eighteen-ft. rope climb, basketball, relay race and standing broad jump.

AMERICA MUST PREPARE TO HOLD ATHLETIC TITLE

New York, Feb. 4.—Setbacks the United States has received in the Olympic winter sports show the necessity of preparedness if we are to demonstrate our athletic supremacy in the games as a whole, Major General Henry T. Allen, executive officer of the American Olympic committee, declared today.

"We have been too confident for our own good," said General Allen. "Now we realize we are facing a real struggle and that we must look to our laurels."

"The immediate effect of this lesson is to be found in speeding up our campaign to raise $350,000 to defray the expenses of our participation in the Olympic games as a whole. Already we are getting a response from all parts of the country, latest reports from Chicago and Detroit, among other places, being most encouraging. There is no doubt in my mind that we can carry off first honors if we obtain the funds necessary to thoroughly train, equip and quarter our contestants."

Hendricks to Assist Moran.

Cincinnati, O., Feb. 4.—Jack Hendricks, former manager of the Indianapolis American association club, today signed a contract with the Cincinnati Nationals to be assistant to Manager Moran. Hendricks also will scout for the Reds. He is a college man and at one time assistant prosecuting attorney of Chicago.

ARMY-NAVY FIVE CLASHES WITH FAST FLOTILLA TEAM THIS EVENING

At Parish hall this evening, the basketball contest will be between the Army-Navy five and the fast Flotilli five of the Submarine Base at New London. This is the first appearance of the sailors on the local court and a fast game is expected.

The Flotilla line-up includes Green, center; Kehoe, Compton and Osgood, forwards; Bartz, O'Hara and Harris, guards. Green and Kehoe played with the Naval academy team for two seasons while Osgood and Compton were formerly of the U. S. S. Birmingham team, champions of the Pacific coast in 1922. Harris and Bartz played with the champion Hampton Roads team last season and O'Hara starred with the Army and Navy team of the Panama area for two years. The team is backed by many years of experience and is considered the best service team on the east coast. They have several victories to their credit this season and feel sure of taking the long end of the score in tonight's game.

The Army-Navy club has been going strong this season and after a stiff workout last night feel confident that they can send the Flotilla team back to the base with a defeat. The local team will use the regular lineup which includes "Mondi" Normandin, Harry Mills, Bob Cardle, the Coleman boys and Lemieux.

The preliminary game will be between the Army-Navy Seconds and the Nobies. Dudley Burr, who officiated so creditably last week will again referee in tonight's contest.

STIFF SCHEDULE PLANNED FOR HAUGHTON'S SQUAD

New York, Feb. 4.—Columbia's football team, which will start next fall its second season under the tutelage of Percy D. Haughton, former Harvard coach, faces one of the stiffest schedules of any major eleven in the east. Contests with Pennsylvania, Cornell, Army, Syracuse and Williams are among the nine games on the 1924 list made public today.

The season starts on September 27 with Haverford, and closes with a Thanksgiving day game with Syracuse, which probably will be played at the Polo grounds. Both of these teams are newcomers on the schedule. Army and St. Lawrence bringing to four the number of changes over the 1923 schedule. They replace Dartmouth, Ursinus, Middlebury and Amherst.

The complete schedule follows:

September 27, Haverford, at home; October 4, St. Lawrence, at home; 11, Wesleyan, at home; 18, Pennsylvania at Philadelphia; 25, Williams, at home; November 1, Cornel at Ithaca; 8, New York university, at home; 15, Army at West Point; 27, Syracuse, at home.

BRITAIN FILES CHALLENGE FOR THE DAVIS CUP

London, Feb. 4.—(By The A. P.)—Great Britain has sent a challenge for the Davis cup, the premier trophy of international lawn tennis, now held by the United States, it was announced this evening.

Britain's challenge is the seventh to be filed for the 1924 Davis cup contest and the sixth from a nation in the European zone. Last year the British team, which did not measure up to the playing strength of a nation which has won the international trophy five times since 1900 was eliminated in the second round by Spain, after defeating Belgium in the opening round of European zone competition.

NEWARK CLUB AFTER RODRIGUEZ-GREB BOUT

Buenos Aires, Feb. 4.—It is understood here that the Newark National Sporting club is negotiating for a match between Angel Rodriguez, the Uruguayan light heavyweight, and Gene Tunney, or Harry Greb, to take place in Newark. With the exception of Jack Dempsey, Rodriguez is distinguished in the sporting world as the only boxer who ever knocked out Luis Angel Firpo. He has so far been in thirty-four encounters without losing one of them.

WILSON HAS SIGNED FOR BOUT AT DANIELSON

Frank Barber wired The Bulletin from New York Monday afternoon that he had signed Johnny Wilson, former middleweight champion, to appear at Danielson on February 14, at the opening card of bouts at the new Casino are it. The message made no mention of Wilson's opponent in his coming appearance nor of the distance of the bout in which he will appear.

The bouts of the 14th will mark the opening of the new arena, which is the only institution of its kind in Eastern Connecticut. Mr. Barber has had remarkable success as a promoter operating in such a small community, comparatively, and this is again made evident through his ability to sign up such a famous exponent of boxing as Wilson. The complete list of bouts for the opening how will be announced this week.

A Challenge.

The Jewett City Whirlwinds challenge any fast second team in Eastern Connecticut, out of town games preferred, especially with the Baltic Bantams and the Army and Navy Seconds. Please answer through this paper, or write Mgr. Joseph Skarzdowsky, Box 1211, Jewett City, Conn.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

The Vernon Club has sold the veteran first baseman and outfielder Hamilton Hyatt, to the Galverston club of the Texas League.

Ira Thomas, president and manager of the Shreveport Club, last week closed his deal whereby he acquires Shortstop Bill Orr from the Seattle Club. Orr has been a fine player in the Coast League, but Seattle was overstocked and could not use him.

Charles (Spider) Baum, veteran pitcher of the Coast League, who retired last year after nearly 20 years of service, is to come back to the game as a coach, having been signed for that position by Manager Duffy Lewis of the Salt Lake Bees.

National League opening games have been announced as follows: Boston at Philadelphia, Brooklyn at New York, Pittsburgh at Cincinnati, and Chicago at St. Louis. Clubs away from home for the opening will have their home openings on April 24.

The St. Joseph Club of the Western announces the sale of Catcher Harry Kandler to Hamilton of the Michigan-Ontario League. The Hamilton Club has traded Outfielder Ted Kayler to Bloomington of the Three-I League for Outfielder Dave Callahan.

Just to show that his eye is all right, Grover Alexander, the veteran pitcher of the Chicago Cubs, took part in a trap shooting tournament in Chicago the other day. He won two events and was third in another, against the best trap shooters Chicago could produce.

So complete is the "harmony" stuff in the Coast League under the new dispensation that the Sacramento Club is said to have been put on the market by the owners and the Vernon Club, made homeless by league edict, is about to be chucked to any one who cares to make an offer.

Bill Doak and Vernon Clemons, constituting a battery, already have gone to Bradentown, Fla., to prep themselves for a season with the St. Louis Cardinals. They must have heard rumors that some doubt was expressed as to the sort of battery work the Cards are going to get this year.

Commissioner Landis has told the world that the first team he will visit on his round of the Southern training camps is Cincinnati, at Orlando and he has issued a challenge to any player of the Reds to meet him at 18 or 20 holes. Let, therefore, the baseball year be considered as opened.

Al Tyson, outfielder, who has been playing with the outlawed Simmons team of Nenosha, Wis., for two or three years, is going to return to Organized Baseball as a member of the Louisville Colonels. Though associating with ineligibles he has been a free agent and therefore not himself ineligible.

Among new players obtained by Minneapolis under option are Pitcher Earl Hamilton and Outfielder Rob Russell, from Pittsburg. The latter was to have been sent to Kansas City in the Wright deal, but the management of the Blues decided it could not use the veteran, so he goes to the Millers.

The St. Louis Cardinals are to have more uniforms this year than Clarence Rowland has evening clothes. Manager Rickey has placed orders for two home sets and two road sets. Also he will rig out his players in red flannel undershirts. Various psychological reasons are given for the red underwear.

The New York Americans announce 21 exhibitions games during their spring training trip, with the first eight or ten to be played in New Orleans. Then a number will be played with Rochester and Brooklyn in the grits circuit. That ought to be about enough to tune the Yanks for the season ahead.

The Portland Club got something pretty good for nothing when it picked up Outfielder Frank Wetzel after Oakland had turned him loose. Wetzel, formerly with the St. Louis Browns and later with Beaumont and New Orleans, can hit. He broke a leg early in the season with Oakland, was out most of the year and finally was turned loose.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

TRICKS BY UNCLE LUCKY

Although the Shady Forest trees
Were bare of whispering emerald leaves
The frosted snow made laces slim
That sparkled bright from every limb.

With a jingle, jingle, jang! the sledmobile stopped in an open space in the Shady Forest, where the warm rays of Mr. Merry Sun sparkled on the snow-carpet and the frosty laces hanging from the branches.

Lifting out the big basket of good things, the Yellow Tog Tramp set it down, while Little Miss Mousie looked for the package of turnip tea. Chippy Chipmunk and the Squirrel Brothers soon made a fire of dried twigs, over which Henny Jenny placed the tea kettle.

Pretty sooh, it was singing a song, and when the turnip tea was made, every one began to feast on the good things.

"Goodness gracious meebus!" exclaimed dear Uncle Lucky, "what makes the tea taste so good."

"Maybe it's because we are all so happy," answered sweet Lady Love, smiling at Uncle Lucky over her tea-cup brim. And I guess she was right, for when we are making others happy, everything seems good to us.

After all the things had been packed away in the sledmobile, Uncle Lucky threw more wood on the fire, and pulling out his pocket handkerchief, winked at Lady Love.

"Ha, ha," laughed the kind old gentleman rabbit, let me think a minute or three," and in a jiffy he had tried the handkerchief around his finger, giving a pull there and a jerk here, until it looked just like a tiny figure.

"Rock-a-by baby, I ever did see," sang the dear old gentleman bunny

Then, with a twist and a turn, he changed the handkerchief to look like a bird, with blue polkadot wings.

"Hey, little birdie, don't you sigh,

You'll be an eagle, by and by."

Sang Uncle Lucky, and before you could say "Winky Pinky!" the handkerchief bird had turned into a rabbit with long ears.

But, dear me! The handkerchief wasn't big enough, so the old gentleman bunny made a little pig instead.

By and by, Mr. Merry Sun stood tip-toe on the hill in the West, and Lady Love said:

"We'd better be going before the Long-Legged Shadows come creeping through the wood."

So, into the sledmobile jumped the picnic party, and away they went down the long winding road, darker now because Mr. Merry Sun was hidden behind the hill.

Here and there a little tramp squirrel scampered out of the way, kicking up the snow with his nimble hind feet, and in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

the leading part in the unspeakable difficult work of making peace.'

"Leaders in great crises," he said, "do not depend on favor for renown. Ernestness is indeed the path to immortality."

Both Senator Lodge and Senator Robinson will serve on a committee designated to represent the senate at the funeral services.

In the house the war president was eulogized by Representative Longworth of Ohio, the republican leader, as a great figure whose passing would be mourned throughout the civilized world" and by Representative Garrett, leader on the democratic side, as one who had "walked upon heights untouched before by human feet."

Both senate and house adjourned after adopting a joint resolution recording the "profound sensibility and sorrow" of congress over the removal of the former chief executive. The senate will not meet again until Thursday, but the house will sit tomorrow and probably also on Wednesday, since the majority leaders do not regard adjournment on the funeral day as appropriate in view of the absence of state ceremonies. A committee to represent the house at the funeral will be named by Speaker Gillett tomorrow.

NO SOCIAL ACTIVITIES AT WHITE HOUSE FOR 30 DAYS

Washington, Feb. 4.—Cancellation of all social activities at the White House during the thirty days of official mourning for former President Wilson was announced today. The order affects the congressional reception, which was to have been held Thursday night, and several other state functions.

President Coolidge will keep his engagements to go to New York on February 12 to speak at the annual dinner of the National Republican club, however, officials said, pointing out that this was not a social function.

SIMPLE FUNERAL WAS THE WISH OF FORMER PRESIDENT

Washington, Feb. 4.—(By the A. P.) —Decision to hold a simple funeral service for former president Wilson, it was authoritatively learned tonight, was in deference to an expressed wish of Mr. Wilson that no public or official exercises be held in connection with his funeral or burial. It was in consequence of this circumstance that Mrs. Wilson has felt unable to yield to the expressed wish of those who have urged public ceremonies.

WALTERS. GARDY, HARTFORD, PLANS BIG RESTAURANT IN NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 4—Carl Grimes of Riverside Heights, Emil Strom of Amagansett, L. I.; Mrs. Henry Bogue, Montville; Mrs. Lee Beebe, Briggs street; Miss Bertha Wilbur, Groton, Henry Strickland, Ivoryton, Cadet Dale Bebolt of the United States Coast Guard academy, Mrs. Joseph Lake, Walbach street, Miss Rena Spinster, Bank street, Mrs. Joseph Hey, Mystic, Miss Pearl Sanford, Farnsworth street, William McKay, West street, Miss Emma Gifford, Tenth street and Mrs. Oliver Reynolds, and infant son, of Walden avenue, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged today.

Anthony Samataro, 38, a former resident of New London, died this morning at his home in New Haven, from tuberculosis. Mr. Samataro is survived by two sons, Frank and Salvatore Samataro and by two daughters, Misses Mary and Irene Samataro. The body will be brought to New London for burial.

Myrtle M. Twiss, 48, formerly of New London died last night at a sanatorium in Stamford, in which institution he had been under treatment a year and a half for a brain affection. Mr. Twiss is survived by his wife and a brother, the latter being Harry Twiss, inspector in the employ of the Connecticut Company in New London. Mr. Twiss was for many years a conductor in the passenger service of the Central Vermont railroad until ill health compelled him to seek treatment at the Stamford sanatorium.

The news of the death of Mr. Twiss was received here with great surprise for since last summer it was believed that he was making progress and would ultimately enjoy sound health again.

Salvatore M. and Angela Andriola have sold to Angelo Samataro a house and lot on Darrow street.

Joseph Sandora 2nd., and Ebba Sandora have sold to Henry S. Dorsey a dwelling house on Squire St.

The funeral of Thomas Brassfield was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. John J. McGrath. The bearers were Alfred Harvey, Dennis Shea, James McDermott, Dennis Doyle, Henry Sylvia and Francis McManus. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

The New London fire department responded to 22 alarms during January and an idea of the excellent work performed by the firemen can be obtained from the fact that the estimated damage occasioned was but about $1,600. Sixteen of the alarms were still, the other six being alarms rung in from boxes.

The Commissioner of Motor Vehicles has caused the operator's license of John Ryszko of 322 Main street to be suspended, Ryszko having been penalized in the police court recently for operating his auto-truck while under the influence of liquor.

It became known today that New London is to have another high grade restaurant and a catering establishment connected with it, for Walter Garde, of Hartford and New London, well known restauranteur, will within a few days lease the entire lower floor of the Mercer block, now in course of construction on the former Williams property, corner of State and Meridian streets, for a term of 15 years. The terms of the lease have already been agreed upon and will be negotiated, it is expected during the next day or two.

Hedby Tetreault, formerly of New London, arrested in Norwich last night at the request of the New London authorities, charged by his wife, Mrs. Lillie Tetreault of Montauk avenue, with the theft of a diamond ring, valued at $200, was in the police court this morning. The charge against him was not pressed, however, as Tetreault had the ring he was accused of stealing in his possession and as he was willing to return it to his wife, he was allowed to do so and the charge against him was nolled. Tetreault, who has been estranged from his wife some time, declared that the ring was given him by his mother-in-law and that he had a right to its possession, and that he took it with him when he and his wife separated.

Dave Clark, a colored man, for many years a resident in that classic locality known as "Hell Hollow" lost an arm some years ago through indulgence in intoxicating liquor, for he was frozen when on a spree so that the arm, had to be amputated. That experience did not teach him wisdom and Saturday night he was arrested and today was convicted of selling booze and of drinking it, too. Dave told a very foolish story about meeting a red-headed Pole on North Bank street and from him buying that grade of whiskey known as "white mule," because it has the kick in it. The story was told in the police court when Dave and his associate in a house on Douglas street kept by Minnie Karson, was presented for conduct that disturbed the peace, Saturday night. There were a couple of Salem witch wenches, wood choppers, named Spinard and Fontin, and a white woman, Angelina Bottomly, in the home of the negress, and they created such a disturbance that they were a nuisance to the neighborhood that led to the arrest of the gang. Mrs. Kerson was fined $50 for maintaining a disorderly place and Clark was fined $200 for supplying the booze that led to the noisy demonstration. He didn't deny that he supplied the booze but there was a question in his mind as to whether he "sold" it as he was given the money to get [illegible] woodchoppers and he secured it for them and did not [illegible] the extent of a penny, he said.

He is understood to have told a very different tale when he had been convicted and was away from the court. Then he accused one Lubchansky, residing in Douglas street and keeping a place on North Bank street of selling the liquor. Clark is said by the police to have gone into particulars and to have given them every information they sought. He did not conceal anything in accusing Lubchansky.

When the police had listened to the recital of Clark, they secured a search warrant and then searched the home of Lubchansky, getting evidence it was the source from which a supply of home-made whiskey is coming. Lubchansky was convicted in the police court last November when booze was found in his place. He was then fined $150 and was sentenced to a year in jail, but the jail sentence was suspended on the promise of Lubchansky not to have any more liquor in his home or in his store during the year to come. Lubchansky will have to answer in the police court Tuesday. He is at liberty on a bond of $1000 now.

Donald Chapman of Sigourney St., Hartford, charged with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, was not tried for the offense as he asked for an adjournment of the case and was put over for a week. He gave a bond of $200 to appear then.

Mrs. Harold Jackson and infant, of Hempstead street, Miss Gladys Bradham of North street, Thomas Haney of Fairs Harbour place, Martin Hansen of Mystic and Miss Jane Robinson of Westerly, were patients discharged today at Home Memorial hospital.

As a tribute of respect to Former President Woodrow Wilson flags were displayed at half-mast today on the municipal building, state armory, submarine base, United States Coast Guard academy and the several forts in the New London artillery districts, Forts Mansfield, Michie, Wright and Terry.

The state police at the Groton, Centerbrook and Hartford barracks continued their concerted efforts today to apprehend the driver of an automobile, which side-swiped a machine in which Andrew Hale, 30, and Charles Peters, both of Marlborough, were passengers, causing the latter machine to overturn and instantly kill Hale, Sunday night at Marlborough. The colliding car was driven away at a high rate of speed. The car was headed towards New London.

Special Agent John Dowd, of the department of justice, Hartford, has written the New London police for the record of Emmet Ryder, formerly located in New London, who served a sentence in the house of correction in New York from April 12, 1918, until June 19, 1918, and who on the latter date was taken into custody in New London on a theft charge. Ryder, when presented in the police court, was held for trial before the superior court and when presented before that tribunal was convicted and sentenced to a stay in the New London county jail. On Jan. 18, 1919, while a trusty at the institution, Ryder saw an opportunity to make his escape, fled through High street and managed to make a successful getaway for he never was captured.

The continued case of Gilford Gross, charged with violation of the laws of Groton in allowing an automobile to park on the left hand side of the highway and without lights showing, occupied the Groton town court this morning. Gross was convicted and Judge Cornelius C. Costello imposed a fine of $5 and costs, then suspending payment of the penalization because of Gross having been out of employment a considerable length of time and compelled to undergo hospital treatment.

Several cases were heard in the juvenile court, being continued from last Monday. The cases were again continued and the youngsters were placed in the care of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield.

The continued case of Joseph Arsenault, charged with non-support was again continued, this time for two weeks, as counsel for defendant, asserted that there was a decided improvement in the matter of the accused providing for his wife and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest L. Whiton and family have moved from Ocean avenue to their new residence on Montauk avenue.

Miss Monica Cahey, student nurse at St. Francis' hospital, Hartford, has returned to that institution, having spent several days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Cahey.

A record number of members of New London lodge of Elks will probably attend the regular session of the order Thursday night and because of anticipation of the throng, the meeting will be held in the state armory instead of the lodge rooms. During the meeting a class of 50 candidates will be initiated, the exemplification of the work to be by past exalted rulers. The roll call will take place, also an elaborate array of vaudeville entertainment will be presented together with a bounteous repast.

Andrew Maher, who has long been confined to his home on Broad street, is so weak that it is believed he cannot survive many days.

WAUREGAN

A concert was held in Wauregan Hall, Monday evening at 7:45 for the Congregational church building fund. The Union Quartet of Pawtucket rendered the musical selections and Miss A. E. Hall of Providence, dialect reader, gave the remainder of the entertainment. Both were very good.

PLAINFIELD

There is much interest in the sewing classes being conducted by Miss Hartwell at the Community House on Monday and Tuesday afternoons and on Friday evenings.

The girls of the high school are playing good basketball. In the preliminary game Plainfield defeated Woodstock at the Community House last Tuesday evening, 18 to 9.

The Boy Scouts, Troop 1, made the most of the fine weather, Saturday, hiking to Bradford hill in the afternoon and enjoying a roast in the open.

Mrs. Mary Elmer of Providence has been visiting in Plainfield, a guest of Mrs. Beecher Brown on Black Hill.

Volleyball has been introduced at the Community House, the first game being played last week Wednesday at 8 o'clock. Captain Ray Greene had the following team: Clifford Marsden, Louis Lamothe, Arthur Barry, Edgar Gobeille and Captain Coffey lined up his team as follows: Timothy Delacoll, Leland Raney, and Emil Lafreniere.

The first Sunday evening service was held in the newly renovated auditorium at the Congregational church Sunday night. The service was largely musical. The program was an organ solo by Mrs. Henry Leach, solo by James Royle, trio by Miss Gladys Wilber, James Royle and Christopher Krauss, anthem by the choir. There was a large and appreciative audience.

At St. John's church, Friday morning, a solemn high mass of requiem was sung at the funeral of Louis Joliceur, the celebrant being Rev. R. P. Morrissey, with Rev. J. C. Mathieu of Wauregan deacon and Rev. Oscar Normand, of Moosup, sub-deacon. The bearers were Israel Joliceur, Kyste Joliceur, William Bellevance, Fred Lavallee, Edmond Joliceur, John Wynn. Burial was at the Sacred Heart cemetery, in Wauregan.

J. Dyer Lemieux, who has been employed in the store of Mose Bertheume of Danielson, he is again living in Plainfield, employed in a local store.

R. G. Rees and son of New Haven were in town Saturday afternoon, calling at the Congregational parsonage. They are living in the parish where Mr. Prentiss was the former paster.

A book much in demand at the public library is Radio for Everybody, published by Austin C. Lescarboura. Plainfield has a large number of radio enthusiasts, new radios being installed continually.

Miss Marion Cleland, who came home Friday from Hartford, where she is taking a business course, returned Sunday afternoon.

Basketball interest was at a high pitch Friday evening when the Community House was packed to the doors to witness the game between Plainfield and South Manchester. The game was well played, fast and full of interesting surprises for the spectators. It proved a victory for Plainfield, 38 to 24. The Buddies also accounted for themselves by a good game with the Centerville boys, winning, 25 to 10.

On the same nights as the big game at Plainfield, from 35 to 40 attended the game in Danielson between Killingly and Plainfield High schools.

The senior class of Plainfield High school has started rehearsing for the annual senior play. The play this year, Doris Comes to Town, is being coached by Mr. Heald of Webster. Mr. Heald has coached several plays in and around Plainfield and his plays are always a success. Many of the stars of former high school plays appear in the cast, which is composed of Earl H. Mott, Earle S. Butler, Elbertus Briggs, Laurant H. Dore, the Misses Florence and Mildred Leach, Emily Hopkins, and Marjorie Mayhew. The play is of the light comedy type, and is crammed with laughs.

WESTERLY

Totally destroyed by fire early Monday morning, was the farmhouse nearly one hundred and fifty years old on the Norwich road, about two miles out of Westerly on the right-hand side fo the highway. Years ago the place was known as the Thomas Hinckley house when it was occupied by Thomas Hinckley, father of Thomas Hinckley, who died in 1876. Later the house was owned by Joseph W. Chesebro, a former selectman of the town of Stonington, who sold it to Thomas Richardson and wife and later it became the property of Adelard P. Dupris of Chicago, and at that time was occupied by Fred W. Clark, boss farmer, until it was sold in October, 1923, to the present owner, Dennis J. Keenan, who lived on the same road previous to this time.

Mr. Keenan, who was sleeping in the house as was also his son and daughter, Catherine, 13, and housekeeper, was awakened at twenty minutes to five when he thought it was daylight. Looking out of his window he discovered that the light was caused by the burning woodshed located close to the ell of the house. Arousing the inmates and with the help of neighbors he was able to save most of the contents of the house, although some furs on the top floor were burned. A telephone call to Westerly brought a response from the chief of the Pawcatuck fire department, Pierce Morrison, with other members of the P. S. Barber Hose company. Chief of the Westerly Fire Department George Egger, Engineers MaKenzie and Pasetti and Firemen Knight and Briody went to the fire with the Ahrens-Fox pump, but at that time the main house was on fire after the roof of the ell had caught from sparks and there was no water near at hand for use with the apparatus. The firemen were aided in saving the contents of the house by Patrolmen Connors and McMahon, of Pawcatuck, and were later joined by Sergeant Ferguson of the Westerly police force. Chief Egger entered the cellar of the burning house and disconnecting the water pump, was enabled to bring it out with the other contents of the cellar before the floors of the house burned through.

The direction of the wind at the time of the fire was such as to carry the sparks of the burning house away from the large barn located at the rear and the barn with its contents was saved. The glow on the low hanging clouds was seen for some direction at 4.30 but the exact location was not known. As the flames raged unchecked, the huge oak frame of the old farmhouse became a huge torch, the reflection of which was seen for miles around. About 6 o'clock the frame fell, leaving the large stone chimney with its three fireplaces on the first floor and two on the second standing in the midst of the ruins, as was also left the chimney at the rear of the ell. The house was of generous dimension with seven rooms on the first floor and two large rooms on the second, its destruction representing a loss of $5,000.

The cause of the fire is unknown. Electric wires for lights entered the house and a circuit continued into the woodshed from which it may be that the fire started. The farmhouse was situated at the end of a driveway several hundred feet from the main Norwich-Westerly highway.

The February session of the Westerly town council was held at 9.30 on Monday morning in the council chambers of the Westerly town hal, there being present Council President Campbell, Councilmen Morrison, Utter, Rossi, Fowler, Nichols and Smith, Clerk Whipple and Town Solicitor Ferguson.

Dr. Michael H. Scanlon appeared before the council to request for Westerly lodge, No. 678, B. P. O. E., permission to use the Bliven Opera House on a Sunday evening, for a charity concert, under the auspices of the Elks, for needy poor in Westerly. Dr. Scanlon said that it was planned for Loretta Higgins, a concert soloist, of Norwich, to be featured in a high class concert, saying that Miss Higgins has recently returned from Paris and was to sing in three concerts in Cuba at the invitation of the president of the Cuban republic, and at concerts in Boston in March, arranged by a Boston paper. Mr. Novogrod, manager of Bliven Opera house, had said that there were no available dates outside of Sundays, therefore a Sunday date was asked for. He said that he had talked with Councilman Smith, chairman of the Westerly police committee, who had referred him to Chief of Police Thomas Brown, who in turn had referred him to Town Clerk Whipple and when the matter had become before the council meeting on last Thursday, the last day of the month, business duties prevented his attending the council meeting and he was surprised when he learned that the council denied the petition at that time. He did not suppose the council questioned the Elks' methods of dispensing charity, it being a practice of the order not to seek publicity in their dispensing of charity. Yearly the charity committee conferred with the Westerly overseer of poor and always stood ready to lend aid, regardless of creed or color. In their twenty-three years of existence in Westerly, it had been the practice of the members to dig into their pockets and this was the first time that the yhad asked permission to go out and solicit aid outside of the order's membership; but he thought that 90 per cent of the support would come from the order's membership and their families. He said that the artist they offered had remarkable talent and this was an opportunity not only to enjoy a high class concert but to help in a worthy charitable cause. He did not want the council to go on record as doing something that was not right, or to establish a precedent or for this occasion to be an opening wedge to have a wide open Sunday night. He wished an expression of opinion from the councilmen and did not want them to sit on the fence in the matter, saying if everybody throws off the question, they would never get off the fence. The concert meant work for the Elks and they were willing to submit to any audit the council might impose in the question of the disposition of the charity and would gladly answer any question the council proposed.

Councilman Fowler: "You say Novogrod has no open dates for the opera house?"

Dr. Scanlon: "He said he had no open dates." At one time previously it was planned to have James Hammond and his wife, formerly Clara Turner of New London, put on an amateur show they were producing in New London before it was given there, but it was given up, when it was found that there were no available dates."

Councilman Utter: "You are not hitting on the right score; it is not a question of charity or patriotism. It hasn't got to a place where we want to open up the town on a Sunday night."

It was said that permission was refused the Spanish War Veterans to have a Sunday night entertainment and Dr. Scanlon said that the Hike Memorial project could not be compared with a charity work and as he wished to refrain from saying some things he recalled that the council had given permission for Sunday afternoon baseball and sports. Councilman Utter said that these sports could not be indulged in during the week, but a Sunday evening entertainment could be avoided.

Councilman Utter: "For the purpose of bringing the discussion to a head, I move that leave be given to withdraw the petition."

Councilman Smith said that the Stonington selectmen took the position that the question was one for the people themselves to decide and President Campbell said that Selectman Purtill, of Pawcatuck, told him he wanted to put it up to the people. Councilman Fowler wanted to know why the town hall, or high school hall would not do and Dr. Scanlon said it was a question of seating capacity.

At the end of the council meeting a show of hand vote stood:

For permission—Councilman Smith.
Against—Utter, Fowler, Morrisen.
Not voting—Campbell, Nichols, Rossi.

William Tulleck is having a week's vacation from his store duties which he is passing at his home in Beverly, Mass.

Henry J. Goulet of New Bedford, Mass., formerly superintendent of the New England Silk company, Westerly, was a week-end guest here, returning to New Bedford Sunday night.

Skating parties who visited Burden's pond Sunday, reported the ice in fair condition on that day with a strip of open water in the center section of the pond. A few catches of fish were reported taken through the ice.

The stock of Woodmansee shop was removed to a considerable extent Sunday to the old Timbury store.

Miss Gladys M. Stott of Westerly was a visitor in Providence Monday.

William Russell M. Dower of Westerly, a field deputy connected with the Rhode Island internal revenue office, Providence, was in Pawcatuck Monday morning, being called there together with other field deputies for a two days' conference by Collector Frank A. Page.

Flags on public and private buildings in and about Westerly were flown at half-mast Sunday and more generally on Monday as a mark of respect to the memory of former President Woodrow Wilson.

Ralph G. Bliven and Max Raithal of Westerly were automobile visitors in Providence this (Tuesday) morning.

"Andy," the Airedale of George E. Leonard of the West Side, missing since Thursday, was "taken into custody" by Dog Officer Charles Connors on Sunday and later turned over to his owner.

Mrs. Everett Burdick of New Jersey is the guest of her sister, Mrs. William J. Sevett, on the West Side.

H. C. Knight, Frederick F. Lewis and Charles T. Howard, of New Haven, and F. W. Story of Boston, were in Westerly to attend the stockholders' and board of directors' meeting held in the office of the Westerly Automatic Telephone company, Monday afternoon.

Stephen A. Lanphear of Lower Pawcatuck is confined to his bed by serious illness.

Mrs. Elizabeth Martin of Astoria, N. Y., returned to her New York home, after a Westerly business call last week.

Charles R. Johnson of the West Side is confined to his home by illness.

Joseph H. Lenihan, a state officer of the Elks from Westerly, said that he hoped the council would reconsider the question and grant the request for its value to charity.

Mrs. Edmund P. York appeared before the council and asked that the people of Watch Hill and residents of the Watch Hill electric line be granted ticket rights, as well as the people of Ashaway, if the rates were raised. He thought that an evening and night car could be put on the line advantageously. At any rate if decent service could not be granted rails should be taken up and busses put on. Councilman Smith moved that the chair appoint a committee to look into the matter. Sergeant Eros of Watch Hill said that the electric car charter gave the town council the right to demand satisfactory service

THIS WOMAN'S MARVELLOUS RECOVERY

All Due to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Truman, Minn. — "I was badly run-down and had pains in my side and back; sometimes I couldn't hardly move around in bed. My husband got me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after taking it I was so much better I could do my housework, have a garden, spade chickens, and in harvest time I worked in the field and helped pick corn. Sometimes I do chores and milk. I took the Vegetable Compound before and after my four-months-old baby was born, and it has always helped me wonderfully. I believe there is no better medicine made for women, and I hope every woman will give it a fair trial." —Mrs. Andrew H. Wiemerslage, R. No. 2, Box 54, Truman, Minnesota.

The Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has relieved women of such troubles for the past fifty years. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Teeth Stains Removed —for Few Cents!

No More Yellow Teeth—New Discovery Whitens Teeth Instantly

A new harmless treatment has been discovered which—often in only three minutes—gives dull, yellowish teeth a beautiful pearly whiteness. This new treatment, called Bleachodent Combination consists of a mild safe liquid and a new kind of paste. The liquid curdles or softens the stains, while the paste gently removes them, and prevents the formation of new stains! Tobacco stains often completely disappear after a few applications.

Bleachodent Combination is a new scientific product, perfected by dental specialists who knew that there must be a better, safer and less expensive way to clean teeth than the old way of having them scoured an hour by harmful, gritty abrasives. Bleachodent Combination is especially recommended for children's teeth, as their teeth are in a soft formative period during which gritty pastes or powders should be avoided, and only a safe, mild cleanser like Bleachodent Combination, which bleaches out stains but has no effect on the enamel, should be used. Bleachodent Combination does not affect enamel as its safe ingredients are intended to act only on the cause of the teeth stains—a substance called "mucin" which collects on teeth and forms a hard coating of stain.

Get Bleachodent Combination today, for just a few cents at all good drug and department store such as George G. Engler, H. M. Leron, Andrew McLaughlin, Lee & Osgood.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS ACTIVE.

New York, Feb. 4. — Stock prices moved upward with renewed vigor in today's active session despite intermittent profit-taking and occasional bear attacks against such issues as Davison Chemical and American Can, which closed at net losses of 3 1-4 and 3 1-2 points, respectively. Buying was stimulated by new increases in crude oil and raw sugar prices, reappearance of four per cent. call money and the optimistic utterances on the steel outlook by Sir Robert Horne, former chancellor of the British exchequer, who is on his way home after an extended visit to this country.

Low priced rails assumed the leadership of the upward movement soon after the market opened, Wabash preferred A was the outstanding feature, touching a new high for all time at 42 5-8 but closing slightly below that figure for a net gain of nearly a point on the day. Erie common touched 28 1-8, the highest price since 1917. Southern railway established another record at 48 5-8, but dropped below 48 on late profit-taking. Missouri Pacific preferred moved up 1 1-2 points to 35. St. Louis Southwestern common, the strong spot Saturday, dropped nearly a point on realizing.

When the rails showed signs of faltering in the late wave of profit-taking, new leaders were brought forward. A bullish demonstration in the oils carried Houston up 3 1-2 points to 89 3-4. Standard Oil of California closed nearly two points higher at 67 1-8 and the Pan-American issues, Zeaden, Phillips Petroleum, Pacific Oil, Marland and Shell Transport all closed one point or more higher.

A sudden outburst of strength in Baldwin just below the close sent shorts scurrying to cover and carried the stock up nearly 5 points to 129 1-8, the closing being slightly below that figure. U. S. Steel common touched 108, the highest price since last April, and then sagged to 107 3-8, up 5-8 on the day. Studebaker closed more than a point higher at 105.

Most of the sugars touched new highs on the current upward movement in expectation of materially increased earnings this year. Cuba Cane preferred climbed nearly two points to 68 3-4. Punta Alegre closed 2 1-4 higher at 82 1-4 and American Sugar Refining, Cuban-American and Cuban Dominican each gained a point or so. Cuban Raw sugar is now selling about two cents a pound above the prices prevailing a year ago.

There were several other strong spots scattered throughout the industrial list, including American Express, Computing, Tabulating and Recording, Kelsey Wheel, National Lead, Tobacco Products and Liggett and Myers, up two to six points.

High grade rails were not neglected, Atlantic Coast Line rising two points and Pennsylvania, Northern Pacific and Louisville and Nashville a point or so.

Call money opened at 4 1-4 and then eased to 4, where it closed. The bulk of the time money business was done at 4 3-4 although a few loans were reported at 4 1-2 for the shorter maturities. Commercial paper trading was quiet, the ruling rate being 4 3-4 per cent.

Foreign exchange trading was quiet, with the absence of a demand causing a reactionary trend. Demand sterling dropped more than three cents to around $4.39 1-2 and French francs were off about 5 points at 4.67 cents.

BOND MARKET.

New York, Feb. 4.—Pronounced activity in Japanese bonds, based on reports that the contract for the Japanese loan had been signed and that the issue would be long term 5 1-2s, today sent the price of some issues up more than a point. The heavy turnover of these bonds, combined with broadening activity in the low-priced railroad issues, featured the day's market.

Speculative rails followed the advance in the stock market, with Seaboard 6s, Erie convertible "D" 4s, and Frisco prior lien 4s establishing new highs on the movements. Popular convertibles in the other groups also recorded substantial gains, Punta Alegre 7s touching a new high price for the year and Cerro De Pasco 8s jumping 3 points.

Announcement that payment of full interest for the last six months had been recommended for the "Katy" adjustment 5s stimulated buying of these bonds and also helped other issues of the road.

Renewed demand for Liberty bonds sent the prices of all issues higher, with the third 4 1-4s closing at par. Foreign government and municipal bonds also were sought, with another heavy turnover in the Serbian 8s.

Private offerings were made today of $10,000,000 Philadelphia, Baltimore & Washington general mortgage 5s due in 1974 and $4,470,000 Pittsburgh, Youngstown & Ashtabula 5s due in 1963. Both issues, which are underlying bonds of the Pennsylvania system, were sold at 99.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, Feb. 4.—Wheat rose today to new high price records for the season, helped upward materially by statements from President Coolidge regarding proposed assistance for wheat farmers. The market closed unsettled, 1-2 @ 5-8c to 1 @ 1 1-8c net higher, May $1.13 3-8 @ 1-2 to $1.13 1-2 and July $1.11 1-2. Corn finished at 1-8 to 3-8c advance, oats unchanged to 1-4c up, and provisions unchanged to 17c gain.

It was generally assumed that the president's views were almost certain to result in decided curtailment of spring wheat acreage. The fact that a cold wave was threatening counted also as a bullish influence, notwithstanding that heavy snowstorms were reported as likely to afford protection for at least part of the winter crop. Decrease of the United States visible supply total had a further strengthening effect on values, as did gossip that northwestern millers were buying wheat in Missouri river territory at prices equal to five cents over Chicago May wheat delivered in Chicago.

Despite crippled wire service, interest in the wheat market showed a tendency to broaden, with sentiment generally favorable to the buying side, especially on recessions. Selling to realize profits weakened prices somewhat, however, as the day drew to an end. There was also some selling based on figures showing that the southwest had more liberal receipts today than for some time past.

Corn and oats followed wheat. The visible supply statement was less bearish on corn than had been expected, with a gain of only 420,000 bushels as against an increase of 1,064,000 bushels a year ago.

Provisions were firmer in response to an advance in hog values.

CURB MARKET.

New York, Feb. 4.—A broad upward movement took place in today's curb market under the leadership of the oil shares, buying of which was given impetus by further advances in crude and bunker oil prices. Vacuum was one of the outstanding features, touching a record high at 69 1-4, equivalent to $1108 a share on the old stock.

Chesebrough jumped 10 points on a small turn-over and gains of 1 to 3 1-2 points were registered by Anglo-American, Cumberland Pipe, Galena Signal, Humole, Prairie Oil & Gas, Prairie Pipe, Standard Oils of Indiana, Kansas and Ohio. Latin American oil was active around 92, its high price.

Dubilier Radio was one of the outstanding strong spots in the industrial list, touching a record high at 18 5-8, or about 4 points above last week's low. National dairy products touched a new top at 37. Ford Motors of Canada advanced 8 points on a few sales and Kresge climbed about a point to 46 5-8, a new high this year.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"

Rub on Good Old Musterole

That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once.

Rub good old Musterole on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief.

Colds are merely congestion. Musterole, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

As effective as the messy old mustard plaster, does the work without blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

The closing week in January saw the building operations in Norwich take rapid strides forward and with milder weather not far distant it is expected that the local building during the present year will be another record breaker. Even now several new projects are being started which is unusual for this season. On Laurel Hill Avenue the excavation work on the five room bungalow for Louis J. Brunette has been completed and the foundation is being laid. The contractors find very little frost in the ground and the work of putting in a concrete foundation has not been hindered by the cold weather.

In other parts of the city the same condition is true and work has been started on several new houses which will be ready for the plaster work by the time warmer weather arrives. Local buildings that weather started late in the fall have been rushed along and are fast nearing the completion stage.

At the office of Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton during the past week four applications for permission to build were granted. These four permits are for garages and for alterations and additions to present buildings. The building permits issued by Fire Marshal Stanton are as follows, the total cost being approximately a trifle less than $2,000:

To Johnson and Nolan to erect a frame garage on Carver avenue for Carl and Elmer Johnson. The garage will be 22x20 feet and finished in galvanized iron sheathing.

To James Mingo to build a brick addition to the present building on Vine street. The addition will be 12x16 feet and one story high. The foundation will be of cement.

To Frederick J. Ortmann to erect a frame garage on Orchard street. The garage will be 19 1-2x22 feet.

To Matteo L. Tedesco to make alterations and build addition to present building on Broad Street. The addition will be 2x18 feet. The alterations are being to convert the building into a store.

NEW LONDON

Plans have been completed by the Atlantic Refining Co. for the gasoline filling station proposed to be erected by them on Bank street, at the corner of Tilley street. The building will be of an attractive design, 15x15 feet, of brick and hollow tile construction. Work is to be started at once on the erection of a wholesale and retail filling station for the Dixie Filling Stations, Inc., on Pequot avenue. This is the second step in the development of the Dixie company's system of filling stations to be established. It will be 12x20 feet, one story high. The proposed construction will include the installation of a 20,000 gallon storage tank, set in concrete.

The permit has been issued for the erection of a frame bungalow for Joseph R. Rowland at 178 Vauxhall street. The house will be 26x39 feet and will have all modern improvements. The estimated cost of the dwelling is $4,000. The contract for its construction has been awarded.

Work has been started on a frame house for Maryanna Neidzwecki on Graham place. The dwelling will be 30x40 feet, arranged for six-room flats with all conveniences. It will cost about $4,000.

Thomas F. Moran, 192 Montauk avenue, has taken the permit for the erection of a two-story frame building in the rear of his dwelling on Montauk avenue. The building will be 20x35 feet, and will be arranged for a garage on the first floor, with storage space above.

The dwelling of William R. Golding at 90 Thames street is being remodeled. The work, which consists of the erection of a new roof and other exterior changes, is being done by the day for the owner. The cost will be about $2,000.

Plans have been completed for an addition to the store of the Schwartz Furniture Co., on Bank street, and are now being figured. The addition will be 35x50 feet, four stories high, of brick and mill construction, with steel sash. It will be connected with the rear of the present store building and will be arranged for showrooms and storage purposes. The owners will receive figures for the proposed construction.

Applications for Building Permits

Joseph R. Rowland, dwelling, 178 Vauxhall street $4,000.

Maryanna Neidzwecki, dwelling, Graham place $4,000.

W. R. Golding, alterations, 267 Pequot avenue $500.

H. B. Todd, garage, 95 Oneco avenue $200.

Number of permits issued for the week, 13; estimated cost of buildings, $11,325.

WILLIMANTIC

F. P. Dayoll has been awarded the contract to build a block on Union street for the Silas F. Loomer estate, care of John M. Hall. The plans call for a one-story structure, 50x50 feet of brick arranged for three stores.

COLCHESTER

There will be a town meeting March 6th to appropriate funds for the erection of a new graded schoolhouse in this place. It is planned to build a brick structure, containing 10 or 12 classrooms, and as yet no architect has been selected. F. O. Brown, first selectman, is the chairman of the building committee.

OLD MYSTIC

The Dennison house in Old Mystic is being thoroughly renovated. The work is designed to preserve the ancient style of architecture. There will be seven open fireplaces installed, new Dutch doors will be built in and there will be new floor work, new plumbing and electric wiring.

LYME

Plans being prepared for interior to the Faith Trumbull cottage at the State Farm for Women, Lyme, will be given out for figures shortly. New partitions will be erected to provide 11 new rooms and there will be new electric wiring, plumbing and other improvements.

ROCKVILLE

A New York architect has submitted revised plans for the new building for the Peoples Savings Bank which will be erected on Park street. The revised plans call for a structure to cost about $75,000. The building committee is composed of Frederick N. Belding, chairman; George Arnold, Jr., Fred J. Cooley, John P. Cameron and A. Leroy Martin.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were nine sales of real estate as compared to seven sales for the corresponding week in 1923. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $22,100 and $13,700.

There were 12 sales of real estate in New London during the past week as compared to two sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $47,450 and $16,895.

THE STATE SITUATION

Timidity about building in the winter season when the thermometer is apt to range anywhere from 5 to 60 above zero is still in evidence in the statistics of the building permits granted in this state, according to the Commercial Record. While the record of permits granted in the week past is nothing to cause any great amount of rejoicing, yet in the week 154 permits were issued in the leading Connecticut centers, for buildings costing $758,220, against 73 permits a year ago, for building costing $218,687 and 100 in 1922, for buildings costing $262,695.

from the electric line. It was finally decided to hold a public hearing on the street railway question when Receiver R. W. Perkins of Norwich and Supt. O'Brien could be present and a cost decided on before going to the public utilities commission in Providence.

The bill of Sergeant Eros for $56.50 damage done to fowl by dogs was voted paid and it was the sentiment of the council that more careful attention should be given to the paying of the account of the overseer of the poor.

For the committee on making a separate voting district in Bradford, Charles Fowler reported unfavorably on the extra voting district, but recommended that the polls be kept open until 7 p. m., it being left to Solicitor Ferguson to obtain the required legislation. Representative S. H. David thinking that the budget contained an appropriation for mothers' aid, was surprised that such was not the case and recommended the discontinuance of discount on tax bills. Arthur N. Nash asked if present fire works ordinance would be continued. An individual expression of the council favored no change.

Tristam D. Babcock was re-elected to the board of water commissioners. Robert E. Steere was elected a police constable. Police bills were voted paid, also the January bills of the town. The itinerant vendor ordinance as proposed was reported by Town Solicitor Ferguson with penalties and requirements to be adopted later. Milk licenses were granted to James G. Lynch, Henry Blacker and Mary Desmond. Permission was given Merrill Post, American Legion for the use of the Westerly town hall Feb. 13 for a Glee Club concert by R. I. State college. The sale of town notes to the Old Colony Trust Co., of Boston 4.25 was approved, as was the renewal of the high school construction note for $50,000.

The report of Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown showed eight arrests for January: intoxication 3, unlawful possession 3, driving automobile without license, 1, drawing check without funds 1, and five liquor raids were made. The report of the overseer of health showed ten cases of measles, one of chicken pox and one of membraneous croup. Russell L. Slocum was reappointed special dog officer. A leter was received from the mayor of New Britain protesting the raising of trolley fares by the Connecticut Co.

Senator Abram Datson asked the council what their attitude was relative to the purchase of the Fort Mansfield Grounds, Napatree Point, Watch Hill, option on which is to expire the 6th of March. Council President Campbell said: "I don't see where it can be taken up. It is so far off we don't want to take hold of it." Councilman Smith moved that the traffic signal for Dixon house square be purchased for $267 and the motion was seconded by Councilman Rossi. The vote stood yes, Smith, Rossi; no, Utter, Fowler, Morrison; not voting, Campbell and Nichols.

The annual meeting of the Stockholders of the Westerly Automatic Telephone Co., was held Monday afternoon at the offices of the company on Main street. At a subsequent meeting of the board of directors the election of officers resulted as follows: President, John Champlin; vice president, Samuel H. Davis; treasurer, Charles E. Sherman; secretary, William A. Sheffield; executive committee, John Champlin, H. C. Knight, Frank W. Story.

The board of directors is as follows: J. H. Macomber, G. B. Langworthy, Robert Drysdale, T. J. Bannon, George L. Stillman, Charles E. Sherman and John Champlin of Westerly; H. C. Knight and Frederick P. Lewis of New Haven; F. W. Story of Boston and Charles T. Howard of Providence.

The annual meeting of the Westerly Board of Trade was held Monday evening at the Colonial club, following a dinner. The report of the secretary showed a membership of 242, 75 members being present. The report of the treasurer showed $142. Officers elected as named by the nominating committee, I. O. Chester, Andrew W. Fisher, Charles J. Butler, Walter C. Hiscox, Clifford W. Campbell, were: President, Harvey C. Perry; vice president, Arthur V. Cottrell; secretary, Wells R. Fowler; treasurer, Clarence A. Ware; executive committee, Frank W. Coy, Charles Perry, A. R. Stillman and George L. Stillman.

It was voted to raise the dues from $2 to $3 a year and to hold the meetings at the Colonial club. Following the banquet Mrs. Rippin, national president of Girl Scouts, was presented and spoke for ten minutes in support of the Girl Scout movement.

The auditorium of the Westerly High school was filled Monday evening with Girl Scouts, scout officials and friends of the scouts, to listen to the address of National Director of Girl Scouts Mrs. Jane Deeter Rippin. In the afternoon Mrs. Rippin addressed a meeting of scout officials at Calvary Baptist church. At the evening session as Mrs. Rippin entered the Girl Scouts present in uniform arose and sang a welcoming song. Mrs. Rippin's talk was directed more especially to the Girl Scouts present and the work of the scouts as she had witnessed it in this and other countries. She taught the girls a new scout song and asked the others present to join in the singing.

In this column Monday morning it was stated that John P. Heyworth, of Pawcatuck, arrested Fred T. Mitchell of the Westerly police, before Judge Michael J. Turano, in a special session of the Third district court. It should have read: Fred T. Mitchell of the Westerly police arrested John P. Heyworth, of Pawcatuck.

A tremendous drama of human emotions in the everyday life of everyday people. The big and little things of living as we all know them and feel them in ourselves and in our friends are pictured with a clearness and sharpness that is fairly startling.

COLD WEATHER CUTS STORRS EGG YIELD

The thirteenth week of the Storrs egg laying contest was marked by severely cold weather and a slight decrease in the egg yield. Production fell from 3302 eggs or 47.2 per cent. in the twelfth week to 2950 or 42.1 per cent. in the thirteenth week. For the first time during the present contest the weekly yield was less than for the corresponding week last year although the average for the thirteenth week is still 510 eggs greater than the average for the previous eight years. Fernside Farm's pen of Rhode Island Reds from Attleboro, Mass., was in first place for the week with a total of 54 eggs. A pen of Wyandottes from Joplin, Mo., and owned by D. O. Witmer were in second place with a total of 53 eggs. Third place went to H. F. Barber's pen of White Rocks from Dover, Mass., and the next best score was made by a pen of White Leghorns owned by C. T. Darby from North Branch, New Jersey.

Recent experiments on feeding baby chicks in confinement at this and other stations have brought results of value to poultrymen who are rearing early chicks. It has been found that a small amount of pure cod liver oil added to the ration will prevent or cure leg weakness in young chicks even though they are never let out of doors. About one pint of fresh cod liver oil thoroughly rubbed into one hundred pounds of mash has been found to be effective. Care should be taken to get pure oil and feed in

MYSTIC

Isaac Cundall quietly observed his eighty-third birthday Monday, at his home on School street, receiving many gifts. Mr. Cundall is unusually active, and is very devoted to his church, seldom missing a service.

A notice has been posted on one of the large elms in front of the residence of Edward W. Gaskell, on Denison avenue, by John Fribance, deputy tree warden of the town of Stonington, giving warning of the intended removal of said tree and that a hearing will be held at that place Saturday, Feb. 9, at 2 p. m., for the purpose of hearing any objections that there may be to the removal of this tree.

The funeral of Stuart Campbell Allen, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Allen, whose death occurred on Friday from infantile paralysis after a short illness, was held Sunday afternoon, Rev. George L. Fairbairn, pastor of the Congregational church, officiating.

Mrs. Frank Godfrey of Groton was the guest of relatives here Sunday.

Mrs. John H. Rathbone is confined to her home in Park place by illness.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Mystic Bridge Congregational church, is to meet Thursday afternoon in the parish house.

Mrs. Sarah Wolfe of Ahsonia was here Sunday to attend the funeral of her grandson, Stuart Campbell Allen, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. O. Allen.

Mrs. Estella Spaulding of New London was a visitor here Sunday.

Frederic Cranston of Norwich was a visitor here on Sunday.

The Ladies' Aid society of the Methodist church is to meet Thursday afternoon in the chapel.

Philip Harris of New Haven was a recent caller here.

Mrs. J. G. Sallis is confined to her home on Church street by illness.

Miss Jessie Hatfield has returned to New Haven after spending the week end at her home in the village.

There was a large attendance at the Methodist church Sunday morning, the day being observed as Family Day, two children were baptized at this service.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Dibble of South Windsor are spending the winter with Mr. and Mrs. John T. Brooks.

This (Tuesday) afternoon the Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist church is to meet in the chapel. During the afternoon the annual opening of the mite boxes will take place, and will be followed by a supper at 6 o'clock.

Byron Hatfield of New York is the guest of his parents, Rev. and Mrs. Byron U. Hatfield.

COLUMBIA

The second regular meeting of the Columbia Teachers' association, was held Tuesday evening, Jan. 29. Several interesting drawings were discussed and material was planned for drawing lessons. Mrs. Cummings had an instructive outline for the story of George Washington. Seat work for the lower grades to be correlated with the story was taken up, also charts for geography drills were made. Further plans for Washington's birthday were discussed and arrangements will be made to hold an entertainment by the schools on that day.

The second debate between the children of the Pine street school, Mrs. Elizabeth M. Cummings, teacher, and the Center school, Miss Marion Holmes, teacher, was held at the Center school Friday, at 3 p. m. The subject for debate was, Resolved, That in no case is war justifiable, and never accomplishes its purpose.

Rev. Charles C. Haun and Dwight A. Lyman were chosen judges of the debate. The affirmative was taken by Laura Holbrook of the Pine street school, and the negative by Barbara Whitney of the Center school. The subject required much thought and study, which developed sound arguments by the contestants, so convincing on both sides, that the judges were unable to decide in favor of either, and declared the debate a draw.

Miss Marion Holmes spent Friday evening in Willimantic with her sister, Miss Madeline and attended the recital given by Miss Loretta Higgins at the Windham High school auditorium.

Charles K. Hitchcock has been ill for a few days with an attack of sciatic and lumbago.

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson D. Merwin and Miss Lula McCarkle, were in town on Sunday inspecting the house on the green recently purchased for Miss McCarkle, and to which repairs, inside and out, are being made.

Confirmation of the report of the death of Former President Woodrow Wilson at 11.15 a. m., Sunday, being received in town, the United States flag on Yeomans' hall was placed at half-mast, Sunday afternoon.

Rev. Charles C. Haun preached on Sunday morning on The Book That Never Wears Out. He urged that the Bible be read as formerly at the family altar, also in the public schools.

The Hebron Christian Endeavor society has been invited to meet with the Columbia society, Sunday evening next, at which time there will be special music.

An event that brought together all the members of the Lafayette club and their friends, was the celebration by that organization of its 36th anniversary, Saturday evening at the Parish hall. The hall was most attractively decorated in white and blue, with stands of flags and greens to add brightness to the decorative plan. In different sections of the hall were tall white columns set against the wall, and topped with baskets of greens. The central decorations were alternately white and blue festoons running out from the walls to a center circular hanger, forming a canopy effect over the entire hall. Promptly at 7 o'clock, a turkey supper of 150 covers was served. After a few remarks of welcome by the president, Arthur Ouimet, Joseph C. Maraan was called upon to offer prayer. The supper was prepared under the direction of Mrs. Alfred Ouimet. The menu:

Grape Fruit
Roast Turkey with Dressing
Giblet Gravy
Mashed Potatoes Mashed Turnips
Celery.. Rolls Pickles Olives
Fancy Cakes Ice Cream
Coffee

After supper the tables were removed and the dancing program was opened by the grand march, led by Arthur Ouimet and Miss Yvonne MaroAurele of Plainfield. The music was by the Ideal orchestra. Among the guests of the evening were Joseph C. Maraan, president of Union St. Jean Baptiste; David Lambert, president of the St. Louis society; Asarie Gauthier, president of the Artisans; Desire J. LOOKING INTO VALUE OF PLANTING TREES ON RESERVOIR WATERSHEDS

The value and feasibility of planting trees on the watersheds of Fairview and Stony Brook reservoirs came up before the January meeting of the directors of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce at noon Monday at the Wauregan house. It was referred for further investigation to Arthur E. Story, one of the directors, who is a member of the water board. The chamber has secured information that eight cities of Connecticut have carried out forestation on their reservoir watersheds with great improvements to the tracts as holders and deliverers of water to the reservoirs. Watersheds covered by the growth of trees naturally do not dry out as quickly as the ground that has no shade and experts in this line recognize the value of tree-growth on a watershed. Among the Connecticut cities that have carried out forestation, either on municipal or privately owned reservoirs are: Bridgeport, Middletown, Waterbury, New Haven, Danbury and others.

The directors approved the January financial statement of the organization.

The membership committee through F. Russell Smith secured the applications for membership of Harry B. Ford and Carl W. Brown. These men were voted into the membership of the chamber.

The board authorized a petition to the city council to give consideration for the reservation for parking for the three bus lines now giving interurban service to Norwich. The directors also authorized a petition to the city council for investigation regarding the dangerous condition of Laurel Hill at the eastern approaches to the bridge. Traveling conditions in this section are very dangerous for automobiles when the hill is slippery and there is a possibility of machines going over the embankment. The petition asked for an investigation by the city council of placing suitable safeguards for the traveling public.

The prevailing bad road conditions at Hallville, Poquetanuck and near Colchester was discussed. These matters were referred to the transportation committee for action. Inasmuch as Norwich is depending upon the busses to transport passengers from and to Hallville and Poquetanuck, it was deemed necessary that these roads should be put in proper shape so as to induce the busses to give service to these communities. The same is true regarding the road conditions near Colchester. This road was recently put in good condition, but on account of the heavy traffic and this being the principal road from Norwich to Hartford, the directors felt that further efforts should be made to make this road safe for travel. These matters will be taken up with the state highway commissioner in conjunction with representatives of the communities effected.

The rumor that the Central Vermont railroad would run its trains express from Norwich to New London was discussed and an effort will be made to continue the present arrangement of making various stops between these cities as is the practice now. It is felt that inasmuch as there are but two trains a day going south, that the service performed by this railroad to the patrons between Norwich and New London ought not to be curtailed.

The subject of equitable taxation was considered at length by the board which will give its entire attention to this matter at the next meeting. The Chamber is endeavoring to formulate a plan to be proposed to the citizens of Norwich for their approval or rejection.

BELIEVE VACCINE TREATMENT WILL HELP IN TUBERCULOSIS

That there may yet be found something of value to sufferers from tuberculosis by further study of the philosophy of the Dreyer vaccine treatment of the disease was contended at the medical symposium which was held at the Undercliff state sanatorium in Hartford Monday by Doctor Cole B. Gibson, the medical superintendent. As the principal speaker at the monthly medical meeting of the state tuberculosis commission, he presented and described many cases of tuberculosis glands of the neck that he had cured by the famous Calot method. This method consists in draining off the diseased content of the gland by an aspirating needle, introduced into the skin, and then in injecting certain antiseptic oils into the gland through the same needle. This little operation is repeated every few days until the nodes in the neck have disappeared.

Doctor Gibson claimed that, as the curing proceeded, the tubercle bacilli in the gland lost their waxy capsules and probably assisted in the cure. Depriving tubercle bacilli of their hard shells of wax is the basis of the Dreyer vaccine treatment of tuberculosis which just now has lost favor with most medical authorities.

Doctor J. J. Carroll, assistant at Undercliff, discussed different problems of diagnosis of tuberculosis in children, particularly in bone tuberculosis, and exhibited a series of cases with X-ray pictures of the diseased bones.

After the medical meeting the regular weekly business session of the state tuberculosis commission was held and the new construction at the various sanatoria was considered, together with a large number of applications for positions as assistant superintendent at the Hartford sanatoriums.

WILL GIVE ADDRESS AND DEMONSTRATE SHICK TEST

Dr. Howard Lanphere of the state department of health, Hartford, is to be the speaker here Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the town hall at a meeting arranged by the town health commission.

Dr. Lanphere will demonstrate the Shick test, a preventive measure for diphtheria. The subject will be one of especial interest in parents, teachers and graduate nurses, all of whom will derive helpful knowledge from what Dr. Lanphere will demonstrate.

TOLLED COURT HOUSE BELL FOR EX-PRESIDENT

As soon as Mayor Milo R. Waters learned Sunday afternoon of the death of former President Wilson, he directed Superintendent Joseph J. Fields to toll the court house bell 67 times, the age of Mr. Wilson. The tolling was concluded at 1.30, having occupied 15 minutes, and was immediately followed by a flood of telephone inquiries to police headquarters to find out what the bell was ringing for.

A rehearsal was held Monday evening at the Ponemah hall, and the members of the troupe were measured for their costumes. It is planned to hold the event the latter part of this month.

A Hartford paper in Sunday's issue mentioned the large boulder on Providence street, in an article describing large rocks in the Thames river valley.

Dr. David Sumner of Norwich, who recently returned from Europe, visited Dr. George M. Thompson of North Second avenue, Monday.

Miss Eva Nagle, who has been ill at her home on South Second avenue, is recovering.

HAS NORWICH NEWSPAPER PUBLISHED IN 1845

A copy of the Norwich Gleaner, which is 79 years old, has just come into the possession of Murray Zuckerman of 41 Peck street, having been found in an old Bible at the home of Mrs. Thomas Matthews of 428 Boswell avenue.

The Gleaner was a weekly paper, published every Wednesday, and the number in the possession of Mr. Zuckerman, which is dated Jan. 22, 1845, is No. 4 in its first year. John G. Cooley was the publisher and printer, Benjamin F. Taylor the editor and proprietor, and the paper was published at $1 per year at 95 Main street.

The drug firm of Lee & Osgood carries several advertisements in The Gleaner and is apparently the only business house of that day that is still in business here under the same name.

An interesting comparison with present day prices is offered by the advertisement of the U. S. Clothing Store, J. T. Fay proprietor, at 91 Main street. In offering 50,000 garments for sale, some of the items are as follows: frock and dress coats, $6 to $8; cassimer pants, $2 to $5. Vests, silk and satin, $1 to $4. Overcoats wadded, quilted and lined, with velvet facing, $6 to $18. Pilot cloth coats $3 to $10. Sacks of tweed and American goods, $3 to $7.

SEEKS DIVORCE FROM HUSBAND IN UTICA

Divorce from Earl William Canfield of Utica, N. Y., is sought by Hazel Louise Nothe Canfield, 20, who brings suit through her mother, Annie Waterman. They were married May 28, 1920, and it is alleged the husband has been intolerably cruel to his wife since Jan. 1, 1923, has been habitually intemperate for more than a year and committed a statutory offense with a Norwich woman between Jan. 1, 1923 and April 6, 1923. The wife's maiden name was Hazel Louise Nothe Brown. She asks the custody of their son, Earl Canfield, Jr.. The suit is returnable before the superior court in February.

NORWICH CITY COURT RECEIPTS EXCEED ESTIMATES

Receipts in the Norwich city court are already over $5,000 more than the estimates that were made at the beginning of the citys' fiscal year and the probabilities are that they will be considerably increased in the remainder of the year up to May 15, 1924.

When the city budget for the current year was made up the receipts to come from the city court were estimated at $9,000. City Treasurer Stephen H. Reeves monthly statement to the common council Monday evening showed that the city treasury has already received from the court the sum of $14,728.94 from May 15, 1923 to Jan. 15, 1924.

TAXPAYERS APPEAR BEFORE BOARD OF RELIEF

The board of relief, which has begun its sitting in the assessors' office at the court house, is having a number of calls from taxpayers who want to present their claims for a reduction of the amount at which their property was put into the list by the assessors.

The members of the board, James C. Fitzpatrick, M. Frank Leonard and Francis Beique, will continue their public sessions until Feb. 21 and will devote the rest of the month to preparing their report upon abatements or additions they may make.

MYSTIC WOMAN SEEKS ALIMONY AND DIVORCE

Mrs. Katie M. Haulisch of Mystic has brought suit in the superior court for a divorce from Gustave Haulisch, now of parts unknown, and makes a claim for alimony on the ground that her husband is worth $10,000. She alleges intolerable cruelty since Jan. 1, 1917. They were married Dec. 27, 1913 and she asks to have her name changed to Katie M. Fee.

Broadway Minstrel Follies Notice

Tonight, at 7.30 o'clock, the young ladies who will take part in the Hometown Minstrel Follies, will be called for their first rehearsal at St. Mary's T. A. B. Hall. Harry Linton, of the Linton Brothers, whom Mr. Davidson, manager of the Broadway theatre, has engaged to produce the Follies for the week of February 11, arrived in the city this morning, having decided that he would rehearse the young ladies and gentlemen himself, as the report from his representative was so flattering that he wishes to be responsible for what looks like one of the finest productions that these famous producers have ever made. All the young men who have enrolled will commence their rehersals on Wednesday evening at seven thirty at the same place.

Fewer axes would be ground if the grinders had to turn the crank.

PRINCIPLES OF RELIGION PRESENT FAMILY LIFE

Rev. Charles H. Ricketts spoke under Y. M. C. A. auspices at the Radiator plant Monday on Recognizing the Family Relation and said in part as follows:

The Christian religion is becoming more and more specialized; we are more and more emphasizing particular dates and institutions. This explains why special days are increasing in our church calendars. Not very long ago the only special days we observed religiously were Easter, Fast day, Thanksgiving and Christmas. But among the many now that we memorialize are Children's Day, very appropriately in the month of flowers; Mother's Day, father and son day, all of which have a right to be observed for what they represent. This modern tendency to make religion more and more bear on special things is most commendable.

Among the newer days we celebrate is that of Family Sunday, for which the first Sunday in February has been set apart. There is a Biblical precedent for recognizing Family Sunday. It marks a beautiful incident in the early days of our Lord when Joseph and Mary took the infant Jesus to the temple and presented him to the Lord. According to the Jewish law there was a specified time for this to be done. If it was a male child it was to be brought to the temple forty days after his birth, which marked the end of the legal period of purification. Now forty days after Christmas come the nearest to the first Sunday in February of any Sunday, and therefore there is special reason why it should be observed as Family Sunday.

But why Family Sunday? Was it not a child who was brought to the temple for reconsecration and dedication. Very true, but the aged Simeon "blessed them," Joseph, Mary and child as constituting that important unit upon which the progress of human society depends. The tendency of religion is to preserve this organic unity of the family relation; the tendency of worldliness is to break up its coherency. The speaker then went on to show the two sets of forces that tend to family disintegration. The first of these forces, while right in themselves, tend to separate the family. 1. Secular education of our universities; 2, business and professional life; 3, living at a distance from home.

The second set of forces that tend to family disintegration are positively bad, such as 1, drunkenness; 2, immorality; 3, divorce. The only real counteraction is the religion of Jesus Christ.

The men listened with unusual interest to the message.

NORWICH TOWN

At the Sunday morning worship at the First Congregational church, the pastor Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey preached a most impressive sermon on Courage.

The regular Sunday evening service of the Young People's Christian Endeavor society was omitted, to afford members an opportunity of attending the union service at the Central Baptist church at 6:30 when Rev. A. Earl Kernahan D. D., of Boston, spoke on "The Changeless Christ." The young Peoples C. E. society of the first Methodist Episcopal church also united with the Central Baptist church.

At the Methodist church Sunday morning there was a preaching service by the pastor, Rev. James B. Aldrich. In the afternoon at three o'clock at this church, there was a union service with Grace Episcopal church of Yantic, and the First Congregational church. Rev. James B. Aldrich of the entertaining church presided at the meeting. The principal speaker was Rev. A. Earl Kernahan D. D., of Boston, who gave an address before a large congregation, on "Christ At The Door." Rev. J. Harlow Graham of Trinity Methodist church, offered prayer; Rev. Robert Day of Grace Episcopal church, conducted the responsive service and pronounced the benediction.

During the service the choir of the Methodist church gave an anthem.

Christ and His Mother will be the theme at the mid-week service of the Congregational church, which is to be held Thursday afternoon at 3.30 in the chapel.

Thursday evening at 7:30 there is to be a union service, the Methodist parish uniting with the Congregational parish. Dr. Kernahan is to be the speaker. The meeting was originally intended for the workers in the Visitation Evangelism; but Dr. Kernahan desires that the meeting be open to the public and all interested.

There is to be a meeting of the Norwich Town Men's League this (Tuesday) evening at 7:45 o'clock in the Congregational chapel. Professor Davis of Connecticut Agricultural College, is to be speaker on "Connecticut in Agriculture, Etc, Fifty Years Ago, and now."

The postponed meeting of the Lathrop Memorial Foreign Missionary society, is to be held Wednesday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock in the First Congregational chapel.

For the benefit of the new Sacred Heart church, the third in a series of whists by the women of the parish, was held Friday evening, at the home of Mrs. De Lore Herbert, of Huntington avenue.

Following both masses at the Sacred Heart church Sunday morning, the pastor Rev. Charles W. Brennan blessed the throats of the congregation, in commemoration of the Feast of St. Blase.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Gremley and the latter's mother, Mrs. Harriet E. Brainerd of Mystic, motored to Norwich Town Sunday afternoon and were callers at the home of Mrs. Brainard's brother and sister in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lamb.

Monday, Mrs. Peck's sister Miss Annie Otrobando avenue, had as guests Sunday, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Peck of Smith and Miss Rose Smith of Colchester.

ATLANTIC CARTON CORPORATION TO BUY SHETUCKET MILL PROPERTY

Reports that have been current for some time that the cotton mill property of the Shetucket company in Greeneville was to be sold were given substantial form Monday night when it was learned on good authority that an announcement may be expected within a week or sooner of the purchase of the property by the Atlantic Carton Corporation of this city.

For some time the enlarging business of the Carton Corporation has moved its officers to look for another location as it had outgrown its present quarters on South Golden street and it had been suggested that the necessary change might oblige the company to move to some other city, although its officers hoped to be able to stay here. When the Shetucket mill property came into market for sale, negotiations were opened and it is understood that an agreement has now been reached on price and terms.

That the Atlantic Carton Corporation is to remain in Norwich will be a cause for gratification for the citizens and business interests that would have been loath to lose this industry, whose business has been on such a constantly enlarging scale since the company was incorporated Oct. 31, 1916, with a capitalization of $75,000. Walter E. Turner is president and Albert Van Wagenen treasurer and general manager. The company employs about 80 hands.

The Shetucket company, with its cotton mill located at the foot of Second street, was a creation of William P. Greene, known as the father of Greeneville in association with Samuel Mowry and Benjamin D. Greene. The old mill buildings were burned in 1842, but the mill was at once rebuilt, constituting the present property with additions that have been made. The mill operates 23,000 spindles and has averaged 225 employes during the past year, but has been largely shut down for the past four months. Throughout its career of 86 years it has been an important unit in the industrial life of the community, annually disbursing several hundred thousand dollars in wages. The mill property is in the tax list at $391,609. The company is capitalized at $500,000 with the following officers: President, Edwin H. Baker, Greenwich; vice president, William T. West, New York; secretary and treasurer, Edwin H. Baker, Jr., formerly of Norwich; assistant secretary, Oscar W. Carpenter, Norwich; assistant treasurer and agent, Charles J. Twist, Norwich.

WILL BE NO EULOGY AT THE WOODROW WILSON FUNERAL

At the Ceremony in the Chapel There Will Be Only Reading of the Psalms and Prayers—The Full Choir and Organ Will Play Their Part—The Favorite Hymn of the Dead Man, "Day is Dying in the West," Will Be Sung—At the Service in the Home There Will Be No Music or Hymns.

Washington, Feb. 5.—(By the A. P.)—Lonely in the inscrutable majesty of death, Woodrow Wilson kept his last vigil tonight in the quiet room where his life ebbed away. Eternal calm and a great peace brooded over the still, strong face, deep graven lines etched by years of pain and suffering were softened in death.

There was little more of preparation necessary today for the funeral ceremonies tomorrow. They will be doubly striking by their utter simplicity. Even the double religious services will be brief and lack much of the cadenced sorrow of church ceremonials for the dead. Of military pageantry there will be none. It was so Woodrow Wilson wished to be served in the last hours when men could do for him.

Three times in less than three years the national capital has been called to witness the solemn ceremonial attending the funeral rites of men to whom the nation would pay the highest honors at its command. First in that succession came the funeral of the unknown soldier. There was more of pride than sorrow in that mighty outpouring of American gratitude and patriotic devotion about the bier of a humble, nameless son who was glorified because he died for the flag.

Profound sorrow marked the funeral of President Harding. He also had been struck down in the full tide of his service to the flag and men mourned his untimely death. Again, but with utterly different note underlying, the military and civil pageantry of fullest national honors was mustered.

Tomorrow comes the third of national mourning, a day that will be strangely different from those that went before. Again the nation stands eager to lavish the full splendor of its sorrow about the bier of a faithful servant. But he would not have had it so and the American people have acquiesced in his longing for the privacy of simple citizenship. There will be no sound of drum or funeral note as he is carried to his resting place in the cathedral; no military coloring save the uniform of a handful of gallant comrades of the services over which, he was commander-in-chief. They alone will lay hands upon his casket in his last journey.

The family service at the "S" St., home will be held in the library, just below the room in which the dead war president still lay tonight.

The room looks out over the same quiet garden upon which he last gazed from the windows of the death chamber. It is a peaceful, quiet room remote from the noise of the city or the strife and contentions of the world. Before its wide fireplace Woodrow Wilson found much ease and comfort despite the heavy hand of fatal illness that lay upon him.

Tomorrow tender hands will lift him down again for his last short hour in that memory peopled room. They will lay him gently before the great fireplace where he so often sat and about him in the sacred privacy of the family circle will gather the few who may share in those last moments. Among them will stand the colleague upon whose shoulders now rests the heavy weight of the presidency. Among them too, will stand a few who served humbly with him in the days gone by.

A short half hour will serve for the intimate leave-taking there will be a trio of clergymen to speak the kindly, consoling words of the psalms and entread God's tenderest compassion for dear ones from whom he is parting.

There will be no music or hymns in the home service, although in life he had great love for three of the old, solemn melodies that have taught men courage and patience. His favorite of all was "Day is Dying in the West", and he liked "How Firm a Foundation, Ye Saints of the Lord", and to him came like a battle cry the pealing call of "The Son of God Goes Forth to War."

From the library of his home, Woodrow Wilson will be carried out by the soldier and sailor comrades of his strangely small escort—he under whose command the greatest armed forces of the nation, men in their millions, had served—to be lifted into the waiting hearse and the last journey begun. There will be only a few carriages following. They will carry the little company that had met in the intimate service at the house and among them will be the old friends and companions who are honorary pall-bearers. The names of William Howard Taft and Charles R. Crane and John Sharp Williams were added today to the list.

Down the steep pitch of "S" Street to the broad sweep of Massachusetts avenue runs the way to the cathedral. Along the road and about the house details of soldiers and marines will help to hold the road open against the pressing thousands that naught but bitterest weather can keep from this last mark of respect to a great American. Up the avenue the funeral way winds over the grade that leads to the great church.

Within, deep amid the masonry of its foundations, is the crypt chapel from which runs the only entrance to the vault. The few hundred who may find place at this oddly small public service will already be in their places when the funeral train arrives. They will be standing closely packed behind the seats where the bereaved family, the president and his cabinet and a few others of the distinguished guests will gather in that standing group will be representatives of the army, navy and marine corps, of the supreme court, of the senate and house and of the great departments of governments. There also will be the ambassadors and ministers and the few others who can be crowded in.

The casket will be laid before the altar rail and again the services will be brief. The full choir and organ will play their part in this ceremony and beyond that there will be only the reading of the Psalms and the prayers with Bishop Freeman and his Presbyterian colleagues, Drs. Taylor and Beach, again sharing in conducting the services.

At the close, when the benediction has been said and while the organ plays softly, Mrs. Wilson and the members of the family will go out, then all the company in the chapel. The entrance of the vault will be opened in the chapel. The great slab of stone that covers it has been set aside. The stricken family will go back alone to witness the placing of the casket in the nich far under the massive wall of the building where it will lie until its final resting place has been made ready.

In the chapel service, the choir will sing that favorite hymn of the dead man, "Day is Dying in the West."

SECRET SERVICE MAN GUARDS BODY OF WILSON

Washington, Feb. 5. — Woodrow Wilson, in death, as in life, while he was the nation's chief executive, is watched over by the secret service.

Each night since he passed away and until he is laid to rest, John G. Sirs, one of the secret service men, who was on the White House detail while Mr Wilson was president, remains in the room where his former chief is laid.

An offer of assistance was tendered Mrs. Wilson by W. H. Moran, chief of the secret service, soon after the death of the former president and as a result each night when the members of the family retire, Mr. Sirs takes up his watch.

GERMAN EMBASSY TO FLY FLAG AT HALF-MAST

Washington, Feb. 5. (By the A. P.)—The German embassy which so far has given no official public expression of mourning in the death of Woodrow Wilson, will fly its flag at half-staff, beginning at 12:30 tomorrow afternoon when the executive departments of the American government will be closed to honor the memory of the former president.

In response to a question late today officials of the embassy said: "It having been officially announced this afternoon that there will be general mourning for the late President Wilson after 12:30 o'clock, the German embassy will join the expression of the nation's mourning by flying its flag at half-staff."

Jules Jusserand, the French ambassador and dean of the diplomatic corps, was notified by the state department immediately of the death of Mr. Wilson and notified all his colleagues with the result that with two exceptions the flags were flown at half-staff. Arrangements were also made to send a wreath from the diplomatic corps to the Wilson home and it was said today at the German embassy that it had on Sunday contributed to the fund for the wreath.

MEMORIAL SERVICES FOR WIL SON AT PRINCETON

Princeton, N. J., Feb. 5—Official memorial services for Woodrow Wilson soon will be held at Princeton University it was announced today by the university authorities. Final arrangements will not be completed until after the Princeton delegation returns from Washington tomorrow where it will take part in the services for Mr. Wilson.

The delegation, which will be representative of the faculty, the alumni, the undergraduate body and the city of Princeton, where Mr. Wilson spent twenty-four years of his life, will leave for Washington tomorrow morning.

NO CLUE TO ASSASSIN OF PRIEST IN BRIDGEPORT.

Bridgeport, Feb. 5.—Twenty-four hours after the murder of Rev. Hubert Dahme, a priest for thirty years and for the last 23 years pastor of St. Joseph's R. C. church, police are absolutely in the dark as to the identity of the assassin and what motive prompted the slaying.

Shot behind the left ear on crowded, brilliantly lighted Main street, in the thick of a press of people going to nearby theatres, Father Dahme dropped unconscious at the feet of passersby, while the murderer escaped without anyone getting a helpful description of him.

Because he was one of the best known, best beloved priests of the city, authorities are fearful his murderer, if apprehended by private individuals who are making indignant independent searches for him, will meet with violence.

So completely are they at a loss to explain the tragic mystery of the gentle priest's killing, authorities will not even advance one theory as to the cause of the murder.

They have, however, checked up a gang of workmen employed on the new St. Joseph's church edifice, erected at a cost of $100,000, and which Father Dahme planned to formally open Easter, to learn if any disgruntled laborer harbored an imaginary grudge. They are also rounding up known drug addicts for questioning, and persons suspected of illicit selling of liquor who may have imagined Father Dahme had betrayed their activities to authorities.

Police tonight opened the priest's private safe. They carefully examined all papers and personal letters, but deferred making public what, if anything of importance, they had obtained.

Rev. Father Flynn, chancellor of the Connecticut diocese and representative of Rt. Rev. John J. Nilan, bishop of Hartford, arrived in Bridgeport this afternoon to take charge of the dead priest's affairs.

THUNDER FOLLOWED STORM IN NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Feb. 5—It was impossible tonight to estimate the extent of damage done by the storm which swept through the city during the past 24 hours. Considerable trouble was experienced with fallen trolley wires and trees blocking the roads and repair crews were working day and night to clear away the debris. As far as could be ascertain no one was injured nor was the damage in any section of the city or country great. Just as the storm subsided in its fury about 8 o'clock tonight, thunder was heard and several long flashes of lightning illuminated the sky.

Progress in Draft Of 1924 Revenue Bill

Republican Support of 25 Per Cent. Reduction on Personal Income Taxes For 1923 is Assured.

Washington, Feb. 5.—Republicans of the house ways and means committee today completed their draft of the 1924 revenue bill which carries a reduction of twenty-five per cent to apply on all personal income taxes payable this year. The measure is to be formally ratified by the whole committee on Thursday and reported to the house on Monday.

The twenty-five per cent reduction on 1992[illegible] taxes, which was voted by the majority members today, would mean a saving to taxpayers this year of about $225,000,000 Secretary Mellon has approved this section. A reduction of about $13,000,000 in the jewelry tax also was approved today by the republicans.

When the house would take up the bill, which provides for revision of taxes on the plan suggested by Secretary Mellon, was doubtful. Chairman Green said it was possible it would not be taken up next week on account of delay in passage of the appropriation measures.

Meanwhile, the constitutional amendment to prohibit the issuance of tax exempt securities will be taken up before the house on Thursday under a special rule adopted by the rules committee. Eight hours were allotted for debate on the resolution, which means a vote cannot be taken before Friday.

Provision was made by the ways and means committee republicans to permit pro rata distribution of any excess payments of taxes this year on later installments if the reduction in 1923 taxes is approved after the first payments are due on March 15.

The jewelry tax was retained at a retail tax and placed back at five per cent. The full committee had originally decided to cut the rate in half. However, additional exemptions were made by the republicans, all articles under $40 in value watches under $66 and all musical and surgical instruments, eye glasses, spectacles and silver-plated flat table ware being included in the exemption.

Mr. Green intimated today that the meeting of the whole ways and means committee Thursday would be more or less formal and that only one vote, to report the measure favorably would be taken by the republicans have fixed the income tax rates in private and have agreed to support the bill for a favorable report, thus assuring its passage from committee.

Secretary Mellon's proposed reduction in the income tax rates were advocated today by Representative Darrow, republican, of Pennsylvania, a member of the steering committee, in remarks inserted in The Congressional Record.

Defending the proposed reduction in surtaxes to a maximum of 25 per cent, Mr. Darrow said these taxes were evolved "during the war to make the rich pay but now they are not paying" because much of their capital was invested in tax exempt securities.

Mr. Darrow said he was convinced the majority of former service men would fare "better in actual dollars and cents as a result of sound revision of the taxes than they would with a bonus."

EXPLOSION WAS CAUSED BY ILLUMINATING GAS

Providence, Feb. 5.—Reports of explosive experts, filed today with Attorney General Carpenter, assert that the explosion which demolished a two family dwelling and cost the lives of 18 persons in Manville, a week ago yesterday morning, was caused by illuminating gas. Pathologists engaged to test the blood of two of the victims today reported that they found large quantities of carbon monoxide, the poison found in illuminating gas, in the blood.

An inquest begun Saturday is being conducted by Coroner Hugh M. Devlin, of Cumberland, Attorney General Carpenter today declined to say what further action he would take. It is understood, however, that he is awaiting the formal findings of the coroner before proceeding further.

Resigns Under Fire

The trustees of Albion College, Albion, Mich., recently accepted the resignation as college president of the Rev. Dr. John W. Laird, who quit "under fire," after he had been hooted from chapel by 550 students, who greeted him with a hail of hymn-books and a volley of "boos" and catcalls. Charges against Dr. Laird had been precipitated by a former co-ed, who declared he had expelled her, not because of cigarette smoking and drinking but because she had repulsed his advances.

To Furnish Relief For the Northwest

Ready For Formation of a $10,000,000 Privately Organized Corporation Within a Few Days.

Washington, Feb. 5—Formation ready for business within a few days of the $10,000,000 privately organized corporation to furnish relief to farmers and bankers in the northwest was forecast today by government officials and departing delegates to President Coolidge's conference on the economic situation in the northwestern states.

Secretary Hoover, who acted as chairman of the conference, announced that the capital of the corporation had been practically guaranteed by the commercial and industrial interests represented in the conference although actual subscriptions had not been received. He pointed out that although the corporation would be organized privately it would have the backing of the war finance corporation and consequently would not be bound by its capitalization of $10,000,000.

Clarence M. Woolley, of New York appointed by the conference to head the organization committee, spent the day in conference with Managing Director Meyer of the finance corporation and then left for New York to supervise actual work of perfecting the organization.

President Coolidge disclosed during the day that in addition to formation of the corporation the carrying out of other steps recommendation by yesterday's conference, and such pending legislation as the Norbeck-Burtness bill, he proposed to take further action to relieve the situation in the northwest if possible. Speaking to a group of agricultural delegates to the conference who called at the White House, Mr. Coolidge said he hoped the pending investigation of the wheat tariff by the tariff commission under the Fordney-McCumber act's flexible provisions would justify him in raising the wheat duty from 30 cents a bushel to 45 cents a bushel.

Mr. Coolidge agreed with the agricultural delegates on the advisability of passage of the Norbeck-Burtness bill to provide government loans to enable wheat farmers to buy livestock, but said he was not prepared, pending study, to give his endorsement to the McNary-Haugen measure which would create a government corporation to buy and sell the country's exportable surpluses of farm crops.

WIRE SERVICE DISRUPTED BY ICE AND SLEET STORM

New Haven, Feb. 5—Telephone and telegraph service throughout the state bore the brunt of the severe ice and sleet storm which last night and today swept through Connecticut, causing considerable property damage and retarding communication at various points. In the opinion of telephone and telegraph officials the storm was the worst since 1922.

Ice encrusted open wires suffered the most. South of Cannondale telegraph wires fell. This was the only serious break reported. The Bridgeport-New York trunk line service was held up for a short time due to fallen poles but was quickly resumed. It was impossible to move weather reports over the wires to some points due to sagging wires and breaks in the service.

The telephone exchanges throughout the state reported many poles down and service between Willimantic and Norwich, Bridgeport and Norwalk and Danbury, and New Milford bearing the burden of the storm. No points were reported entirely out of communication but individual lines were struck heavily, It is expected that normal service will be resumed by tomorrow afternoon.

Falling trees and poles seriously hampered repairmen. Approximately fifty poles were down carrying telephone wires, it was stated here tonight. It is expected that this number will increase when the lines are inspected tomorrow.

The storm damage to telephone and telegraph connections seemed confined to the south and southwestern part of the state, where the wires are exposed to the elements. In the upper part of the state the storm was less severe and the damage consequently smaller.

Reports from points along the coast indicated that sound going craft were not delayed by the storm.

WOMAN FATALLY BURNED WHILE PREPARING SUPPER

Waterbury, Feb. 5.—Mrs. Philip Chestler, of 189 North Elm street, died early today as a result of burns sustained on the night of Jan. 25, when she was preparing supper on a gas stove in her kitchen. Mr. Chestler, who was standing beside her at the time she was burned, was also taken to the hospital, but his injuries are not regarded as critical.

STORM IN MIDDLE WEST APPROXIMATED A BLIZZARD.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—The middle west tonight was digging itself out of one of the worst snow and sleet storms in two decades, with prospects that railroad transportation and wire communication facilities would be improved tomorrow, unless further snow, promised in weather forecasts, offset the headway that has been made.

Damage done by the blizzard will total hundreds of thousands of dollars. Some estimated it at many millions of dollars.

42 MINERS DROWNED WHEN BOTTOM FELL OUT OF A POND

Water Flooded the Workings of the Milford Iron Mine, Near Crosby, Minn. — There Was No Warning Except a "Rumble Like a Thousand Automobiles Roaring Down a Distant Road"—Men Were Suffocated by Mud and Water That Gushed Through the Workings.

Crosby, Minn., Feb. 5.—Forty-two miners perished when the bottom fell out of a small pond and flooded the workings of the Milford iron mine near here late today.

Caught in the lower levels of the small mine, only seven of the crew of forty-nine at work were able to gain the safety of a skip and ascend to the surface. Like rats in a trap their comrades died suffocated by the slimy mud and water that gushed through the workings, soaring in the shaft within a few feet of the top within fifteen minutes.

There was no extended warning; just a "rumble like a thousand automobiles roaring down a distant road" one survivor said. Then the leaping black wave of death engulfed them, battering the victims against the walls.

Night found standing at the mine opening scores of wives and mothers and children stood, some in frantic tears, others dry-eyed and staring, as helpless as were the men about them to snatch from the murky waters the bodies of their loved ones.

Most of the victims were young men, many of them married, and some of the children that took up the sorrowful vigil with their mothers were tiny tots.

The mine, situated about four miles north of Crosby in a region somewhat swampy, the last year yielded 72,000 tons of manganese ore. It is operated under lease by the Whitemarsh Mining company and is owned by George H. Crosby of Duluth.

BRITISH CABINET MEETINGS ARE BEING HELD WEEKLY

London, Feb. 5—(By the A. P.)—The new government is energetically working to be in readiness to meet parliament next week. Cabinet meetings are held almost daily and a number of committees are studying the different problems.

It is clear that the ministers intend to concentrate on international policy, especially housing, unemployment and agriculture.

An important conference will assemble tomorrow privately to discuss housing questions. It will be attended by the ministers of health and labor and representatives of both employers and trades unions connected with the building industry. The government's aim is to induce the trades unions to allow some relaxation of the strict trade union rules, in order to provide more skilled labor for the building trade.

In return for such relaxation the trades unions contend that the government ought to guarantee the continuance of its housing policy over a period of fifteen or twenty years, that is, guarantee to the trades constant work.

Another difficulty to be overcome is the hindrances placed in the way by rings or combines restricting supplies of building materials, and it is said that the government is ready to fight these rings. It is understood that the financing schemes do not present great difficulties.

CORCORAN UNDER INDICTMENT IN MIDDLESEX COUNTY, MASS.

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 5.—William J. Corcoran, former district attorney of Middlesex county, whose trial in Suffolk county, on blackmail charges was ingerrupted recently when the presiding judge declared a mistrial after a witness had alleged bribery of jurors, is under indictment on similar charges in Middlesex county. This became known definitely late today when, counsel for Corcoran, in moving a petition for nominal bail for his client, revealed the persons named in secret indictments returned by Middlesex county grand jury last Saturday.

Eight or more secret indictments were returned by the grand jury. Already Mrs. Theresa Duggan and Mrs. Lillian Hardy Reese, alleged lures employed by the so-called "blackmail ring" in extorting money from wealthy men, have been arrested and arraigned. Each furnished bail in $10,000. Late today Theodore Bearse, indicted with Corcoran in Suffolk county and named in one of the secret indictments here, surrendered. He was released on his personal recognizance pending decision on the bail petition tomorrow.

$2,600 FINDING AGAINST AUTO SUPPLY COMPANY

Bridgeport, Feb. 5.—Judge Isaac Wolfe in the superior court here today gave judgment for $2,600 in favor of Samuel Carp, local garage proprietor, against Joseph Simmons, proprietor of an auto supply company of this city. In giving judgment for Carp to recover the full amount for which he had sued Simmons the judge declared that he was satisfied "the defendant in this case has deliberately lied and perjured himself." The judge added that he was not entirely sure the matter should rest here. The suit involved an alleged breach of contract. The suit was on a cross complaint brought by Carp after he had been sued by Simmons in an action claiming $5,000 damages. Counsel for Carp asked the court to submit the evidence in the case to the state's attorney for action and counsel for Simmons declared he would join in any investigation which might be instituted.

RAILROAD LABOR BOARD SUSTAINS TELEGRAPHERS

Chicago, Feb. 5.—The United States railroad labor board today upheld contentions of telegraphers' representatives chosen by the class of employes of the Pennsylvania railroad, that elections held by the road in 1921 and 1922 were illegal and called upon the company to cancel an election which it had scheduled for Friday, February 8, and with employes for another election planned in accordance with previous decisions of the board.

The board also ruled that the telegraphers might choose an organization to represent them if they desired and that they might hold the election themselves if the company did not cooperate.

13 AUTOMOBILES RUINED BY FIRE IN WEST HAVEN

New Haven, Feb. 5.—Most of the thirteen automobiles in the West Haven garage, Washington avenue in that town, were ruined by fire today which swept through the place. The loss was from $10,000 to $12,000, Crosby W. Ackert had the garage and Robert Green owned the building. Cross electric wires may have started the blaze.

BRITAIN FOR ABOLISHMENT OF DYNASTY IN GREECE

Athens, Feb. 5—(By the A. P.)—Henry Morgenthau, head of the league of nations commission for the succor of Greak refugees, today intervened in the Greek political crisis by obtaining Great Britain's assurances that that country would not object to the plan of the republicans to abolish the Glucksburg dynasty by a vote in the national assembly, providing this should result in political stability.

Mr. Morgenthau obtained the British view through the bank of England, which advanced the refugee relief loan after Mr. Morgenthau found the Venizelists and republicans hopelessly deadlocked over the method of dismissing the dynasty. The Venizelists have held that the question of a republic must be determined by plebescite alone.

APPEALS FROM REVOCATION OF LICENSES OF PHYSICIANS

Hartford, Feb. 5.—One case in each of the counties in which licenses of physicians, alleged to have been obtained through fraud have been revoked, will be tried on the appeals that have been filed from such revocations, it was stated at the capitol today.

Attorney General Frank E. Healy is to try the cases for the state, appearing for the state health council and the examining board of the Connecticut Eclectic Medical Association. Four injunctions and 12 appeals are waiting to hear at the present time.

LAUNCHING OF NEW YORK'S NEW POLICE BOAT

Stamford, Conn., Feb. 5.—Mrs. Richard Enright, wife of Police Commissioner Enright, of New York city, christened the new police boat, officially known as No. 19, but given the name of Gypsy, when the craft was launched here today. Mrs. Enright broke the traditional bottle of wine over the bow and those nearby claim to have recognized the contents of the bottle as champagne. Thirty New York police officials witnessed the launching.

BUSINESS BLOCK IS BURNED IN COEBURN, VA.

Bluefield, W. Va., Feb. 5.—An entire business block of the town of Coeburn, Va., fifty miles southeast of this city was destroyed by fire of unknown origin tonight. Entailing a loss estimated at $250,000. Eight business houses and contents were razed and two other business houses were damaged. A dozen families were made homeless.

May Be Embroiled In Mexican Civil War

Rear Admiral Thomas H. Bridgruder, now in command of the "Richmond," has been instructed to go from Panama to Vera Cruz. He has been ordered to prevent a blockade of Tampico by the rebels and, armed tugs have been placed at his disposal. It is evident that the administration meant business when a considerable naval force was sent to the Mexican Gulf Coast, most of which is in rebel hands.

WILLIMANTIC

Richard R. Risley, solicitor of the labor department, was the chief speaker of the evening at the February meeting of Willimantic Chamber of Commerce, in the absence of Walter W. Husband, United States commissioner of immigration, who found it impossible to come to this city.

The hall was filled, the audience including a number of guests, among them F. T. Blish, president of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, George E. Rix, Charles M. Holman and William A. Knofla of Manchester, Walter Seichert of Esmond, R. I., and Robert Booth, a member of the immigration committee of the state C. of C.

Mr. Risley's message on the immigration program and the labor situation was most informing and an inspiration to the members. Speaking with vigor for more stringent immigration laws, advocating strongly the plan to establish immigration bureaus in foreign countries, so that immigrants might be inspected in their native country and save the expense and heartbreaking experience of coming all the way to Ellis Island and then being turned back, Solicitor Risley dropped his voice to a pathetic tone and narrated the fate of the rejected immigrants. He said that it was the impulse of humanity to shift about, to see a promised land. This search for prosperity, happiness an dpeace has been carried throughout the ages and millions of poverty stricken foreigners are looking forward to America as the land of welfare. Besides designating the number of immigrants allowed to come here from the various nations and their classification should be fixed also the type of foreigners to be welcomed here. The immigrants from Northern Europe are builders, workers and fighters. More of these should be received in America, but a lower number of southern Europeans should be allowed to immigrate. They are, as a rule the type who live by barter and trade and retain their native habits. "This is the world's age of machinery," said the speaker, as he transferred the subject of his talk to the labor situation and told of the marvelous advancements in machinery to overcome the labor shortage which has swept practically every country within the last half century.

Mr. Risley said once an alien becomes an American citizen he should be received heartily by his new countrymen and he should be given cooperation, for it is no easy task for any man to resign all rights of patriotism to his native land and take up the flag of another nation. That the speaker had carried the house by storm was evidence by the outburst of applause which followed his speech and the silence which reigned during his talk. He was extended a rising vote of thanks.

Remarks of interest were made by Robert Booth, who came from Bridgeport, the city which houses Stanley H. Bullard, the president of the state chamber of commerce, A. E. Greene, chairman of the entertainment committee who introduced the speakers. President Valentine L. Murphy had charge of the business session. A resolution on the death of former president Woodrow Wilson, presented by P. T. Donohue was unanimously adopted and copies will be sent to the bereaved wife and family. Applications for membership were acted upon.

The sleet storm in this vicinity on Monday evening, resulted in a great deal of trouble especially to the trolley company and the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting company. Cars in the city were out for hours after ten o'clock when the trolley became loaded with a coating of ice which caused short circuits. The South Coventry trolley car was kept in operation until late into the night to keep the conduit wires and tracks free of ice. Automobile drivers encountered many dangers on the highway. Besides slippery roads they met with fallen limbs or narrowly escaped smashing windshields against low-hanging limbs, laden with ice.

As a tribute to the late war president, Woodrow Wilson, Mayor Thomas Dion called the members of the common council to a meeting, Tuesday forenoon, in the town building and suitable action was taken in respect to the ex-chief executive of the United States. Orders were issued that all municipal offices be closed from three to four o'clock today (Wednesday) the day and hour of the funeral. All city employes will suspend work during that hour.

Resolutions in regard to the above orders were unanimously adopted and it was also recommended that all commercial and mercantile establishments close for a similar period and that all manufacturing plants in the city cease operations for five minutes, commencing at 3.30 o'clock.

The session, at which Mayor Dion presided, was attended by Aldermen George W. Hickey, William A. Buck, Charles H. Beebe, Eugene B. Lewis and James J. Lee; City Clerk James S. Donohue and Corporation Counsel Thomas J. Kelley. The mayor, in addressing the aldermen, said in substance: "We have come together on this sad occasion that our city may join with the whole country in paying its tribute of reverence to our former president, Woodrow Wilson.

"It is not merely because he had held the highest office within the gift of our people—yes, the highest office in the world—that his memory will be honored through the generations to come. I think he will stand out in the world's history as a man great in himself. He was gifted with qualifications and a mental endowment that made him, when comparatively a young man, a leader in the educational life of our country. He was at the helm of this nation during the world-crisis of the great war and bravely and well bore his part. And, above all else, as it seems to me, he did his best to make peace and justice reign, not only over our beloved land, but throughout the world. President Coolidge, better than anyone else, described this attribute in him when he said of him: 'He led the nation through the terrific struggle of the world war with a lofty idealism which never failed him. He gave utterance to the aspiration of humanity with an eloquence which held the attention of all the earth and made America a new and enlarged influence in the destiny of mankind.' Higher tribute of praise cannot be paid to any man than is voiced in the words just quoted."

The resolution to cause all operations to stop was then adopted.

Jeremiah E. Sullivan, president of Willimantic Business Men's association, announced Tuesday afternoon that the members of the association had unanimously voted to close their places of business between 3 and 4 this (Wednesday) afternoon. It is expected that other business houses in the city will act on the recommendation of the common council and will suspend business during the hour of the funeral.

During a recess at the special meeting of the board of aldermen Tuesday forenoon, Mayor Dion pointed out that the council chamber was badly in need of repairs and he suggested that members of the board make an investigation of this matter. Some [illegible] can be taken at the next regular session of the board Monday evening next.

Corporation Counsel Kelley referred to the proposed increase in fare rates by the Connecticut company, mentioning in particular the controversy in Bridgeport. He believed that every city in the state should take an interest in the statement made by the company that the earnings in a particular city cannot be used as a basis, but that those of the entire plant must be taken as a comparison. By the proposed increase a token would cost 16 cents or three for a quarter, instead of 7 1-2 cents, at the present fare. Facts concerning this situation have been gathered by Mayor Dion and Corporation Counsel Kelley.

All but two members of Willimantic Rotary club braved the rain storm and bad walking conditions to attend the regular weekly luncheon and meeting, Tuesday noon. Guests entertained were: Walter J. Alpaugh, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Alpaugh, who is visiting here, coming from Cincinnati, Ohio, W. C. Norris and guests of "Jim" Fullerton, Clifford A. Deslandes and Walter Heichert, of the Esmond Mills, Esmond, R. I.

While the members were enjoying lunch, the Club Quartet, Harry W. Standish, Raymond A. Parker, Henry Congdon and John F. Ahern was summoned to the front by President "Jim" Mustard. The singers apparently did not care for this kind of treatment and they sought to be disqualified by giving a parody on "There's a Long, Long Trail," an ear-cracking discord. The applause weakened them, however, and they rendered an old southern number in fine manner. The local club has a new artist in the conspicuous person of "Charley" Pomeroy, who was discovered to be an expert whistler while a community song was being rendered. President Mustard announced the discovery and threatened to call on Charlie at some future meeting.

During the short business session, communications were read from the New Britain club in regard to the spring conference in that place April 3 and 4, and from the Toronto club asking for early reservations at the 15th annual convention in that city during the week of June 16-20. The anniversary week of Rotary International will be observed from February 17 to the 23rd and a special program will be carried out at the meeting that week, in charge of the educational committee, with Frank H. Foss chairman. A message will be read from Paul Harris.

The meeting next Tuesday will be in charge of the Business Methods committee of which Valentine L. Murphy is chairman. Following the anniversary week meeting the entertainment program for the meeting will be carried out by the Boys Work committee, Fred D. Jordan chairman.

651 tickets were sold for the recital given here by Loretta Higgins of Norwich, acco ding to an announcement made by John F. Ahern, chairman of the arrangements committee. The net proceeds which are for the boys work fund of the club will amount to about $270. A card of appreciation was read from Miss Higgins. The members complimented "John" on his ability in engineering the committee in charge of the successful affair. A unanimous vote of thanks was extended to this committee.

The message which was attached from [illegible] being with the sleet storm [illegible] to this city in search of fortune, a lesson to [illegible] who reached from over to [illegible] vice versa told the members that they should have given the honor of presenting the flowers to Mrs. [illegible] tall, handsome bachelor, like [illegible]

Bishop" W. C. Norris, known about town as "Bill," was called upon for a few words and "Bill" said nice things about the high ideals of Rotarian and of the person; high market value of the Rotary Social Bond, which is the best investment ever. Taking the occasion to bring a speaker or story-teller, the Bishop introduced the "Wind Song" in Willimantic. Catching the proper pitch through the vibrations of a silver spoon the big reverend then emitted plenty of wind but made no noise, and he took his seat amid a storm of applause.

Walter Alpaugh was called upon for a brief speech and he responded in fine manner.

Adjournment was taken at 1.30 o'clock.

A new Ford coupe bearing Connecticut registry number Z-91 which appears under the name of G. Richard Simon, Chestnut Hill, was wrecked Sunday afternoon when it ran into the stone abutment at the Andover road underpass, on the Hartford-Willimantic highway. The front wheels were pushed back underneath the machine and the left front fender was doubled up. It is believed that the occupants escaped without injury.

Peter J. Hinds of this city has been elected a member of the board of directors of the Capitol Theatre corporation. Mr. Hinds is general superintendent of the manufacturing of the American Thread company, having charge of that branch in the various plants of the concern.

The February meeting of the Willimantic Ministers' union is to be held Monday at the Methodist church in this city, with the visiting ministers the guests of Rev. A. Stanley Muirhead, the pastor. The local Boy Scouts are preparing to observe Anniversary Week of the Boy Scouts of America. All the troops will meet Friday night and Saturday a delegation from each troup will take part in the relay race from Norwich to Hartford. The local scouts will relay the message to Andover. Go-to-Church Day will be observed by St. Paul's church troop Sunday and Rev. F. C. Williams, the rector, will preach a special sermon for the scouts.

JEWETT CITY

The firemen responded to a two-alarm fire at 5 o'clock Tuesday evening. The blaze was in an unused dance hall on Slater hill, the property of the Ninigret company. Chief John Wakely was unable to determine the cause, yet indications are, it was incendiary. Two lines of hose were used in addition to the chemil tank. The damage is placed by the company at $300.

A rise of two degrees in temperature saved this section from experiencing a disastrous sleet storm Tuesday. Rain and sleet began to fall shortly after daybreak, with the mercury at 30 degrees. Rain continued all day with nearly three degrees higher temperature, which held the freezing to a point where no damage was done. Parked automobiles, trees and shrubbery were coated with a light covering of ice. Since road traffic and pedestrian travel was only such as necessity demanded.

It was with profound sorrow that Jewett City people learned from the Willimantic column of The Bulletin, Tuesday morning, that Rev. Dr. W. H. Gane had died suddenly in that city. Ten years ago he preached here at the Second Congregational church, a pastorate which he held for nearly six years. Dr. Gane, although not in the best of health, possessed all the attributes that went to assure for him the deep admiration of the townspeople in all walks of life. He was ever genial and friendly, and a commanding man in his calling. As a pulpit orator, few men in this section were heard with greater pleasure.

Very Rev. Michael McCabe Counell, K. of C., held a largely attended meeting Monday evening in Foresters' hall. After business was transacted, the semi-ides of the meeting was given over to a social hour.

Refreshments were served and various musical numbers were provided by members of the council.

The speaker was Judge John T. Darcy, who gave a very interesting account of his experiences in the general assembly at Hartford and explained in detail the various steps necessary for the enactment of a law. This talk proved that the majority of people have no idea of the great amount of work performed each session by our legislative body. The members of the council expressed the wish that they might again listen to such an interesting speaker.

Following are the announcements for church night at the M. E. church, Jewett City. For church night this (Wednesday) evening, a speaker is coming from Danielson, Rev. William F. Davis, one of the oldest and most uniformly successful pastors of the Southern New England Conference. Refreshments afterward will be in charge of the men's class.

A man living on East Main street called attention to the fact that the sign at the junction of Ashland and Main streets does not seem to catch the eye of drivers on the state road. This sign plainly indicates the main road to Providence and Boston, but times without number, out of town automobiles turn up East Main, instead of North Main, and then stop and ask if "this is the road to Providence, or Boston, or Worcester" as it may be. A man who walks up East Main street nearly every day, says that he is asked almost every day about the right road, by automobilists who cannot have noticed the sign.

There is one native of Griswold, now living in Malden, Mass., whose birthday comes on February 29. Shepherd F. Brown was born on that date, and in the years he lived in Griswold, his birthday party was quite an event.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

While various lines of business are wallowing in a mid-winter slump, the town court is tuned right up to concert pitch and is having a very busy week. Tuesday was another day on which the not over-paid court officials more than earned their stipend.

Among other personages Dr. Raymond C. Prisque of Dayville was before the tribunal. He was charged with practicing medicine without having a certificate to do so. Dr. Prisque's is an interesting case. Some time since—during the closing weeks of the past year—his license to practice medicine in Connecticut was suspended by the order of the state board of health, following the now famous grand jury investigation of an alleged diploma mill.

In the meantime Dr. Prisque has engaged [illegible] filed an appeal in the superior court for [illegible] county from [illegible] location decision, and the appeal is now pending, being scheduled for consideration during the present month or, in any event not later than the March term of court.

Dr. Prisque did not appear greatly perturbed over being summoned into court Tuesday, when the information against him, on three counts, that he had continued to practice his profession without having a certificate to do so.

In his own defense he quoted from legal opinion appearing in a Hartford paper Tuesday morning as to his right to practice during the time his appeal is pending and until it is decided one way or the other.

The court was interested in the point Dr. Prisque raised and in view of the legal technicalities involved in the entire controversy continued his case until April 5, by which time, it is anticipated that the appeal will have been heard and definitely disposed of—one way or another.

Tuesday afternoon it was stated by Prosecuting Attorney Arthur G. Bill that he is informed that the attorney general has not ruled on the claimed right of physicians whose certificates have been revoked to practice during the pendency of any appeals they may have filed. It is contended that this proposition remains an open one. It is also held, view of this fact, that although Dr. Prisque's case has been continued for two months, pending decision on his appeal, he may at any time meanwhile be summoned before the town court in newly instituted action if he continues to practice medicine without a certificate. All of the present proceedings or any that may follow prior to decision in the appeal have nothing to do with Dr. Prisque's qualifications to practice medicine or surgery, or both. Officers charged with enforcement of the law have taken the ground that he is now without a certificate and not entitled to practice. Dr. Prisque holds an opposite view, and that it is respected is evident by the continuance of his case in the local court for a period of two months.

John Valle, arrested following a Saturday night raid on a place in Academy street, was again in court Tuesday morning. His case was not disposed of, however, a second continuance being granted, and it will very likely get consideration Saturday morning. While officials and spectators were congregated in Prosecuting Attorney Arthur G. Bill's office awaiting disposition of Valle's case papers in new actions growing out of the raid were served and a young man and a young woman who were in the place at the time of the raid were held under bonds for an appearance Saturday.

Tuesday noon, John Naterski of Goodyear was brought in after a raid that netted about 20 gallons of some kind of kick beverage and a still in his place. He will be in court to answer the charges against him this morning.

These winter days the hooch raids furnish about all the excitement in this territory, where John T. King might spend another $25,000 to advantage, it appears.

Tuesday morning, contrary type made this paper say that the well baby conference planned for Danielson was to be held February 6. This is not the case. The correct date—here's hoping that nothing slips—is February 26. Representatives of various organizations that have interested themselves in the conference are enthusiastic about its possibilities and will do their utmost to turn out the greatest aggregation of babies seen in one group in Danielson in many years. The workers are lending their effort without promise of any other reward than the desire that every little child shall have this opportunity to be guided along the road to health and happiness through all its years—insofar as correction of physical faults with infants and little children will permit.

Fully as wise in his day and generation as the average responsible human being, the mythical groundhog is said to have been snugly curled up in his burrow Tuesday when February began to live up to its reputation of being a turbulent, stormy, rampant month.

Not so with those of the nation who toil. They had to get about under probably as bad conditions weatherwise as have existed this winter. The early morning found siftings of snow swirling in out of the northeast, where the wind had clung tenaciously since Sunday. Mid-forenoon was marked by stinging sleet. And rain came during the early hours of the afternoon. None of the changes rung in turn by the weather would make anyone at Palm Beach jealous. Each and everyone was trying. Danielson outwardly, was a deserted village after the supper hour Tuesday—but today is one day nearer spring, and that is a consolation for a great many people.

Motorists who are without forms on which to file their applications for renewal of their operator's license which expire with the end of this month, need not experience delay in procuring them. There is an ample supply of these forms at the state police barracks, on North Main street, and Sergeant Albert S. Field said Tuesday afternoon that he is anxious to have the public know this and that all who wish the forms may have them for the asking. It is possible that a supply of the forms may be made available by the state police at some convenient down town point today—possibly at the postoffice.

On account of the army of—those who will apply in Connecticut for operators' certificates, those who would no texperience the inconvenience of having their cars out of service for several days after the end of the month by reason of being without the proper credentials to drive will do well to get a form and forward the application at once.

A justice court over which George Torrey presided, at Central Village, Tuesday afternoon, assisted in grinding out the grist of moonshiners' fines that have been pouring into the hoppers since last Saturday. Four candy were fined of St. Central Village, the fine being $100 and costs in each case.

Of interest here is the announcement that the death of Mrs. Edith Stone, wife of Fred O. Stone of North Grosvenordale, while she is purchasing agent for the Grosvenordale company, occurred Tuesday morning at the Day Kimball hospital, in Putnam. Mrs. Stone, 38 years of age, was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. J. Clark of Canterbury, where she was born and spent her girlhood years. The family is well known in Danielson, Brooklyn, Plainfield and surrounding towns.

At sunset Tuesday evening, reports began to come in from various towns in this corner of the state telling of wires going down under the weight of ice that had accumulated upon them as the result of the ice storm of the afternoon. Wires had become as large as steamship hawsers before they snapped and broke off. Ekonk and East Killingly were among the places likely to be without service for many subscribers this morning as the result of the storm. The breaks came so late in these sections that it was impossible to undertake the repair of them during the late hours of Tuesday afternoon, though inspection trips were made by linemen who had received trouble complaints.

PUTNAM

February — boisterous, hard-boiled month of the year—demonstrated Tuesday that it remains its natural self. A northeaster that has been sort of loafing along since Sunday morning, threatening and gesticulating, got down to business as the forenoon wore on and pelted the territory with sleet, rain and ice. There have been worse storms in this territory, so no record were broken, but it was what the man who had to be out in it was apt to call it a nasty storm. It was exasperating to automobilists. Windshields coated with ice, all cleaners being rendered helpless, and in a five mile run a driver found himself trying to peer through an ice-coating morse dense than the famous seven veils. And over and above this the highways became slippery and tire chains became a necessity if one would travel with any degree of safety.

At one service station where motorists prep piling in to buy chains or have chains put on, the force was in a high state of glee. The chains stocks are practically intact so late in the winter rush, because May has continued to flirt with December. Tuesday's storm promised a rush of business for chains, which will be a drug on the market during the late part of March—and a few weeks isn't enough to realize on an investment that promises profits only when the weather man was doing one of the stunts like he was engaged in on Tuesday.

Woodstock has enjoyed a field day. The said town, just over Putnam's borders to the northwest, has come to know what it is to see state police officers, prisoners and court officials congregate for trials of cases that involve charges of keeping a house of bad reputation, frequenting and the various other charges growing out of the maintenance of such an institution. Perhaps saying that Woodstock enjoyed it is unfair. It might be better to relate that Woodstock was mighty curious about it—and people can be curious without being the least bit enthusiastic. Since Woodstock—one of the oldest towns in Connecticut—was New Roxbury, settled by hardy folks who came out of the early Massachusetts Bay colony, who hewed their way out of a wilderness—it has been an exceeding unfrequenter of news pertaining to immorality. It has in fact, been an unusually chaste town, insofar as the public prints have been concerned. And thats enough—for the newspapers print only a tithe of what comes to the ears of their representatives.

Prohibition years have made things different for Woodstock. Its quiet precincts have been invaded by the crafty—by people not of Woodstock, at least by inheritance—and they have found there an asylum where their morbidity could be exercised without too close scrutiny—at first—of law enforcement. Woodstock has not proved to be immune, however, from the fine combing that has brought violators of the liquor and morality laws into about every town or justice's court in the county. Somebody spilled the beans. Somebody talked about the goings on. And during the early hours of Sunday morning state police raided a place kept by one Peter Ballilgeron, of more or less uncertain history, and came away with enough prisoners to more than fill the cell at the police station here in Putnam. A bevy of youths—near kin of the nifty chorus man—were caught in the raiding officers' net. They told the the officers who booked them that they came from towns just across the Massachusetts border from Woodstock—Webster and Southbridge. They gave names. They need not be reproduced here because they probably mean nothing at all. Even the flappers among the gilded youth of the age know enough to use their imagination when caught in a swirl like that in which they found themselves. The same applies to the two young women who were seized at the place and who were locked up in Putnam while awaiting trial.

They gave names, but names mean nothing.

Before Justice Charles M. Perrin, in Woodstock, five frequenters—the boys with a fiver and fiver roll—were fined $26 and costs, the costs in each case amounted to $29.77.

Miss Third O' February and Miss Fourth O' February—one may call them that, anyway—any name being as good as the ones offered in court—were fined $25 and costs, the costs in one case being $3 more than in the other because one of the "dames" felt that she required the attention of a physician while she was at the police station here—and a doctor's services cost money nowadays.

One Bloomnold Brotthee, caught in the raid, was fined $50 and costs of $13.30, on a liquor charge growing out of the affair and the case of Peter Ballageron, alleged boss of the house raided, was continued to next week by the officials, when they will deal with him as circumsatnces and evidence warrants.

Of interest is the reported effort of leading business interests of the town to take such action as may be necessary to place these interests in a position to bid for the property of the Manhasset Manufacturing company when it is offered at public sale in the near future, that control of the big plant may be held locally with a view to furthering the industrial interests of the city.

Putnam, at this late day, comes into the limelight relative to the wholesale revocation of the licenses of physicians practicing in Connecticut through the suspension of the license of Dr. Phillas E. Tetreault of 676 Providence street, this city.

At the office of Dr. Stanley H. Osborne of the state board of health in Hartford, it was stated Tuesday afternoon that Dr. Tetreault's license has been suspended, as of February 3—last Sunday. The records of Dr. Osborne's office at Hartford, it was stated over the telephone Tuesday afternoon by one of Dr. Osborne's office force—he being away for the day—show Dr. Tetreault as of Central Falls, R. I., and a graduate of the Middlesex Medical college in the class of 1920. At Dr. Tetreault's home in this city it was stated Tuesday afternoon that he was away for the day.

Dr. Tetreault has been practicing medicine in this city since last summer, and came here from Central Falls.

Secretary John H. Corbett of the Windham County Y. M. C. A. and a state police officer from the barracks at Danielson were at Black Pond, in Woodstock, during the storm of Tuesday to investigate the ransacking of the Tri-county Y. M. C. A. camp there by vandals who are said to have smashed windows to gain entrance and to have thoroughly gone over the place with a view to ascertaining, of carrying away anything of value. Silverware and other valuable equipment of the camp had been taken away last fall when the camp was closed to forestall any raid that might be made upon the place, but indications were Tuesday that the loss from the break will be considerable.

Newly elected officers of Putnam Cemetery association are: President, L. H. Fuller; vice president, C. Dwight Sharpe; secretary-treasurer, N. A. Ballard; trustees for three years, Byron D. Bugbee, Jesse E. Rich; committee on trusts for three years, Leon T. Wilson, auditors, John O. Fox, J. Harry Mann.

Financial reports of the Cemetery association show that the past year has been one in which the organization has gone along much as in other years, meeting its obligations and administering its affairs with the same efficiency that has been characteristic of it for a long time.

This year the Cemetery association is largely concerned with raising funds for the improvement of an extension of the cemetery grounds that will include much of the vacant territory between Grove and Mechanic streets. The Tourtellotte Memorial chapel has advanced toward completion and the association is now charged with concerning itself with developing the surroundings of this splendid memorial on a plane that will be in keeping with the amount of money expended on what is the finest structure of the kind in this part of the state.

Oliver Latham, well known resident of the town of Eastford, is seriously ill in New York, where he is receiving hospital treatment. Mr. Latham is a veteran of the World war. He enlisted in a coast artillery outfit at Danielson at the outbreak of the war, saw overseas service, eventually was made a sergeant and returned here with th rank of lieutenant. Mr. Latham has been under observation by specialists during his stay in New York but it was stated here Tuesday that surgeons have decided that there is not much prospect of permanent relief of his ailment through an operation.

Mrs. Edith Stone, 38, wife of Fred O. Stone, purchasing agent for the Grosvenordale company, died Tuesday morning at the Day Kimball hospital in this city. The past week Mrs. Stone underwent a Cesarean operation, which was successful, and she apparently was doing well and on the road to recovery when the end came unexpectedly. Mrs. Stone was born in Canterbury, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. J. Clark, who survive her. In addition to her husband and a daughter, Murial, she leaves four sisters—Ethel, Florence, Jubb and Ruby.

The February meeting of the Community Association will be held this Wednesday evening and the executive board will meet immediately afterwards.

OPERATIONS FOR FEMALE TROUBLES

Some Are Necessary, Some Are Not

These Women Gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Fairview, S. Dakota.—"A year ago I was sick in bed for three weeks and the doctor said I would not be any better without an operation. I had bearing-down pains and sick headache, with pains in the back of my neck. I felt tired all the time, downhearted, and got poor and pale and was scarcely able to do anything at all for sometime before I took to my bed. The doctor said one of my organs was out of place and caused all my troubles. I was too weak and run-down to think of an operation and as one of my neighbors told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began taking it. I have received great relief from it and recommend it very highly. It cannot be praised too much in cases of female weakness."—Mrs. O. M. RISO, Box 106, Fairview, South Dakota.

New Jersey Woman Writes

Camden, New Jersey.—"I take great pleasure in writing you this testimonial. I was a great sufferer of woman's ailments and doctors told me 18 years ago that I must have a serious operation to remove some of my organs. I refused to have it done and took a full course of your medicines for six months, then after the full course I took a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound every week or two, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine every Spring. I am well and stout and still have my organs they wanted to remove. It was while I was in the hospital that I heard your medicines praised by other patients there. I have recommended them to my friends and to my own family. You may use this testimonial for said near, from the smallest paper to the largest, and I will gladly answer letters from women who wish to know what the Vegetable Compound has done for me and what it will do for them if they give it a fair trial."—Mrs. J. RIGA, 822 N. 40th St., Camden, New Jersey.

Through neglect, some female troubles may reach a stage where an operation is necessary, but most of the common ailments are not surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported that they had been benefited by its use. This statement is important to every woman. For sale at drug stores everywhere.

Simple Home Treatment for Sore Throat

Raw, Sore, Inflamed Throats Can Be Greatly Relieved By Use of this Vaporizing Salve.

Here is a simple yet effective method to treat a sore throat. Gargle with warm salt water three times daily. Also swallow slowly every few hours a teaspoonful of Vicks.

At night apply Vicks over the throat and upper chest, rubbing well in. Then spread on thickly and cover with a warm flannel cloth.

The body heat releases the ingredients—Menthol, Camphor, Eucalyptus, Juniper Tar, etc.—in the form of vapors and these vapors, inhaled all night long, go directly to the affected parts.

At the same time Vicks is absorbed thru and stimulates the skin like a liniment or plaster drawing out the soreness and pain.

Vicks is equally good for hoarseness, croup, tight and chest colds, and for the croupy colds of children.

One Reason for Nervous Disorders

YOUR doctor can tell you that nervous disorders are very common among Americans. One reason for this is found in the fact that they are great coffee drinkers.

Coffee contains caffeine, a drug, prescribed by doctors as an emergency stimulant for the heart and nervous system. It has a tendency to increase blood pressure, develop heart irregularities and cause digestive disturbances.

If you feel that coffee is not good for you, serve Postum as your mealtime drink.

Postum is a pure cereal beverage that refreshes and satisfies. It is absolutely free from caffeine or any other irritating drug.

Try a cup of Postum with your dinner or supper tonight. Postum is sold everywhere.

Postum
for Health

"There's a Reason

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer the flavor brought out by boiling fully 20 minutes. The cost of either form is about one-half cent a cup.

Pride like the housewife's in their loaf

In no housewife's kitchen could you find a more honest spirit of good workmanship—more exacting care and cleanliness and skill—than prevails in the bakeries of the Six Bakers.

For the men who make White Rose, the Master Loaf of the Six Bakers, are trained in the methods and ideals of the Six Bakers and they take a keen personal pride in making their bread, day in and day out, as perfect as bread can be baked.

It's this enthusiasm—this pride and care—that the Six Bakers and their men put behind the Master Loaf that makes such ideal bread.

The Master Loaf is firm and wholesome, not fluffed up. It is evenly baked—and moist so that it keeps fresh. Its deep, rich crust and soft white inside taste like home-made.

UNDER THE AMERICAN FLAG.

What must be regarded as silent criticism of the action of the American Bar association, in engaging a British vessel to take the members of the organization to London next summer, is the action of Associate Justice Sutherland of the United States supreme court in engaging passage on an American ship in order to attend that convention.

There is no getting away from the fact that the bar association, or any other organization for that matter, has a perfect right to charter any ship that it desires to meet its requirements. Had it been unable to get the right sailing date or the needed accommodations from steamship companies whose vessels fly the American flag there could have been no objection to arranging for passage on ships of other countries, but in this instance it has been insisted by the officials of the shipping board that the American lines offered to meet any proposition that could be advanced by other lines. That would seem to have been enough to have insured the patronizing of an American ship, but it doesn't seem to have been and the bar association's explanation of its action is that it was unable to get American lines interested in arranging the right sailing date, giving it the ship wanted or quoting as low a rate.

There is a difference between the statements of the respective sides, and yet if the American lines offered to meet any proposition from a foreign line it would seem to have been something which the lawyers should have held them to.

Justice Sutherland hasn't entered into the controversy. He hasn't undertaken to upset the decision made by the committee and endorsed by the organization, but when he takes passage on another ship and that ship flies the American flag, and has for his destination the same convention of the bar association, his action speaks more loudly than words. He is going to the convention in London as an American and he is going on an American ship, which he undoubtedly would have done anyway and which would have attracted no attention but for the course taken by the American Bar association.

THE MINERS' CONVENTION.

The outcome of the convention of miners for the purpose of determining what should be done in connection with any working agreement which may take the place of the one that expires the first of April indicates a less radical plan than had been indicated.

There was plenty of fire and disturbance in the convention. The radical influences have by no means disappeared. They made plenty of trouble and at one time threatened to get control, or at least to aid in taking away some of the authority now vested in the head of the organization. On the other hand it was demonstrated by the saner element that due recognition was given to the need of giving consideration to the consumer. The consumer has always paid the bills and must continue to do so, but there is such a thing as making unjustified demands and carrying them too far. Warning was given to this effect and it seemingly made an impression. At least the miners are not to ask for an increase in wages nor the much discussed reduction in days and hours, but will be satisfied to continue the present agreement over a period of four or five years.

That of course would on the face of it insure a steady production of fuel. How it will appeal to the operators will be known at the conference this month. It is a welcome change from the previous determination to make trouble and to get what was wanted without resort to arbitration and regardless of the effect upon the public. It is a proposition that may be regarded as lessening the possibilities of a coal strike. Certainly the demands are such that an agreement should be reached much easier than if they were more radical.

The miners' convention, however, indicated that organization is still harboring not a few of those who are not disposed to submit to control. What they can be expected to do in the creation of trouble and the breaking away from an agreement is difficult to judge. It is one of the uncertainties in connection with any understanding and probably the miners' officials wish that such an element might be eliminated.

AIDING THE NORTHWEST.

Banks in certain states of the northwest have encountered trouble of various kinds. They have in numerous instances declined to have anything to do with the federal reserve system, but have elected to operate under the banking laws of their respective states. When trouble comes upon them it has its effect upon all the depositors and all those who do business with them. With bank after bank closing its doors the outlook is of course gloomy, and it provides no relief to point out the weaknesses of methods and conduct or the direct attention to the fact that the federal reserve system's protection should have been obtained long ago. Such observations are entirely pertinent, but the present need is to give relief to those sections.

President Coolidge has acted with that end in view. He has urged financial assistance by those in position to render it and he has extended the service of government agencies. There has also been suspended the sales of government saving certificates. Whether that serves to help out the situation remains to be seen. It is done because there has been much complaint about government competition by disposing of such securities, it being held that money which should have gone to the banks was being put into savings certificates.

In view of the collapsed banks it can be readily understood that those who have been buying such certificates with the knowledge that they were absolutely sound probably had their suspicion of the banks and the methods employed in operating them. And it doesn't hold that because the sale of the certificates is stopped in that region that the banks will get the full benefit.

It is a case, however, of rendering whatever help is possible in order to relieve a bad situation. The reestablishment of faith in the banks may rest to a large degree with the institutions themselves and each lesson in that direction should not go without notice.

POSTAL EMPLOYES' PAY.

In connection with the appropriations for the department of the interior there is included provision for the bettering of the service in the patent office. Whether it goes as far as it should will be disclosed in time. There is recognition of the need of keeping an efficient examining force and the increased appropriation for that office indicates that it is to be obtained through better salaries and the retention of experienced men.

To a certain degree the same is true in any branch of the government service, and it will be stressed in connection with the efforts that are being made by the postal employes for the raising of the maximum limit of their pay from $1800 to $2400 a year. The demands of public service are many and it is when such service functions the best that satisfaction is obtained.

The postoffice department is subject to the same influence that other branches of the government are. Unless it is possible to attract and to retain those who are capable of administering the duties the service is bound to show the effects. When private business depletes the postal force and there is a serious salary restriction on postal employment the service suffers, and inadequate, inefficient service in the handling of the mails means public dissatisfaction.

The postal employes are seeking increased emolument in keeping with the conditions that exist today. Their requests are entitled to and should receive careful consideration.

PAYMENT BY FRANCE.

France is numbered among the nations that has not undertaken to settle its debt to this country. The United States has not tried to push it. There has been recognition of the burden France is carrying and there is no desire to embarrass that country.

What creates a peculiar view in regard to the failure of France to arrange for the funding of the indebtedness is the fact that it seems to have plenty of money to loan to other countries for the purpose of military activity, and has taken the view that it will not tolerate the thought of seriously reducing its provisions for military protection. It must be said for France that while it has been making some large loans they do not represent francs. The loans for the most part while expressed in francs have been of materials on hand which have been turned over to nations in which France is interested. These surplus supplies do not constitute recent investments.

When, however, French officials are quoted as declaring that it would be disloyal to the French people to consider the payment of the French debt to this country with the franc in its present position, it should be remembered that there is no disloyalty in paying a just debt and that there has been no thought of taking advantage of France because the franc is where it is.

It cannot be believed that France has any intention of refusing to pay what it owes, but neither should it overlook the fact that there might be no better way of strengthening the franc than by letting the world know that it was putting into motion the determination to see that its obligations are being or going to be met. There should be some understanding.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The man on the corner says: Some of the most interesting things in the world are not so.

A cut in the federal tax rate that will be effective at once cannot fail to meet with popular approval.

Oil seems to have a powerful influence upon some men who have been in high places in Washington.

It will be unfortunate if the oil inquiry revelations put bad ideas into the minds of others seeking government assistance.

It can be plainly seen that John T. King is going to be blamed for a lot of the mysterious happenings where publicity is denied.

Think of the unconcern of the sleeping groundhog whose reputation as a weather prognosticator rests with the will of the weatherman for the next six weeks.

Brass polish when drunk by children in New York caused death. Whiskey when consumed by a couple of friends brought the same result. Poison ought to be properly labeled.

The Russian communists are quick to claim that British recognition of the soviet government is an indication of the greater strength of the new regime. Such doesn't represent the British idea.

Disfranchising a bootlegger after his third conviction isn't such a bad idea, but even the bootleggers will admit that the vote means little to the scofflaw who isn't clever enough to avoid three arrests.

SUCCESSFUL IMITATION

"Billy never stops talking about anything," complained Bobby one night after dinner. "If he goes and stays on a farm for three days he never stops telling all the things he done. And this summer he went to the Yellowstone park. It made 'im exaggerate something awful. He said there was 1,000,000 chickens in his aunt's yard and when I ast how did he know he said anyhow there was 30. Why, it took me and Sam two weeks to count to a million, and each of us counted only half and we didn't do another thing all that time but just count so it's silly to talk about 1,000,000 chickens. Mamie Kelly bet we couldn't count that much and when we up and showed her we did, she wouldn't pay the bet. She says it ain't right to bet and it's just gambling, but I'll bet a hat if she had 'a' won we'd had to pay up. Mamie Kelly always makes me awful tired."

"Except when you need help in arithmetic," suggested Bobby's father. "I note that her society is quite welcome then."

"Oh, well," admitted Bobby sheepishly. "Of course all the fellers get her to help when the lesson is awful hard. Besides, she always makes a feller do something for her in exchange. She's awful close, Mamie is, and she talks and talks and talks before you can get her to say she'll help.

"That's where my old tennis ball went. I don't care, on account of it being punk anyhow. Maybe, when she tries to bounce it, she'll wish she hadn't been so stingy, for I passed it to her in school and she ain't had a chance to try it."

"She will very soon see that it is no good," said his father, severely. "And then she will never trust you again."

"She won't never see it," chuckled Bobby. "'Cause teacher she seen Mamie take it from somebody and told her to give it to her. Teacher's got a rule you can't pass things around without losing 'em, and that ball's awiped for good. 'Course teacher can see it ain't worth a cent, so she ain't going to take the trouble to give it back. Anyhow, if she does, Mamie Kelly won't know but what it was all right when I passed it over."

"All of which may have some bearing on your next report," said his father. "And so I am glad to hear about it beforehand."

"My deportment is going to be something fierce on my next card," declared Bobby cheerfully. "I'll bet me and Billy will have the lowest in all of our room, and that's going some. Stubby was the worst last time and once Sam was so low his mother had to come to see about it. That was on account of him bringing a goat into the basement on Friday and forgetting it was there until Saturday, when the janitor was cleaning up and found it. Sam said that was all my fault on account of me calling to him to go to a fire there was in the candy store, right after school, that that made him forget the goat. So he got low in deportment."

"I didn't think your teacher would be so severe," said his father in surprise.

"Sometimes she is," cried Bobby impatiently. "It was all on account of Billy telling all about geysers and things in Yellowstone. He said a geyser is what geyses mud and there's others that roars and spits and things like that and we said it was all bunk. He up and got mad and he bet he'd show us."

"I don't wonder," said his father. "What was wrong about that?"

"I'm telling you," sighed Bobby. "Well, he got mud and he turned on the hot water faucets and put the mud on a stick and when the steam came rising up he threw the mud in the air Gee, it was great! While he was stirring, poking up the hot water to make it geyse he sure me the mud stick and I made the mud go better'n he did, though I ain't seen anything done like it in all my life. I ain't been much of anywhere, except east to Milwaukee and hunting with you. If I had 'a' seen a real geyser maybe I wouldn't have made it go so high and him like that. It makes me mad to stay to home such a lot."

"Him?" repeated his father. "You hit Billy"

"Aw shucks, no!" cried Bobby in despair. "I wouldn't have cared then. We was down in the school basement where I don't think janitors ought to go snooping around, and that old lemon came in soft like and was just in time to get a lot of mud on his shirt front. Gee, he was mad! But, land, he had ought not to be poking around without looking where he's going, that's all. And that's how I got this here note home to you, from teacher." Chicago News.

Stories That Recall Others

A Real "Funny Man."

This was overheard on a street car: Conducter (who could barely find standing room for himself on the car): "Move forward to the front of the car, please."

Tired and hungry individual who was hanging on a strap with both hands and keeping three persons from falling: "I see where Al Jolson has just taken up street car conducting!"

A colored man has what some of his friends have described as "a long business head on his shoulders."

Recently he received a letter in which there was a request for a $10 loan. The letter was not answered. Some time later the solicitor met him on the street and prassed the request for a $10 loan. With diplomacy he inquired:

"Would it suit you just as well if I'd give you $5 instead of loaning you $10."

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Sir Sydney Olivier, who has been given the important post of head of the India office in the new British cabinet, is one of the rare Socialists of note produced by Oxford university. The son of a country parson, he entered the Colonial office in London and was one of the prime movers in the development of the Fabian society through which the intellectuals of the movement prepared the advent of labor to power. He had held a number of important colonial appointments, mainly in the West Indies. As governor of Jamaica some years ago he aroused a good deal of criticism on account of his Socialist activities. He retired from the civil service several years ago as assistant controller of the Exchequer.

RECRUITING CAMPAIGN TO FILL UP 169TH INFANTRY

A recruiting campaign to supply the 400 to 500 men that are needed in the 169th Infantry, Connecticut National Guard, to take the places of men lost by expiration of enlistment and to bring it up to peace strength has been started.

"The National Guard was declared to be America's first line of defense by Lt. Col. Clarence W. Seymour, Judge Advocate of the C. N. G., in a statement made public Tuesday. Colonel Seymour, who is a former commander of the Connecticut department, American Legion, expressed his belief that, because of shortage of personnel, only slight effective defense could be expected on short notice from the regular army. This situation, he pointed out emphasizes the importance of service in the national guard as a practical demonstration of true patriotism.

"I do not hesitate to say," declared Col. Seymour, "that the soldiers of the National Guard of this state today are standing in the front line of their country's defense just as truly as they did at Seichprey, Chateau Thierry and in the Argonne during the World war. Although the national defense act of 1920 makes the regular army and national guard stand together to compose the first line of defense in the event of hostilities, yet, on account of the terrific shortage of enlisted personnel in regular army, and because of the allocation of a very large proportion of the regular army officers to duty at the schools and colleges and with the national guard and reserve corps units, only slight effective defense could be expected on short notice from the regular army.

"In July, 1921, the regular army had a strength within the continental limits of the United States of 148,000 men. Since that time 70,000 regulars have left the service and all recruiting activities have failed to overcome this shortage. During the same period the National Guard has increased from 114,000 to 180,000. War department plans, however, call for an efficiently trained national guard of not less than 250,000 men.

"It is also the belief of General Pershing and Secretary Weeks that the regular army should have a minimum strength of 150,000 enlisted men and 13,000 officers. Unless both congress and the times change, the enlistment of such a large number of regulars is doubtful. The National Guard is and must continue to be the first line of defense. For the safety of American ideals and institutions and as insurance against danger to the lives and property of the people of this nation, every one must do his part to keep the ranks of that bulwark of defense—our national guard—fully manned and fully trained to meet the first shock of any attack and fight an effective delaying action with any power on earth until such time as our citizen armies can be fully equipped and trained and put into the field.

BAD BREATH

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets Get at the Cause and Remove It

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, act gently on the bowels and positively do the work.

People afflicted with bad breath find quick relief through Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. The pleasant, sugar-coated tablets are taken for bad breath by all who know them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets act gently but firmly on the bowels and liver, stimulating them to natural action, clearing the blood and gently purifying the entire system. They do that which dangerous calomel does without any of the bad after effects.

All the benefits of nasty, sickening, griping cathartics are derived from Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets without griping, pain or any disagreeable effects.

Dr. F. M. Edwards discovered the formula after seventeen years of practice among patients afflicted with bowel and liver complaint, with the attendant bad breath.

Olive Tablets are purely a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two every night for a week and note the effect. 15c and 30c.

POETRY

Woodrow Wilson, Christian

A Christian? Was Christian dreamer he?
He dared to hold his dream while wea... flames ...ouped
Aboard the universe, while Nations hurled Themselves into the conflict's seething sea;
And when the strife was calmed, he crossed the tide
Still fear-beset, and held to a world distraught
The Christ ideal. To raging hordes he taught
The ways of brotherhood. Tho' far and wide
His teachings spread, he could not wholly stay
The old-world thought; but there, amid the ray
Of blood-stained foes, he plead—and won! An age
Of love began—which shall not pass away.
That new age dawns, tho' still the shrouding night
Appals the world, while all earth cries for light.
—Thomas C. Clark, in The Living Church.

The Beloved Unseen

Dear secret friend, who stays with me
To minister invisibly,
You laugh or sorrow with such zest
You lend my life fresh interest.
It matters not that I have passed
Into the Quiet Years at last,
For when you take my hand I find
New pathways ever for the mind.

My days are full of stirring things
Wrought by your far imaginings.
With you I heed nor time nor space—
I hit the ball, I run the race.

I sped the motor flaring by,
I guide the plane that trails the sky,
Or sail for billowing miles on miles
To reach the living South Sea Isles.

I ride, I ride with shining lance
Across the border of Romance,
And then beneath your magic sway
I sing the song, I act the play!

Your name? 'Tis Youth. Oh fond and free!
Once you were mine for all to see,
But though 'tis said that you have flown
Beloved, my heart is still your own!
—Mary Steward Cutting in Everybody's Magazine.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

The Minnesota College boy's letters to Dad indicate an almost complete mastery of the touch system.—Minnesota Star.

Nit—What did he say to the Dean when he was fired?

Wit—He congratulated the school on turning out such fine men.—Purple Parrot.

"When I was a young man I worked twelve hours a day."

Son—I admire your youthful energy, dad, but I admire still more the mature wisdom which led you to stop it.—The Continent.

Crawford—Are you glad you learned how to cook?

Crabshaw — I'll probably find it handy. It won't be long before the women will have the men doing the housework.—St. Louis Star.

Discussing the new fashions, a lady writer complains that Parisian gowns cost more than those made at home. Careful observation of present-day styles suggests that it is best to pay France a little more to shoulder the blame.—Punch (London).

"You have a nerve to suggest my taking you in partnership. What's the idea?"

"Wouldn't you rather have your daughter marry your partner than your clerk?"—Judge.

Visitor—Can you tell me if Bill Jones is up in his room?

Visitor—Oh, excuse me. I'll ask some one else.—Purple Parrot.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

Frederick J. Huntington and G. Wyman Carroll spent the week-end in Calcutta, S. S. Franconia having reached that port Saturday, on her cruise around the world.

Charles J. Dyer, of Norwich, was a member of the distinguished company of musicians and prominent citizens selected to go down the bay on the revenue cutter to Quarantine Sunday, following the wired permission of Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, to meet Siegfried Wagner, son of the late composer and of Mme. Cosima Wagner, and grandson of Franz Liszt. Siefr Wagner was a passenger on steamship America and comes here in the interest of the Wagner festivals in Bavaria, silent since the war. He was accompanied by his wife, who is of English family. Their children remained with the aged Mme. Cosima Wagner at Bayreuth. On the committee to meet the Wagners, as originally named, were Albert Morris Bagby, Otto H. Kahn, Clarence H. Mackay, Theodore E. Steinway, Forrest Urchs, Charles J. Dyer, Josef Stransky, Ludwig Nissen, Guy Golterman, Weston Gales, Dr. Emanuel Baruch and Judge Oberwalter. They extended to the Wagners a welcome on behalf of the American musical public.

Disabled Laurel Hill Light

Residents of Laurel Hill will appreciate it when the electric light on the pole on the curve at the head of bridge hill is restored to usefulness. According to the police records it has been out every night since last Thursday. A new transformer was to have been put on the pole Tuesday but the storm made it impossible for the work to be done.

Following the supper, games were enjoyed, the committee in charge being Elisabeth Johnson, chairman, Catherine Christman and Muriel Hynds. Elisabeth Collins, Rosamond Chapman and Catherine Brown were appointed a committee to clear the tables and arrange things in order, following the supper.

BLOOD TRANSFUSION FAILS TO SAVE SON'S LIFE

The death of Abraham Cohen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Barnet Cohen of 231 Laurel Hill avenue, occurred about 8 o'clock Tuesday morning, after a vain effort to save his life by blood transfusion several days ago. The young man was taken sick five days ago, suffering from a splenatic condition. In the hope of saving his life, blood transfusion was resorted to, his mother allowing the blood to be transferred from her veins to his.

The young man was born in New London, Aug. 14, 1905. He was a graduate of the Norwich public schools and had attended the Academy. He was formerly employed in the Bulletin press room.

Besides his parents he is survived by three brothers, Harry, Alex and Alfred, all of this city.

The funeral was held at 8 o'clock Tuesday afternoon from the home of his parents, Rabbi Joseph N. Rosenberg conducting the service. Burial took place in the I. O. H. A. cemetery on Brewster's Neck.

Undertakers Shea & Burke had charge of the general arrangements.

WILL BUILD BUNGALOW TYPE FOR NEW CITY FIRE STATION

A new fire station of the bungalow type that will be an ornament, rather than a blot on the neighborhood, is to be erected on the lot that has been purchased on the Joseph Perkins road, said Chief Howard L. Stanton Tuesday. The building will be a one-story structure that will have little of the appearance of a fire station, but will follow a bungalow type of design that is much in use in the west where cities erect new fire stations in residential neighborhoods.

The plot that the city has bought from Mrs. William I. Cook is a lot 70x130 feet on the southerly side of the Joseph Perkins road and is about opposite the westerly end of the manual training building of the Norwich Free academy. Between it and the new residence of E. O. Redler is an unoccupied lot 70 feet wide and when the new station is erected it will be the most easterly building standing on the Joseph Perkins road to date.

There is a little more than $4,000 on hand remaining from the sale of the Main street fire station which will be available for the new building and will go a long way towards the cost of construction, Chief Stanton declared. He will get to work on plans at once and intends to have dirt flying just as soon as possible. When the building is completed the grounds around it will be beautified by trees, shrubs, etc., which will make the property harmonize with the general character of the neighborhood.

The new station will involve no enlargement of the present numbers in the fire department or the purchase of any more apparatus for this station, as the equipment and the men are already at the Central station, and when the new station is ready it will mean merely the shifting of the No. 2 company of four or six men with the apparatus to the new station.

It is estimated that the new station will exercise a protective service for about $3,000,000 worth of property in its territory, including the Free academy buildings, Park Congregational church and some of the most valuable residence property in the city.

CONSIDERING PLANS TO RAISE SCOUT BUDGET

A well attended and enthusiastic meeting of the executive committee of the Norwich Scout Council was held at scout headquarters Tuesday evening to formulate plans for the scout budget week. President George L. Ingalls will be supported by an able group of men to put over the raising of the annual council budget. Further definite plans will be announced next week.

The Palace theatre will show a reel of motion pictures during Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week. This picture is put on by the Pathe Exchange and is highly recommended by headquarters as illustrative of scout activities.

AGENT BUCHANAN DISLOCATES SHOULDER IN FALL

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 6—Archibald Buchanan of Mansfield Center, agent in the employ of the state board of education, was painfully injured today when he fell at the Jennings school and sustained a dislocated right shoulder. He was removed to Lawrence hospital, where he will be a patient for several days.

Mr. Buchanan fell while descending a flight of stairs, the heel of his shoe catching on one of the steps, causing him to be thrown, landing on the shoulder. Medical attention was immediately obtained for him and later he was removed to the hospital.

Mercier Assembly Meets

Mercier Assembly, Catholic Ladies of Columbus, held its regular meeting in the assembly room, Tuesday evening. The members are working enthusiastically for the success of the dance, baked bean supper and minstrels and all committees reported gratifying progress.

YANTIC WOMAN'S AUXILIARY PEACTS AND PLAYS WHIST

The February meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of Grace Episcopal church, Yantic, was held Tuesday evening in the Parish house. At 7 o'clock a fine supper of roast beef, macaroni and cheese, cabbage salad, pickles, rolls, jelly, cake and coffee, was served by the supper committee, Mrs. Charles Kimball, chairman, Mrs. Charles Burbeck, Mrs. Lynes and Mrs. Stella Stott. The tables, which were prettily decorated in pink and white, were lighted by candles.

Following the supper a short period was devoted to business, the president, Dr. Lillian M. Lynes presiding.

Plans were formulated for the work of auxiliary during the lenten season. Miss Annie Carpenter was appointed to take charge of the work and to choose her helpers. A sum of money was voted for benevolence. At the close of the business session there were six tables of whist in play. Dr. Lynes won first ladies' prize and Charles Bentley was awarded first gentlemen's prize. After which, those present united in singing old fashioned songs, Mrs. Herbert E. Hitchen accompanying at the piano. There were thirty present.

DR. CHARLES H. LEVERMORE LEBANON RESIDENT, 1860-65

Dr. Charles H. Levermore, winner of the Bok peace prize of $100,000, was a resident of Lebanon from 1860 to 1865, when his father was pastor at Goshen Hill. The familiar spelling of the surname in Lebanon is "Livermore", but the man so suddenly brought into national prominence has adopted the form, "Levermore."

When the family resided at Goshen, the father, in addition to his pastorate taught a number of pupils in a select school at his home. It is an inspiration to the boys and girls of Goshen and those other persons still living, who feel that their lives have been enriched by the touch of culture and inspiration which had its source in the Levermore home.

Three years ago, Charles H. Levermore visited his old home on Goshen Hill, being the guest of a former school friend, William O. Thomas. The former home of the Levermores is about five miles from Lebanon Center, and stands near the schoolhouse.

Charles Levermore was a long-time friend of the late William H. Geer, of Washington street, Norwich, whose homestead was Oakland Farm, Lebanon.

Before the war a determined pacifist, Dr. Levermore became during the conflict one of the most ardent supporters of President Wilson and an insistant advocate of war to victory as a means of insuring permanent peace. As secretary of the League of Nations Union, with offices at 70 Fifth avenue, New York, Dr. Levermore has written frequently and at length on the league.

Dr. Levermore, whose home is at 980 East Eighteenth street, Brooklyn, N. Y., is in his 69th year, born Oct. 14, 1856, at Mansfield, Conn., the son of Rev. Aaron Russell and Mary Clay Skinner Levermore. He was graduated from Yale in 1879 with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He received the degree of Doctor of Philosophy from Johns Hopkins in 1886. Two years before receiving that degree he married Miss Mettie Morton Tuttle of New Haven.

From 1879 to 1883 he was principal of Guilford (Conn.) Institute. He was a Johns Hopkins Fellow in History for a year. He served, 1885-1886, as instructor of history in Hopkins Grammar School, New Haven. The next year was spent on the faculty of the University of California. He was professor of history for two years thereafter in Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He was principal of Adelphi Academy, Brooklyn, 1892-1896, and in the latter year was called to the presidency of Adelphi college, Brooklyn.

In 1913 Dr. Levermore was made professor of history in Adelphi College, serving two years. He was director of the College and University Bureau of the World Peace Foundation, in Boston, thereafter, until 1917, in which year he became secretary of the New York Peace Society, which post he still holds. He is also secretary of the World Court League and the League of Nations Union, to both of which offices he was elected in 1919.

CONGREGATIONAL MINISTERS MET IN GREENEVILLE

The New London Association of Congregational Ministers held a meeting Tuesday morning at 10.30 o'clock at the residence of Rev. Charles H. Ricketts, pastor of the Greeneville Congregational church. There were 16 ministers present representing about half the Congregational churches in the county. The meeting opened at 10.30 o'clock with Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth of New London presiding. Rev. Mr. Danforth conducted the devotional service after which Rev. Samuel H. Mowe, D. D., pastor of Park Congregational church, this city read a paper on Isaiah's Message to the Men of Today.

At noon luncheon was served at the Greeneville Congregational church by the women of the church and after the luncheon the meeting continued at the church. The review of the book, The Lord of Thought, by Dougall, was led by Rev. Howard S. Stephenson of Jewett City. The meeting came to a close about 3.30 o'clock. The committee in charge comprised Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey, Norwich Town, chairman, Rev. Allen S. Bush of Gales Ferry and Rev. Roderick MacLeod of Hanover.

V. M. C. A. AUXILIARY PAYS OFF $250 MORE ON PLEDGE

The February meeting of the Y. M. C. A. Auxiliary was held Tuesday afternoon with Miss Mary A. Porteous at her residence, No. 342 Broadway. There was a good sized attendance in spite of the stormy weather. Mrs. Charles Tyler Bard, the president, conducted the business meeting. As an additional payment towards the auxiliary's $5,000 pledge for the "Y" building fund the members voted to appropriate $250. This leaves but $150 more to be paid on the pledge. General Secretary Edwin Hill of the local "Y" conducted the devotional part of the meeting.

The afternoon's programme included a brief address by Rev. Earl Kernahan of Boston who is conducting a church membership campaign in Norwich. Mrs. Reuben P. Rotter gave three vocal solos, The Gypsy Trail, words by Kipling, Why Do Roses Bloom and Heigh, Ho for a Husband.

CONVENTION COMMITTEE FOR CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

The annual meeting of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce to be held in Bridgeport on May 21st and 22nd is expected to eclipse all meetings of previous years. The first step was taken by President Bullard on Tuesday in the appointment of the General Convention Committee, that will have general charge of the convention arrangements.

The first shot in convention details will be fired by the General Convention Committee which will hold its first meeting on Wednesday at the chamber of commerce rooms in Bridgeport. At that time the committee will consider the appointment of such sub committees as publicity, speakers, badges, banquet and convention.

Annual meetings of the state chamber are considered of great importance by the business men of Connecticut. At this meeting the activities of the chamber for the succeeding year are considered and a definite policy of action decided upon.

FORMER GROTON GIRL MARRIED IN GREENWICH

Miss Dorothea Hyde, daughter of a former Groton clergyman lately of Springfield, was married Dec. 29, to Harry Allen, an actor, at Greenwich, this state, according to word received by Miss Hyde's friends in Groton.

Miss Hyde is the daughter of the Rev. Frederick S. and Matilda Strang Hyde. Her father was for a number of years pastor of the Groton Congregational church, leaving there in 1907 to become a professor in a college in Springfield.

The marriage was performed by Albert S. Mead, a justice of the peace of Greenwich. Mr. Allen, who lives in New York, is a son of Robert and Lillian Potter Allen and is a native of Victoria, Australia.

EXHIBITION CARS GOT WET DOWN TUESDAY

Tuesday's drenching storm of rain, accompanied with hail and sleet, made the worst conditions possible for the Norwich automobile dealers who were placing new cars in the state armory for the opening of the automobile show this (Wednesday) evening. Every car came in dripping wet and had to be wiped off, while each exhibitors' space had to be mopped up and dried out. However, all the cars were successfully taken in up the runway that had been constructed to the front door and the show will be ready to open on time.

MAN AND WOMAN FINED IN CITY COURT

On a charge of intoxication for which she was arrested Monday night coupled with an old suspended case, Effie Allen, 47, was fined $15 and costs in the city court Tuesday morning. It all amounted to $36.50 and she went to jail to work it out.

Peter Milecke, 36, was fined $50 for beating Effie and $5 for intoxication, with costs, the whole amounting to $76 which he paid.

Bertha Kulos, 17, was charged with being incorigible and was committed to the state farm for women at Lyme. She was brought before the court by Miss Corcoran, the welfare worker.

NORWICH ROTARIANS IN CONTEST WITH MERIDEN

The attendance contest of the Norwich Rotary club with the Meriden club begins at the meeting today (Wednesday) and the call has gone out to the Norwich members that sickness is the only adequate excuse for absence from a meeting.

Dr. Howard A. Lanphere of the state department of health is to be the guest of the club today, speaking upon The Shick Test, which is the new discovery for the prevention of diphtheria.

Looking for Heir to Fortune

Former Congressman Augustine Lonergan of Hartford has been asked to locate a man, supposedly named Senior and living somewhere in this state, who is the nephew of Stephen Senior, recently found dead in a hovel in Perth Amboy, N. J. The latter man was a recluse, and it is alleged, owned property valued at $500,000 $150,000 of which is the value of real estate he had refused to sell. The man whom it is desired to find is his nephew, and heir to the estate.

Automobiles in Collision

About 7.30 o'clock Tuesday morning an automobile owned by the City Meat market and a machine owned by a Mr. Lathrop collided at the corner of Washington street and Lincoln avenue. Both machines were somewhat damaged. The drivers escaped injury. A report of the accident was made at police headquarters. One of the drivers claimed that he did not see the other machine because his windshield was coated with rain and sleet that had frozen on it.

AMERICAN LEAGUE PLAYERS TO GET DIPLOMAS INSTEAD OF USUAL MEDALS

Boston, Feb. 5.—A diploma will be presented to the player in the American league who is named as the most valuable player for his season's work, it was decided today at the adjourned meeting of the American league here. The diploma will take the place of the championship button previously awarded.

The meeting, which was attended by President Ban Johnson and seven members of the league, was the so-called scheduled season held each year and was the first of its kind ever held in this city by either league. Aside from adopting the playing sched for 1924, which was released for publication February 6, the magnates devoted their time and attention to informal discussions of what was best for the league. No deals were made public. The Chicago club was not represented owing to the legal tangle growing out of the Joe Jackson incident.

The call for the meeting was for Boston this year as a tribute to the new owner of the Red Sox, "Bobbie" Quinn. It marked the continuance of a policy previously adopted to have the American league magnates visit each of the cities in the organization in turn.

The suggestion regarding the diploma for the most valuable player emanated from Babe Ruth, possessor of many championship buttons, proposed a diploma setting forth the work of the player, and signed either by President Johnson or the chairman of the trophy committee. The proposal was adopted unanimously and in a few weeks Ruth will have something to hang on the walls of his Sudbury home setting forth his prowess in the 1923 season. Sisler, who was selected in 1922 as the most valuable player in the league, will also receive a diploma.

The members of the league voted that more time be given the visiting clubs in their batting practice. It was decided that the visitors should be given 30 minutes of such practice from the opening of the season until June, and 20 minutes from June 1 to the close of the season.

The question of control of the ball in play was not discussed, this matter having been left to President Johnson who will instruct his umpires. President Johnson is in favor of fewer balls being put into the games and is expected to urge the umpires to be less generous in the distribution of new balls during the 1924 contests.

The members attending the session were: New York, Colonel Jacob Ruppert; Philadelphia, Connie Mack; Washington, Clark Griffith; Boston, Robert Quinn; St. Louis, Vice President Fritsch; Cleveland, E. S. Barnard; Detroit, Frank Navin.

Clark Griffith after the meeting announced that he would not name his manager until a later date and denied that he was considering Jack Barry. Barry was not at the meeting and it was said that he would remain as coach at Holy Cross. It was also reported that Jack Chesbro, former Yankee pitcher, would go to Washington to coach the pitchers.

President Johnson left tonight for New York. The other magnates also departed for their homes with the exception of President Barnard of Cleveland who will remain in Boston over tomorrow.

PROMINENT ENGLISH SQUASH PLAYER ARRESTED IN NEW YORK

New York, Feb. 5.—Colonel V. V. Harvey, member of the all-star English squash tennis team which arrived today aboard the Tyrrhania for a series of international matches in this country and Canada, was arrested on a charge of deserting his wife, as he left the steamship pier in company with a welcoming party of New York club men.

Colonel Harvey, who was identified by his wife, was taken to the domestic relations court while six other members of the English party proceeded to the Harvard club, where they are to be entertained while here.

The squash team is scheduled to play in New York, Boston, Washington Baltimore and Philadelphia, when an international championship series is slated to be held. The team also will visit Toronto and Montreal.

McTIGUE STARTS TO GET INTO CONDITION FOR BOUTS

New York, Feb. 5.—Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion, started training today for prospective matches, including one with Gene Tuney, American 175 pound titleholder, in New York, and another with Young Stribling, either here or in Newark, N. J.

McTigue has not yet accepted any of several fight offers made him by promoters. Before doing so, he must straighten fresh complications which have developed over the contract he bought from his former manager, Joe Jacobs, and which bound him to bouts with Tunney, Tom Gibbons and Ad Stone.

YOUNG LEONARD IN NORWICH FOR A FEW DAYS WORKOUT

Young Leonard of Wallingford, who recently won a decision over Young Marcel of Holyoke in a slashing set-to at Hartford, is spending a few days in Norwich in preliminary workouts to his bout with Marcel at Hartford on February 14th. Leonard is in tip-top condition but will not get down to real hard training until he returns to Wallingford where he will work out with Kid Kaplan, the Meriden flash.

Leonard's fighting weight is around 142 pounds, a weight which he manages to keep within a pound of during the whole year. He is adopting Kaplain's whirlwind attack that has won such favorable comment for the Meriden battler. It was this slashing toe-to-toe fighting that made his bout with Marcel such sensation and another slambang affair is anticipated when they meet on Valentine's day.

BOGASH GETS DECISION OVER MOODY AT BOSTON

Boston, Feb. 5.—Lou Bogash, of Bridgeport, Conn., defeated Frank Moody, Welsh middleweight, here tonight, earning the decision after a hard-fought ten rounds. Bogash weighed 163 1-4 pounds and Moody 161.

The first seven rounds went to the Bridgeport man by a long margin, his speed and power seeming to daze the the Welshman. In the fourth round Moody was knocked down four times. In the fifth he was brought to his knees. Moody in the eighth round opened a cut over Bogash's left eye and finished strong, taking the honors of the final three rounds by a shade. In the ten round semi-final Archie Walker, New York lightweight, won the decision over Ted Marchant, of England.

YOUNG COULON NOW OUT AFTER LOCAL FIGHTERS

Young Coulon of Taftville who has been training with Andy Thomas in New Bedford during the past few months is seeking a bout with Young DeForest in the near future. Coulon has met DeForest before when he was fighting under the name of Young Beauregard and made a good showing. Since leaving Taftville Young Coulon has developed into a likely looking boy and is twice as fast as as when he fought here. He has also developed good hitting power in both hands and can sock from any position.

He is anxious to show his stuff to the home folks and would like matches with any local 112 pound boy or any boy of this weight in the eastern part of the state.

ONE ONE-TENTH OF OLYMPIC FUND RAISED

New York, Feb. 5.—Approximately $35,000, one-tenth of the $350,000 fund needed to send America's 1924 Olympic team to Paris in quest of international laurels, has been subscribed, it was announced today by the American Olympic committee.

Latest contributions include $3,000 from Newark, N. J.; $2,500 from Philadelphia; $500 from Albany, N. Y., and $750 from the Fencers club of New York. The Detroit committee also forwarded $5,000.

FILLMORE BEATS BARBER IN LAST LEG OF MATCH

In the final leg of the 20-string match between Roy Fillmore of Norwich and Tony Barber of Danielson at the Casino alleys in Danielson on Tuesday evening the local bowler picked up 79 pins and increased his winning margin to 110 pins. Fillmore won 7 out of the ten strings rolled.

The scores:

Fillmore—112 92 109 111 100 114 121 100 137 92—1089.

Fillmore averaged 108-9 and Barber's average was 101.

FIELDERS FOR INDIANS TO GET EARLY SPRING PRACTICE

Cleveland, Feb. 5.—Four fielders of the Cleveland baseball club will join the battery men at Hot Springs, February 16, to boil out two weeks before going to the training camp at Lakeland, Fla. They are Frank Brower, Homer Summa, Rube Lutzke and Sumpter Clark. The latter an outfielders with Birmingham, Ala., last season. All asked and were granted permission to first go to Hot Springs.

JOHNSON KNOCKED OUT DOUGLAS IN FIRST ROUND

New York, Feb. 5.—In his first attempt at a come-back, Floyd Johnson, Iowa, won a sensational technical knockout in the first round of his bout tonight with Jack Douglas, of New York, after two minutes and thirty seconds of fighting.

For the first two minutes the fighting was evenly contested. Johnson drew back, swung a left to the stomach and a right to the jaw and Douglas fell. The referee did not begin to count and as the New Yorkers struggled to get to his feet the arbitor stepped before Johnson and ordering him to his corner awarded the technical knockout.

Ted Jamieson, Milwaukee, won the judges decision after 10 rounds over Mike Carrier, New York. Jamieson's weight was 173 1-4; Carrier's 169 1-2.

FLOTILLA FIVE EASY VICTIMS FOR FAST ARMY-NAVY BASKETBALL FIVE

The Army-Navy five took a well played game from the Submarine Base team at Parish hall on Tuesday evening before a fair sized house. The game was fast and interesting, although resulting in the one-sided score of 51 to 33, in favor of the Army-Navy. From the start it was easy to see that the game was going to be fast. The Army-Navy took the lead early and at the end of the first half the score was 23 to 19 in favor of the local team. In the second half the Army-Navy boys continued to forge ahead and when the final whistle blew the Flotilla team had suffered another defeat.

The leading point man for the winners was Joe Belair who caged 8 baskets from the floor and dropped in 1 on the foul tries. Normandin was a close second with 7 baskets and 1 foul. For the base the star was Greene who played a fast floor game and accounted for 14 points.

In the preliminary game the seconds beat the Nobles by a score of 43 to 10. This game was a snappy exhibition. The summary:

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

Loren Murchison, of the Newark (N. J.) Athletic club, defeated every sprinter who started against him, indoors and outdoors.

"Brick" Owens, American League umpire, has been selected as umpire for the Detroit Tygers' training trip games this spring.

Third Baseman Ricenda of the Philadelphia Athletics is also a star professional basketball player.

The fact that First Baseman Joe Judge of the Washington Americans is so easily injured, handicaps greatly his value as a first sacker.

Clyde Engle, former American league player, will assist Joe Wood in coaching the baseball candidates at Yale. Engle will have charge of the freshmen players, the future varsity material.

University of Pennsylvania supports 19 sports in its athletic calendar. Of them only three show a profit, according to a recent yearly report, namely: Track, football and basketball.

Connie Mack could boast at one time, that he could place nine players in the game and not one of them ever indulged in intoxicating liquor. That was in the moist days. Now it would puzzle that sage leader to pick nine of his players who neither touch, taste nor handle the beverage.

A new trade announced by Roger Bresnahan for his Toledo Club is Infielder Walter Barbare to Buffalo for Infielder Johnny Sheehan and Pitcher Fisher.

The Philadelphia Nationals last week finally decided, on pleas from Cincinnati to waive on Infielder Walter Kimmick and he will go to Vernon as part payment for Jake May.

The Louisville Club announces the sale of Pitcher Sam Reid to the Terre Haute Club. Reid is a youngster picked up by the Colonels in the wilds of Kentucky who is said to have possibilities.

The New York Yankees already have begun to shed some of the minor league "talent" taken on for accommodation. For instance, Pitcher Benny Karr was last week returned to the Atlanta Club of the Southern League.

Del Gainer, first baseman and outfielder, after being reinstated by Commissioner Landis and given his release by the St. Louis Nationals, promptly signed with the Houston Club, which is an immediate enterprise of the Cardinals.

Still another Class D league is in the making. It is to take in territory in Wisconsin and Minnesota, the cities interested in organizing the circuit being La Crosse, Janesville, Green Bay, Oshkosh, Madison, Winona and so on.

Nashville reports that its ball park as a result of winter floods and freezes has been made into a skating rink. Twelve feet of water overflowed the hollow known as a ball park then it froze and the skating rink proposition was the result. Manager Jimmy Hamilton's ideas of training his team at home are subject to revision.

Frank Chance of the Chicago White Sox will have nine outfielders in his Florida camp this spring. The list includes Hooper, Falk, Strunk, Archdeacon, Ostergard and Rabbit, left-handed hitters, and Fish, Mostil and Barret, right-handers. Out of all that list the White Sox fair gardens should be well enough handled for them to keep off the bottom.

The Galveston club has put in a howl about the transfer by the Phillies of Pitcher Petie Behan to the Mobile club of the Southern League. President Leopold of the Galveston Club alleges that he "came to terms" with the Phillies for Behan early in January, ten days before announcement of the sale of the pitcher to Mobile. Leopold says he had sent in his proof to Commissioner Landis.

Branch Rickey, manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, went East last week, met representatives of the Boston Braves and New York Giants and returned home to announce that no deal had been made for Rogers Hornsby. That report was followed by an announcement by Hornsby, that he expects to continue on with the Cardinals. Hornsby and Rickey both intimated that they had fallen on each other's necks and made peace.

ARNSTEIN GETS TWO YEARS IN PENITENTIARY

Washington, Feb. 5.—The conviction of Jules R. "Nicky" Arnstein and four others in 1922 for bringing stolen Wall Street securities to Washington for hypothecation by local banks, was confirmed today by the District of Columbia court of appeals.

Arnstein was sentenced to two years in the penitentiary and a fine of $10,000. Isadore Cohn of New York was given a similar fine and imprisonment; David W. Sullivan of Washington, and Wilen W. Easterday, stock brokers, were each given two years, without fine, and Norman S. Bowles, a Washington attorney, was fined $5,000 and sentenced to two years.

UPRISING AGAINST THE PRESIDENT OF HONDURAS

New Orleans, Feb. 5.—General Tiburcio Carias, the Honduran presidential candidate, who received the highest number of votes in the recent election but not enough to assure his election, has launched an uprising against the continuance in office of former President Lopez Gutierrez, whose term expired February 1, and has established headquarters near Choluteca, according to advices received today by the Honduran consulate here.

CHANCE ACQUAINTANCE REVEALS LOST MINIATURE

Grace Denison Wheeler, of Stonington, descendant through eleven lines from Capt. George Denison and both wives, Bridget Thompson and Lady Ann Borrodell, writes concerning a miniature of Lady Ann Borrodell Denison as follows:

I am sure many of the descendants of Captain George Denison and wife, Lady Ann Borrodell will be greatly interested to know that a miniature on ivory of Lady Ann has recently come to the knowledge of Stonington people, where the old home of Captain George and Lady Ann is yet well preserved at Pequotsepos near the village of Mystic, being now owned by a descendant, Mrs. Ann Borrodell Denison Gates. The story of Ann and George runs like a romance, preceding which, he came with his father and mother, William and Margaret Denison from Stratford, England, where with a good estate they were well established, but hearing of the famous transplantation in New England, he removed with all of his family, but his eldest son, John who was a vicar at Standon County Herts, and settled in Roxbury, Mass., in 1631.

George Denison was their youngest child, born in 1618, so he was only 17 when he landed in New England. At 20 years of age he married Bridget Thompson, also of Roxbury, Mass., but she died three years later, leaving two little girls, the elder, Sarah of two years, and Hannah, a babe of a few months. Tradition says he went immediately from the grave of his wife, Bridget, to England, where we know from a letter of his brother, Major-General Daniel Denison, that he was a soldier there for over a year—was at the battle of Marston Moor, where he fought valiantly, was taken prisoner, but when he got free, tradition says, he betook himself to the home of John Borrodell of Cork, Ireland, where he was nursed back to health by his sister, Ann Borrodell. It seems more than probable that he might have gone there to visit his cousin John Denison, who with his father's family had removed there in 1631 and who was a soldier and major in the time of the wars and was also deputy governor of Cork, Ireland.

So successfully did Lady Ann help to heal the wounds of body, mind and heart that they were married in a few years and returned to Roxbury, Mass. bringing one child, George, Jr., with them and they lived in Roxbury until 1651 when they moved to New London, and in 1654 to Stonington, where he erected his dwelling house, and later surrounded it with a stockade fort. He held nearly every office in the town's gift, was most distinguished in military affairs and next to Captain John Mason was the most daring soldier in New England. He with his family continued to live on his homestead farm at Pequotsepos till his death, which occurred in 1694.

His grave and stone are in the Center church yard in Hartford. He was serving as deputy to the general assembly at the time of his death and as no adequate means of transportation were available, he was buried in Hartford.

Lady Ann was three years her husband's senior, and endowed with more than usual good looks, as the miniature shows, with sweet brown eyes, and abundance of brown hair, caught up with dainty combs as the fashion of the day. One can almost see her at her household duties in her home through the years, surrounded by her children, brave and courageous in those early days when Indians and war whoops were ever to be expected.

Her brass candlestick and the little brass knob near the fireplace are to be seen there now, and various pieces of her needlework and most beautiful embroideries in the hands of her many descendants, scattered throughout the United States. It has always been said she brought over with her the seeds of the Denison redding apple, a most delightful fruit, small and deep, red in color which is yet grown in this locality.

Her personality has pervaded the centuries since she came with her soldier husband to live in the then wilds of Pequotsepos.

There has been a tradition among her descendants that her portrait was somewhere in existence but it fell to the good fortune of the Misses Rathbun of Mystic to meet a woman during their summer travels in the mountains who was connected with Miss Kimball of Providence, the owner of the miniature and during conversation about their homes and various ancestors the name of the little Irish Lady Ann Borrodell was mentioned and the fact became known that her picture was even then hanging in the home of Miss Kimball, having been handed down in a direct family line from Lady Ann whose death occurred in 1712 when she was 97 years old. Her grave may be seen in the Elm Grove cemetery near Mystic and a copy of her miniature may be obtained from Gilbert McClurg of Stonington, to whom it was loaned by Miss Kimball and who has had it copied by an expert artist till it seems a perfect reproduction of the original miniature.

ROBT. GAIR PLANT BLAZE, MONTVILLE, SUBDUED BY NEW LONDON FIREMEN

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 5.—A hearing will take place in the superior court Feb. 15th for the purpose of acting on the petition for the appointment of a permanent receiver of the Shey Hartlinat company, which recently went into bankruptcy. Waldo E. Miner of New London, is the temporary receiver and he will probably be made permanent receiver.

Miss Elizabeth Latham of Groton, a patient at Lawrence hospital, was able to return home today.

The funeral of Mrs. Mary E. Sousa, wife of John D. Sousa, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. A high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Alexander Wolfschlaeger. The bearers were Joseph Flora, Anthony Sousa, Arthur Nunes, Amos Martin, Ernest Saunders and Frank Church. The flower bearers were Harold and Frank Pascua. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Patsy Duplice and Miss Marie Pica were married this morning at 8 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, the nuptial mass being sung by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons, pastor of the church. John Gigliotti was best man and Miss Anna Farinella was bridesmaid. Upon their return from a wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Duplice will reside at 164 Shaw street.

Rollo Rollo, 78, died this morning at his home, 270 Main street. Mr. Rollo had been ill many weeks. He is survived by three sons, Hanan, Albert and Leonardo Rollo, and by three daughters, Mrs. Adrianna Carcaterra, Mrs. Sarah Priola and Mrs. Isabella Catanse. For many years Mr. Rollo conducted a fruit and confectionary store on Main street.

Bernard F. Smith and Mrs. Nora O'Grady of 9 Fourth street, will be married tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. Mr. Smith is employed as yard brakeman by the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. Mrs. O'Grady is widow of Robert M. O'Grady, formerly a member of the New London police department.

A span of horses attached to a double vehicle used for the collection of animal garbage and owned by Casper Alfiero, of 37 Orchard street, ran away this afternoon and continued a great distance before captured, but no damage of consequence resulted. The team was left unattended by Alfiero while he went to a yard on Jefferson avenue to make a collection. A passing automobile caused the animals to take fright and in an instant they were on a mad run through the avenue. Continuing through Jefferson avenue to the horses plunged into Broad street and continued to the corner of Connecticut avenue when they slackened their speed and were brought to a stop.

John Marcooney, a young man, who says he resides at 125 West 67th street, New York and also claimed that he lives at 27 Franklin square, Norwich, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman Clarence Wells, charged with the theft of an overcoat, the property of Arthur Boucher, an employe of the H. Wales Lines company of Meriden, which firm has the contract for the erection of the Mercer building on State street. Marcooney, it is claimed, went to the Y. M. C. A. cafeteria and while Boucher dined, stole his coat. Marcooney was later located on Bank street and placed under arrest.

A fire that threatened to cause serious damage, occurred late this afternoon when flames attacked the plant of the Robert Gair company, at Montville. Assistance was summoned from New London and after an hour's work the blaze was subdued, but not before one room of the structure had been practically gutted.

The fire was discovered about 5 o'clock when flames were detected issuing from the feeder room, a section of the building where waste and similar materials are stored. Employes of the company attacked the fire, but it had gained such headway that the destruction of the factory was feared. A telephone message to fire headquarters caused the Nameaug Engine company's pumper to be speeded to Montville. With the arrival of the firemen, Chief Charles Ross caused the two large tanks of chemicals to be emptied into the burning room and the deluge of the stock with the liquid quickly subdued the flames, but not before one of the partitions collapsed.

The cause of the fire is not known, but is believed to have resulted from spontaneous combustion.

Mrs. Hattie Sawyer of 302 Williams street, where she was employed as a housekeeper, died this morning at 11 Shaw street, where she went a few days ago to visit an acquaintance. While at the Shaw street house Mrs. Sawyer was taken ill. She was the widow of Charles Sawyer.

The condition of Miss Elizabeth Waller, daughter of Judge and Mrs. Charles B. Waller of Vauxhall street, who underwent an operation at Lawrence hospital last week for appendicitis, is reported as being vastly improved and she will be able to return home within a few days.

Miss Catherine Wilder and Mrs. Annie Sherman have returned to their home in Monson, having made a brief visit with Mrs. Catherine Wilder.

Mrs. Lewis L. Smith and son, Lewis Jr., have returned to their home, 547 Ocean avenue, having spent several days in New York.

Mrs. George Reichel of 85 Pacific street has been admitted to Presbyterian hospital, New York, as a patient under observation.

Henry Belcher, son of Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Belcher, formerly of New London, now of Clinton, is visiting his grandmother, Mrs. Cyrus B. Fenger.

Charles P. Fitch has sold a building lot on Broad street, Groton, to William McLean Roscoe. It is understood that Mr. Roscoe intends to erect a house on the site.

Two automobiles came to grief in Groton, this morning, because of the slippery condition of the highways. A Dexter Bakery company commercial car suffered the loss of a wheel on Poquonoc road, when it skidded, and a service machine owned by George N. Greenlow and operated by Michael Fenton, overturned, following skidding on Broad street. Fenton escaped injury other than sustaining bruises.

John Hines, a lifelong resident of New London, but who is without kin, at least hereabouts, was removed from the Army and Navy lodging house, corner of State, North Bank and Atlantic streets, this evening, to Lawrence hospital. Hines has been ill several weeks and it is believed that he is suffering from a chronic form of lung trouble.

Mrs. David Nagle, wife of Patrolman Nagle is confined to her home on West Colt street as a result of a fall she sustained this morning, slipping on an ice-coated sidewalk.

Mrs. Denehey, 26 Cottage street, complained to the police this afternoon that while she was at the Blair store on State street her umbrella was stolen. Patrolman Carlos Seiesnitsky a short time later obtained a clue that led to the lodging house at 76 Golden street and there he found Mrs. Florence Edward and a Mrs. Lockwood together, with the umbrella in the possession of the latter. Mrs. Lockwood admitted taking the umbrella, but stated that it was a mistake and that she intended to return it to the store at 5.30 o'clock. Both Mrs. Edwards and Mrs. Lockwood were taken to the police station and there the owner recovered her property. Mrs. Denehey did not desire the prosecution of Mrs. Lockwood, so the charge was dismissed.

Dave Clark, colored, led the police into the house of Morris Lubchansky, a Hebrew, residing on John street, in search of liquor. They found some liquor there, but they did not find evidence that would convict either Lubchansky or his wife Esther, of possessing the fighting fluid. Clark was arrested in what the police call "a dump" on Douglass street Saturday night. There they found a gang of whites and blacks and took them all to the police station as several of them were drunk. Today, Mrs. Lubchansky was in the police court charged with violation of probation established last November when she was found guilty of selling liquor and was fined $150 and ordered to be imprisoned in the county jail for a period of six months. The jail sentence was suspended, with the understanding that she should not have any liquor in her home or in the store which she manages for a term of a year. But Clark told the police that he bought the liquor he had Saturday night from Lubchansky. On the strength of that a search warrant was issued and the premises on John street were searched. Mrs. Durber, a Chesterfield woman, was there then and she was found in possess a gallon can of hooch carefully concealed in a canvas bag. She dropped it on a stairway leading to the tenement upstairs. She then declared that she did not know to whom the stuff belonged. Mrs. Lubchansky denied that the hooch was her property. It was confiscated, but the ownership of it was not established, so Mrs. Lubchansky was not convicted. In court today Clark claimed that he did not buy the liquor from Lubchansky Saturday, but that he did buy from him some time ago.

Robert Kelly, employed at Norwich, was fined $25 in the police court today for reckless driving of an automobile. He was arrested at 1.30 this morning when he came from Norwich and ran into a silent policeman at the corner of Main and Williams streets. He said he was blinded by the lights of other machines approaching him and could not see the "silent." Kelly admitted that he had a drink at his supper in Norwich, but said that was all the intoxicants he absorbed. He was taken into custody when his machine was wrecked by the encounter with the heavy cement and stone signal light. As he declared that his trip from Norwich occupied 40 minutes he concluded that he was not driving faster than 15 miles an hour.

Steve Petrofsky was fined $1 for trespassing on the property of the New Haven railroad. He said he was employed by the City Dye Works and that he came that way to shorten his distance. Yesterday Officer Martin Kane warned him to keep off the railroad property, but that did not serve to keep Petrofsky away so he was arrested. The experience cost him over $11.

This city is soon to have an ironbound and cement-lined ordinance that will govern the erection of gasoline tanks. There is danger feared wherever these holders of volatile and inflammable fluid are erected and to allay that fear is the purpose of the ordinance as well as to limit the danger of fire to property surrounding the tanks. The ordinance provides for basins surrounding the tanks where they are on the surface, these basins to be erected out of earth or of concrete and to be capable of holding 50 per cent more fluid than the contents of the tanks they surround. Until the ordinance is perfected and adopted, the council will be slow about granting any permission for the erection of tanks. A petition for the construction of a 20,000-gallon tank was held up last night until the ordinance should have its final action from the council. "Think of a fire in a 20,000 gallon tank of gasoline!" urged one member of the council, and when the members did think of that, they hesitated about granting the permission desired. Last summer a tank over near Poquet station burst open when the tank settled and a river of gasoline flowed out to the ground. Precaution was taken immediately that no open flame should get close to the volatile stuff and thus no fire resulted. But there was so much danger about the situation that those who gave it serious consideration shuddered as to what might happen had a fire started and spread. It is said that much consideration is to be given to the erection of gasoline tanks near wooden structures and where there is danger from sparks from passing locomotives.

The city council, when it adjourned Monday evening, set this evening at 8 o'clock for a special session to act on propositions to establish a building line on Bank street, especially on the west side. Of the seven members of the council only three appeared tonight so no meeting could be held.

WESTERLY

A special session of Stonington town court was held in Borough Hall, Tuesday morning before Judge William A. Wilcox, with Albert G. Martin, clerk. Elwin L. Wilkinson, 24, was presented on complaint of Prosecuting Attorney George H. McKenna charged with operating a bus between Stonington and Westerly which was overloaded. Wilkinson was served with a summons by Sergeant Palmer of the Groton barracks, Saturday and his appearance in court followed, on Tuesday morning. Judge Wilcox found the accused guilty and fined him $20 and costs of $18.43 which amounted to $38.43 which the defendant paid. Of late there has been complaint of bus drivers who have carried passengers at regular rates between Stonington and Westerly and this practice is against the state law unless certainly requirements are met.

Early commuters Tuesday morning at the Westerly station of the New Haven road witnessed a foolhardy stunt by a would-be Bradford passenger. The young man arrived in the station just as the morning accommodation train was leaving. He started to run after the train and managed to keep just to the rear of the last car until the end of the shelter covering of the platform was reached. From that time on it was a different story for the platform was covered with a thin coating of ice upon which little foothold could be kept. Losing his balance, the young man fell to the platform rolling over and over, fortunately for him in a forward direction. The young man picked himself up with no more serious results than bruises and a thorough shaking up. Passengers on the station platform held their breath as they witnessed the young man's hazardous act.

Says — Now Stiff Joints Must Go!

New Discovery Limbers 'Em Up and Even the Creaking Ceases.

Yes: it's true—the world progresses. All you have to do nowadays to limber up that stiff, rusty knee joint is to squeeze a half inch of miracle working substance from a tube.

Then rub it on the offending part for about a quarter of a minute or until it soaks through the skin and disappears on its errand of mercy.

Then read the evening newspapers and go to bed.

The chances are that your misbehaving knee joint will lose its "creak" while you are dreaming about the high fences you used to leap when you were a youngster.

"And in the morning," says one who has tried the new discovery, "you'll be so happy that you'll want to jump into your sportiest clothes and walk gaily down the street just to show neighbors that you are not as old as they think you are."

Joint-Ease: They call this wonder working substance, for the reason that when ordinary remedies fail to limber up the stiff, inflamed rheumatic joint, or reduce the swelling, Joint-Ease succeeds.

It's a good name for a good, clean, stainless prescription that in just a few months has proven to a multitude of people that lame, swollen, distorted joints can speedily have the kinks taken out of them and work as smoothly as ever.

But Joint-Ease is for bothersome joints, whether in knee, ankle, hip, shoulder, spine or finger, and for that purpose its sale is immense.

All druggists everywhere report a big demand.

Getting Skinnier Every Day

Something Must be Done and Done Darn Quick, Too.

Tens of thousands of thin, run-down men—yes, and women too—are getting discouraged—are giving up all hope of ever being able to take on flesh and look healthy and strong.

All such people can stop worrying and start to smile right now for McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets, which any druggist will tell you all about, is putting flesh on hosts of skinny folks every day.

One woman, tired, weak and discouraged, put on 15 pounds in five weeks and feels fine.

We all know that Cod Liver Oil is full of flesh producing vitamines, but many people can't take it because of its horrible smell and fishy taste, and because it often upsets the stomach.

McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets are as easy to take as candy, and if any thin person don't gain at least 5 pounds in 30 days your druggist will give you your money back—and only 60 cents a box. Ask Lee & Osgood Co., or any live pharmacist anywhere.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS STRONG

New York, Feb. 5—Strong financial interests were again at work on the constructive side in today's stock market, staging bullish demonstrations in the steel, sugar, oil and motor shares in the face of heavy profit-taking in other sections of the list, particularly among the tobaccos, high priced industrial specialties and a few recently strong rails.

Sales ran over the million mark despite the fact that the wire service of all the commission houses was seriously crippled by the storm. Direct service between New York and Chicago was entirely cut off although orders from the western city were received on roundabout routes.

Reports of a further expansion of mill activities brought fresh buying into the steel shares, United States Steel common touching 108 1-2, the highest price since last March, and then easing to 107 7-8. Bethlehem and Crucible Steels moved up nearly a point each and republic improved fractionally

The preliminary 1923 report of Mack Trucks, Inc., showing earnings of more than $20, a share on the common stock, or more than double those of 1922, drew attention to the motors ir which some good buying was reported. Mack Truck climbed as high as 90 1-2 but later fell back a point at the close. While motor crossed 58 and closed 3-4 higher at 57 1-2 and Stromberg Carburetor showed a net gain of more than one point.

Among the factors which influenced the buying of oil shares were the steady decrease in domestic production of crude oil with a still further decrease probable if the naval oil reserve leases are cancelled, the rising trend of gasoline and crude prices with the resultant increase in inventories on oil in storage, and the increased consumption of gasoline due to the open winter.

General Asphalt preferred advanced nearly four points, Phillips and Houston about a point each and most of the others showed fractional gains. Pacific touching another new top at 58 1-4. Pan-American issues were subjected to a bear attack, the "A" dropping 2 3-4 and the "B" 1 1-4.

Sugars were heavily bought on another advance in Cuban raw sugars.

Rails were sluggish although Wabash preferred "A" was pushed above 44 to the highest price in years, closing 7-8 points higher at 43 1-8. Atlantic Coast Line and Canadian Pacific each dropped two.

In the public utility group, Consolidated Gas, Brooklyn Edison, Brooklyn Union Gas and the American Water Works issues, showed gains of 1 to 2 1-2 points.

Lorillard was the weak spot in the tobacco group, dropping 6 1-4 points to 156. Other tobaccos yielded fractionally.

Call money opene dat 4 1-4 but dropped to four again before the close. Time money and commercial paper markets were rather quiet with the bulk of the business done at 4 3-4 per cent.

Foreign exchanges were again reactionary. Demand sterling dropped back more than two cents to just below $4.21 and French francs dropped about five points to 4.61 3-4 cents. Japanese yen improved in anticipation of an early announcement of the Japanese reconstruction loan.

BOND MARKET

New York, Feb. 5—Renewed buying of speculative bonds and the advance of Japanese government issues to new high levels for the year in anticipation of the sale of a new loan were the outstanding features in today's market. Strong inquiry for all classes of bonds gave a firm undertone to trading, in which sugar convertibles and low priced rails were the principal strong spots.

While advances in the Japanese issues were not so pronounced as in the previous day's trading, the heavy turnover accompanied by the buoyancy of prices was regarded as a certain sign that the forthcoming loan was almost ready for offering. In bond circles it was reported that the issue would be placed on sale Thursday.

Widening demand for foreign bonds sent the United Kingdom 5 1-2s of 1937, the Belgian 8s, and French municipals higher. The advance in Paris-Lyons-Mediterannean bonds, which have been under accumulation by powerful banking interests, however, was checked somewhat by the movement of the franc.

Seaboard adjustment 5s, with a gain of more than two points, led the advance on the rail group, which Chesapeake and Ohio convertible 5s and Minneapolis and St. Louis refunding 4s participated. Punta Alegre sugar 7s and Eastern Cuba 7 1-2s again touched new high levels on their present movement.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Feb. 5—Stimulated largely by advancing quotations at Liverpool and by considerable purchasing of future deliveries here on foreign account, wheat today reached new high price records for the season. Profit-taking sales eased the wheat market down later. Wheat closed unsettled at the same as yesterday's finish to 1-3c higher, May $1.12 1-2 to 1.12 1-3 at 5-8, and July $1.11 1-2 to 1.11 5-8. Corn finished 3-4 to 1c up. Oats at a shade to 1-4c advance and provisions with gains of five cents to 15c.

Nearly complete lack of selling pressure until near the end of the day was partly responsible for the upturn in wheat values. Traders, however, gave special attention to the fact that within a month the Liverpool March delivery had risen about 9 1-2c as against about 5 1-2c gain in Chicago. According to opinion expressed in some quarters, foreign requirements of wheat have been greatly under estimated. Meanwhile domestic developments continue to favor the bull side. Reduction of the visible supply, prospective curtailment of spring wheat acreage, and renewed gossip about likelihood of higher tariff rates were all accorded more or less notice.

Rough weather likely to delay the movement of the corn crop and to increase demand from feeders gave a good deal of independent strength to corn and oats. In the corn market, prices moved up so rapidly at times that standing orders to sell at certain levels proved to be impossible to execute. Country offering of corn were of very limited volume. Unlike wheat, corn retained most of its advance.

Provisions ruled higher, chiefly as the result of upturns in the value of grain and hogs.

METAL MARKET

New York, Feb. 5—Copper quiet, electrolytic spot and nearby 12 1-2 at 12 3-4; futures 12 5-8 at 12 3-4.

Tin firm, spot and nearby, 50.87 a 51.00; futures 50.12 at 50.25.

Iron steady, prices unchanged.

Lead steady, spot 6.15 at 6.50.

Zinc quiet, East St. Louis spot and nearby 6.65.

Antimony, spot 10.40 at 10.50.

MONEY

New York, Feb. 5—Call money steady, high 4 1-4; low 4; ruling rate 4 1-2; closing bid 4; offered at 4 1-4; last loan 4; call loans against acceptances 4; time loans; steady; mixed collateral 60 to 90 days 4 3-5; four to six months 4 3-4; price commercial paper 4 3-4.

COTTON

CURB MARKET

New York, Feb. 6—Early strength in today's curb market gave way to irregularity when heavy realizing sales carried prices down one to four points from their high figures of the day, industrials, as a group, giving a better exhibition of strength than the oils.

Net losses of 2 to 3 points were established by Magnolia Petroleum, Mutual Oil, Prairie Oil and Gas, Northern Pipe, Solar Refining and Standard Oil of Nebraska, despite a further upward revision in gasoline and crude prices. Cities service and Illinois, Cumberland and South Pennsylvania Pipes moved up a point or more. Latin-American Oil touched a new high at 94.

Strength and activity of the Ward Baking issues, all of which advanced one to 1 1-2 points, was the feature of the industrial group. Ford Motors of Canada jumped 11 points to 476 on a few shares in reflection of record breaking prices Glen Alden Coal advanced nearly two points. Dubilier Radio touched another record top at 19, closing at 19 1-4 for a small fractional gain.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

More than six hundred saw the "Old Homestead" presented by local amateurs at the Warren Memorial Hall Tuesday evening for the benefit of the Boys' Club. Michael O'Halloran, as uncle Josh, and Miss Miriam Frazier as Rickety Ann played the leading roles and were well supported by a strong cast. J. Kingsley Converse as Cyrus Prime and Louis H. Stevens as Seth Perkins provided much amusement as comedians of the rural New England type. Others in the cast were: Happy Jack, Harold Pinney; Eb Gersey, Frank A. Johnson; Judge Freeman, B. H. Pinney; John Freeman, Francis Adams; Henry Hopkins, Fred Prucker; Frank Hopkins, Earl S. Jacobson; Hoboken Terror, K. J. Converse; Lem Holbrook, F. Prucker; Francois, Ralph Baldwin; postman, Connie Clark; Reuben Whitcomb, R. Baldwin; Tilda Whitcomb, Mrs. Walter A. Greavis; Mrs. Henry Hopkins, Mary E. Hanley; Nellie Freeman, Maude Cummiskey.

The Haymakers quartet, Harry E. Burwell, Willie Abbott, Gilbert Wagner and Frank Johnson sang rural songs, including the Old Oaken Bucket.

Miss Genevieve Murphy who has been a successful teacher in the 7th grade in the Springs school since Sept. 1922 has sent her resignation to the superintendent of schools and asks that it take effect March 1st She has an appointment in Hartford.

The board of relief has been in session for the past few days and up to date there have been very few appeals from the figures as made out by the assessors.

BOLTON

The board of relief held the first meeting last Friday. No one visited the board for a tax reduction. The board consists of Charles N. Loomis, Cary D. Carpenter and Paul E Clement.

Mr. and Mrs. Michael Kurey's 16 year old son, Edward, who lives on the Benjamin Tryon farm in the Birch Mountain district, was drowned by breaking through the ice on Hinkey pond, while going home from school. The boy was accompanied by three smaller children who were unable to help him. They went for help but it was not gotten in time. The lad was the oldest of five children.

Local men have been harvesting their ice crop with all possible speed the past week.

Mrs. Louis Cavagnaro has been visiting New York relatives.

"Every Picture Tells a Story"

All Worn Out This Winter?

DOES winter find you lame, stiff and achy — worried all day long with nagging backache and sharp, rheumatic twinges? Do you feel worn-out, nervous and dispirited—older and slower than you should? Then you should be giving some attention to your kidneys. These wonderful little sponges filter every drop of blood in the body. But winter's colds and chills are apt to weaken the kidneys and weak kidneys allow poisons to accumulate in the life-giving blood, upsetting the whole bodily machinery. Then comes lameness, soreness and stiffness; daily backache, rheumatic pains, headaches, dizziness and distressing kidney irregularities. One feels constantly tired, nervous, depressed and utterly miserable. Don't risk neglect! Help your weakened kidneys with a stimulant diuretic. Use Doan's Pills. Doan's have helped thousands. Are endorsed here at home. Ask your neighbor!

Read How These Norwich Folks Found Relief:

GEO. WATERMAN, Landscape Gardener, 156 Talman St., says: "I have had kidney trouble and more or less misery in my back. When I sat down to eat my dinner and then tried to get up, a stitch took me in my kidneys and I thought for a minute I had been struck with a sharp instrument. A friend told me to use Doan's Pills. Doan's helped me."

MRS. MARGARET BROWN, 340 W. Main St., says: "My back and kidneys were in a bad way and I suffered with dull pains through my kidneys. The trouble gradually grew worse until it was almost impossible for me to get out of bed in the morning. I was in this condition for nearly a year, trying medicines and remedies for relief without avail. Finally I used Doan's Pills and found them to be the remedy I needed. Doan's made me feel like a different person. My kidneys are now acting regularly and the pains have left my back."

CALVIN L. BRIGGS, Carpenter, 37 Penobscott St., says: "I think my work had a great deal to do with my trouble, as over-lifting seemed to aggravate the pains that were in my back almost constantly. I got so bad, I couldn't lift at all and I could hardly straighten up. Doan's Pills gave me relief. I recommend them so that others who are troubled with kidney complaint will know of a good medicine."

Every Druggist has Doan's. 60c a box.

A tremendous drama of human emotions in the everyday life of everyday people. The big and little things of living as we all know them and feel them in ourselves and in our friends are pictured with a clearness and sharpness that is fairly startling.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

GETTING BACK FROM THE PICNIC

Old Mrs. Moon came up the sky
As the Sledmobile went rushing by
The little house of Danny Fox
Hidden away in the hill-side rocks.

"I'm glad that old robber didn't happen along while we were picnicking," whispered dear Uncle Lucky.

"Dear, dear," squeaked timid Miss Mousie, "I'm glad I never thought of him. I might have stayed at home."

"Wow, wow!" growled the good, brave Yellow Dog Tramp, "I would have fixed that old robber had he sneaked near us."

Just then, Uncle Lucky stopped the Sledmobile at the Big Farm Yard, and the three barnyard folk, Henny Jenny, Cocky Doodle and Ducky Waddles jumped out. "We've had a lovely time," they whispered, not wishing to wake up Old Sic'em, the farmer's dog, who was sound asleep in his little wooden house.

Then away sped the Sledmobile, down the Old Cow path across the Sunny Meadow, which wasn't sunny anymore, although Mrs. Moon did her best to light the way for the little bunnies, when out jumped Chippy Chipmunk and the Squirrel Brothers.

A little further on, in the dear Old Bramble Patch, stood the little white bungalow. A tiny light shone from the kitchen window, sending a glimmer across the snow.

"Little Miss Cricket has kept the fire burning," said Lady Love, "It will be nice and warm."

"We've had a lovely time," she added as Uncle Lucky drew up the Sledmobile at the little gate in the old picket fence. "Won't you spend the night with us?"

"No, thank you," answered the old gentleman bunny, "Little Miss Mousie and I will drive back to Rabbitville. I must get home to pay the Old Red Rooster. It's Saturday night, you know, and he always wants his money on time and maybe oftener."

"I'll sleep by the kitchen stove, if you don't mind," said the Yellow Dog Tramp. "I'm not going to Hobo City until tomorrow."

Lady Love was only too glad to have him stay, for he was a fine watchdog, always sleeping with one eye open, although sometimes he might close both eyes, just for a winky-wink.

Then, away went dear Uncle Lucky and Little Miss Mousie, while pretty Lady Love hopped around to the kitchen door, followed by her bunny boy and the Yellow Dog Tramp.

"Here they are!" chirped Little Miss Cricket, and the Three Grasshoppers in the woodbox by the kitchen stove began to fiddle pretty music.

"How nice and cosy," laughed sweet Lady Love, turning to smile at Little Miss Cricket sitting on the edge of the rocking chair. "Did anyone call?" "Only a little snow bird. I gave him some carrot cake crumbs," answered the little cricket.

It didn't take Little Rabbit long to hop into bed that night. Dearest me, no. And after Lady Love had tucked him in and bolted the kitchen door, she, too, slipped with her little rabbit son into slumberland to dream of picnics and dashing rides over the snow.

Carl Laemmle.

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, has achieved the impossible. He has taken one of the classics of all time, taken a blue pencil and made several decided changes in the story filmed it without thinking of cost and then brought the complete product to the screen, and—won the unanimous endorsement of every critic in New York City.

When he first announced his intention of filming The Hunchback of Notre Dame, production experts declared it was impossible, first because the French would not permit the historic and sacred cathedral to be used as a background and secondly, that the cost of reconstructing it in this country was prohibitive. C. L. as he is popularly called went right ahead. If he couldn't "shoot" in Paris, he could here and he did. He spent $500,000 alone and reconstructed the entire cathedral at Universal city.

Next the literary world took up the cudgels. Hugo's tale was

The storm that was central over Illinois Monday night has moved northeastward and was central over southern Michigan Tuesday night with a secondary depression central over Maryland, whence it will move northeastward.

Pressure remained relatively high Wednesday night but was falling over the Plain states and from Manitoba to the Lower Saint Lawrence valley and thence southeastward to Bermuda.

Precipitation has occurred almost generally over the eastern half of the country within the last 24 hours. The precipitation was in the form of rain and sleet in the portions of the North Atlantic states and the lower Lake region, the North Atlantic states and the Rocky Mountain and Plateau regions, while colder weather overspread the great central valleys and the Gulf states.

The indications are for generally fair weather Wednesday and Thursday in the South Atlantic and East Gulf states and snows in the Ohio valley Wednesday and the Lower Lake region Wednesday and Thursday and for local rains or snows in the Middle Atlantic states and New England Wednesday followed by generally fair weather on Thursday.

The temperature will be lower generally east of the Mississippi river, except in Eastern New York and New England Wednesday and in the Upper Ohio valley, the Lower Lake region and the Middle Atlantic and North Atlantic states Thursday.

Forecast.

COUNTER CLAIM MEETS SUIT FOR $10,000 IN AUTOMOBILE SMASH

Trial of the case of Robert Moore of New Orleans, a summer resident at the Pequot, against the Gager-Crawford Co., of New London to recover damages of $10,000 as the result of an automobile accident there at the corner of Montauk and Gardner avenues on July 9, 1926, and a counter suit by the defendant against the plaintiff for the same accident, was started before Judge Christopher L. Avery and a jury in the civil superior court in New London Tuesday morning, the opening day of the February session.

The plaintiff claims that on the morning of July 9, he was riding in his Daniels Automobile which was driven by his chauffeur, John Brown along Montauk avenue in a southerly direction, when a Ford delivery truck of the defendant company came out of Gardner avenue and struck the Moore car. As a result of the collision, the Moore automobile was thrown against a trolley car and Mr. Moore was injured and the machine badly smashed.

In the counter suit, the Gager-Crawford Co., claims that the car of the plaintiff struck the car of the defendant and smashed it. Negligence, carelessness, reckless driving and failure to give warning is alleged on both sides.

Attorney Nathan Belcher is appearing for the plaintiff and Attorneys John C. Geary and Arthur T. Keefe are counsel for the Gager-Crawford company.

The following jury was selected to try the case: Albert Hewitt, Frank A. Baier, Allen Penhallow, New London; Frederick Rudd, Groton; Charles F. Champlin, James McKnight, John Jeffery, Stonington; William A. Ritchie, Edwin A. Moody, Montville; Peter Epffman, Ledyard; George A. Keeney, Waterford; Charles A. Beckwith, East Lyme.

The following jurors who had been summoned for duty were excused for the term: Nestor J. Dreyfus, Peter Fournier, New London; Rollin R. Burrows, Oscar Crumb, Groton; Walter C. Merrill, Edward F. Card, Stonington; Luther C. Tefft, Montville; George W. Hewitt, Bryan Clark, Waterford; T. Pembroke Perkins, East Lyme.

The first witness to be put on the stand was George K. Crandall, civil engineer, who exhibited and explained a map of the corner of Montauk and Gardner avenues where the accident took place.

Depositions of four witnesses were read giving testimony for the plaintiff after which Jules A. Racine, a garage man, testified to the nature and extent of the damages to the automobile of the plaintiff. He said that the body of the car was so badly smashed that it had to be shipped to New York to be repaired.

QUESTIONS LEGALITY OF BUYING NORWICH DRUG STORE

The legality of the purchase by the Liggett Co., of the Norwich drug store and drug stores in other cities from the National Drug Stores Corporation is questioned in a suit brought in New York against the present management of Liggett Corporation by Ralph B. Wattley, former president of the National Drug corporation and other stockholders.

The National Drug store in this city, which was located in the Shannon building was bought about a month ago by the Liggett corporation.

The plaintiffs charge that sale of the assets by the present management of the corporation, at inadequate prices and violation of law, has entailed a loss of $200,000 and that $500,000 more has been lost through alleged mismanagement. They ask that a receiver be appointed to conserve assets; that the sale of various stores to the Liggett Company be declared null; that the National Drug Stores management be restrained from transferring and the Liggett Company from taking over any more of the corporation's property pending trial and that they be granted such other relief as may be just.

Wattley alleged that depreciation in the value of corporation shares caused him to file a voluntary petition of bankruptcy on January 30. He declared the corporation prospered under his management, some twenty-four stores in New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Illinois being started.

Property of the National Drug Stores Corporation including stores in Buffalo, N. Y., Springfield and Pittsfield, Mass., and Norwich, Conn., has been sold to the Liggett Company, the plaintiffs stated. They alleged the corporation was incorporated in Delaware and that under the law of that state such sales could not be effectively consummated without the consent of a certain percentage of the stockholders which, they asserted, was not given.

TEN NURSE PROBATIONERS WELCOMED INTO SCHOOL

The ten members of the October probationary class of the William W. Backus Hospital Training School for Nurses having satisfactorily completed their probationary terms were uniformed and capped and welcomed into the training school Tuesday morning by Kathleen A. Dowd, R. N., superintendent of nurses. The members of the class are:

A class reception will be given the class on Monday evening, February 6, by the senior and intermediate classes. It will be in the form of an initiation after which a social hour will be enjoyed.

SCHOONER BLOSSOM WAS BATTERED BY STORMS

The schooner Blossom which sailed from New London October 29 on a two years cruise in southern waters has been laid up for over a month undergoing repairs at St. Vincent, Cape Verde Island, for damages sustained from fighting her way through extraordinary storms on the Atlantic.

She will leave directly for Brava, one of the Cabonerdean Islands sailing thence to St. Paul Rocks and from said Atlantic to Fernando Noronha off the coast of Brazil. The Blossom will proceed south from Brazil.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY MAPLEWOOD CEMETERY ASSCN.

At 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon the annual meeting of the Maplewood Cemetery association was held at the office of the secretary and treasurer, Gilbert S. Raymond. The following officers were elected for the coming year:

President, John McWilliams; vice president, Alexander Jordan; secretary and treasurer, Gilbert S. Raymond; board of directors, John McWilliams, Alexander Jordan, Edwin A. Tracy, John B. Oat, Gilbert S. Raymond, Shepard B. Palmer, Walter F. Lester; auditing committee, Charles S. Holbrook, Arthur L. Peale, Edwin A. Tracy; trustees, Charles E. Lamb, George H. Young and William A. Gallup.

The directors of the association voted a 5 per cent dividend to stockholders at a meeting on Feb. 1 and also voted to add $1,401 to the perpetual care trust fund, this sum being 20 per cent of the amount received from sales of lots and graves during the past year.

In part the annual report of Supt. Washington Holt follows:

The whole number of burials for the year was 136; in family lots 59, in single graves, 66; removals from receiving vault to other cemeteries 9; removals 2. Number of burials in cemetery to January 1st, 1924, 1,649, which includes all bodies removed from the vault to other cemeteries.

Lots sold in year, 38; single graves, 61; value of single graves, $582; value of lots, $6,641; total, $7,224. The value of lots and graves sold in 1922 was $6,104, increase in 1923, in value was $1,120.

Number of bodies placed in receiving vault during year was 40, and of these 31 were buried in Maplewood and 9 removed to other cemeteries.

Foundations were put in for 35 monuments and 52 grave markers and headstones. There are 772 monuments, grave markers and headstones in the cemetery, as follows: 250 monuments, 522 grave markers and headstones.

The concrete roadway has been completed. This was built by regular employes of the cemetery when work was slack last fall.

Trees and flower beds were set out during the year.

ARREST DRIVER OF CAR IN AUTOMOBILE FATALITY

Charles Peters, driver of the Ford car in which Andrew Hale, 80, of Marlborough was killed Sunday night on the Hartford turnpike, between Colchester and Marlborough, has been placed under arrest on charge of criminal negligence and is held there under $3,500 bonds.

Peters' story of the accident is that another car which he believed was a Packard, came along and side swiped his machine, causing it to overturn and throwing Hale to the cement pavement which caused instantaneous death.

A more complete investigation of the accident, however, was made on Monday by Hartford state police and Peters' arrest followed, pending final outcome of the investigation. Efforts by police to locate the car described by Peters have so far failed.

The police of the Groton barracks have given up the case. When the accident happened Hartford was short-handed and called in the Groton officers for the one occasion, although the accident happened in the Hartford territory.

Peters claimed that the car that hit the one he was driving disappeared in the direction of New London and search was made there Sunday night by the state police officers who tried to locate a Packard that would show signs of having been in a collision.

SILENT NIGHT

WEARY OF HEARING STANDARD TIME LEADER

We are tired of reading in various papers the effusions of one G. Warren Davis of Norwich, who is apparently the sponsor and certainly the spokesman for the Standard Time League of Connecticut, and who persists that all persons who do not observe standard time in Connecticut are lawbreakers. He has adopted the word scofflaw to his own purposes and applies it both to individuals and communities that work by daylight saving time in the summer.

Now when a man accuses his neighbors of being lawbreakers merely because he disagrees with them he is going pretty far, and this Davis person is tiresome. One of three things regarding him must be true. Either he has never read the so-called standard time law of Connecticut or he is too stupid to understand the English language, or he is deliberately and mendaciously slandering those who favor daylight saving time. Mr. Davis may put himself in whichever of these three categories he belongs.

Nothing is added to a discussion of the relative merits of daylight saving or standard time by this apparently deliberate and very silly misinterpretation of the law which Connecticut has upon its statute books. Waiving the question of the constitutionality of this statute which has never been tested, the fact remains that the statute itself is much more modest in what it attempts than G. Warren Davis would imply, and it makes no claim to regulate the watches or habits of private citizens, who may get up and go to bed by daylight saving time as long as they choose without being lawbreakers thereby, either technically or otherwise. The case of standard time must be very weak if Davis and his like cannot get up an argument except by misrepresenting the statutes of Connecticut.—Bridgeport Post.

NORWICH PASTOR'S TRIBUTE TO EX-GOVENOR WALLER

Rev. A. N. Fester, paster of the Church of the Good Shepherd (Universalist) writes the following letter to the Boston Post as a eulogy on Former Governor Waller:

"The impressive funeral service at historic St. James' Episcopal church at New London in honor of the late ex-Governor Thomas M. Waller, revived memories of a picturesque and romantic figure in the public life of Connecticut two generations ago.

"Starting as an orphan lad and a newsboy, he attained successive positions in the legislative service and was later chosen governor of the state. He commanded the respect of the public which overruns partisan barriers and social distinction. He knew the struggling experiences of the poor, and he also knew, later, the temptations and the alluring pressure to which men in high public life are subjected.

"He was one of 10 governors of Connecticut elected from New London county—a list of illustrious names including the two Winthrops and Gurdon Saltonstall, the two Trumbulls and William A. Buckingham—and he maintained the worthy standard of heroic days of the past for integrity and devotion to the public good.

"He lived in the days of the aggressive democracy of the regime of Grover Cleveland and had much to do with moulding political opinion in Connecticut in that time. The honors of political preferment came to him early in youth, and he was destined, in his old age, to outlive early all of his contemporaries in the public service. He was first chosen governor in 1882—the era of George D. Robinson and Benjamin F. Butler in Massachusetts politics. How remote that day now seems as we realize that but five of the ex-governors of the Bay State are now living!

"Connecticut has numerous times been of significant influence in national politics."

WOODROW WILSON'S FUNERAL SERVICE STATELY IN ITS SOMBER SIMPLICITY

Rites of the Ceremony Were Non-Sectarian—President and Mrs. Coolidge and Members of the Cabinet Attended the Service—While Hushed Crowds Thronged the Streets the Body Was Borne to the Vault Without Music or Pomp—Only Members of the Wilson Family Were Present at the Actual Entombment—Mrs. Wilson Sobbed as She Left the Crypt—Service in the Chapel Closed With Chanting of the Recessional Hymn, "The Strife is O'er, the Battle Done."

Washington, Feb. 6.—(By The A. P.)—A bugle, calling softly in the fading day, told that Woodrow Wilson had passed today down "the way of peace" to his earned and honored rest.

It sang the same soldier requiem that once before, at the lips of the same loyal comrade, it sang to lull America's unknown to his sleep in glory. And as the bugle called, out over the hills that look down on the city, a stricken woman turned away from the entrance of the stone crypt down in the dim chapel, leaving her dead to the mercy of God.

One Staunch Friend.

At the end, there still stood beside the vault one staunch friend of the dead president, a friend who had battled death for him to the bitter end, who had shared in the great days of triumph, the bitter days of disappointment even as now he stood to render the last loyal service. Not until the great slab of stone had been swung back to close the vault did Dr. Grayson end the vigil he has kept with Woodrow Wilson for more than a half score of years.

Tonight the sombre casket of black steel lies in the western niche of the great vault below Bethlehem chapel. Above, towering from the hillside, looms the gray mass of the cathedral. Below, the lights of the city, that has turned from its day of sorrow to the crowding cares of life, twinkle through the dark of an overcast night.

Blossoms on Casket.

And on that casket, where the great dead lies alone at last for his endless rest, beside the plate that sets forth only his name and the days of his birth and death, there still lies the handful of soft hued blossoms that were the last touching gift of the grief-worn widow.

Distant rumbling of saluting guns in the cloud darkened dawn ushered in the day when the nation would pay to Woodrow Wilson the simple tribute that he had claimed of it. The busy life of the capital verged on for a few hours before its course was checked in the last moments of silent respect for the dead. But to the door of the American home and into the dim chapel where the last rites would be paid, poured an endless stream of flowers that banked and overflowed every space with tender beauty. The names of kings and the great of the earth were on those tributes, and the names of loyal, humble friends and comrades.

Avenue Banked With People.

As the hour of the double services drew on, thousands took their places along the way from house to chapel to stand long in the chill air, unmindful of the flurries of snow and rain that beat about them. The wide avenue over which the dead war president would make his last journey was banked with people and kept clear of traffic until he should have passed.

Before the house, across the street, a solid rank of people had gathered before the first of those who would join with the family in the home service had arrived. They stood oblivious of cold, waiting to bare their heads a moment. Opposite them the guard of honor came to a stand in rank before the house—soldiers, sailors and marines.

President and Mrs. Coolidge.

Singly and in groups the little company that could be admitted to the house came and passed within. Thus came President and Mrs. Coolidge, the honor guard saluting as their commander-in-chief passed to stand beside the bier of a dead colleague. Thus came others who had stood shoulder to shoulder with Woodrow Wilson in his days of greatness and came also those few humble ones who could not be forgotten at such a moment, the faithful friends of the old days.

Within, on the second floor of the house, flowers were everywhere. They covered the walls and sent their soft fragrance down from every niche and corner. There are three rooms and a short hallway on this floor, the living rooms of the house. Wide doors had been opened to make them one room and that all who should be present at this intimate service in the home privacy of the dead man loved might at least hear what was said.

In the study, where a great vacant chair before the fireplace stood untouched since last he had sat there to ponder in the warm glow, the casket had been set. On the walls about clustered the old, trusty friends of many years, books ranking row on row from floor to ceiling save in the spaces where old pictures made up the funeral party. They were taken in the slow moving row of waiting cars and gradually the funeral train reached down to Massachusetts avenue and swung around to the right for its slow journey up to the cathedral.

There are few houses along the broad street in its two-mile tree-lined length to the cathedral. Police and soldiers and marines were strung along the bitter grief of the widow and daughters.

"Now unto Him that is able to keep you from falling, and present you faultless before the presence of His glory with exceeding joy;

"To the only wise God, our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever more, amen."

As the solemn words were spoken, the clock chimed the quarter hour and the simple, home service of Woodrow Wilson, plain American, had been said as he wished it said.

Guard of Honor.

Into the room came eight men from the honor guard, their sun-tanned, youthful faces set in solemn recognition of the dignity and honor of the place that had been given them. They stood soldierly and erect a moment beside the black casket upon which note law the cluster of orchids, Mrs. Wilson's favorite flowers, the flowers her dead husband often had sent her in the other glad days. The soldier, sailor and marine comrades stooped and raised the fallen chieftain to bear him out for his last journey.

Outside, the other men of the guard had double lined the short way across the sidewalk to the waiting hearse. As the house door swung back and the three clergymen stepped out to take their places beside the hearse door, up and down the steep narrow street the multitude which had waited long for this brief glimpse, uncovered in the chill air. The men of the guard stood at stiff salute, and their comrades bore the casket down through the double rank and lifted it gently into the hearse.

Mrs. Wilson Heavily Veiled.

Behind the casket came Mrs. Wilson in deepest black, with a thick veil guarding her sadness from curious eyes. She leaned on her brother's arm and was helped into a waiting car that moved off at once down the hill behind the hearse. The honor guard was formed in rank on each side.

Next from the house came William McAdoo. The daughters of the dead president were supported on his arms as he helped them to the car awaiting them. Behind these came the other members of the family, the brother and the nephew, and those less closely kin to the dead. There was but one vacancy in the immediately family circle left by the place Mrs. Sayre, the three daughters, and her husband would have filled had time permitted their arrival.

Behind the family came President and Mrs. Coolidge, heading the group of distinguished men and old comrades who

The Story of the Six Bakers

Now their Master Loaf—a favorite with more than 150,000 New England housewives—can grace your table

AT the time they came together each was known in his own community for the good bread he baked. Each in a home-loving New England town had for years been making bread that pleased the most critical.

And, as people do who are engaged in the same work and have the same ideals about it, these six bakers came to know each other. Talk, when occasionally one or two of them met, naturally drifted to favorite methods each had for making his bread good—just as friendly housewives compare their recipes and tell each other little secrets of good cooking.

Then the idea came to them. Each had an ideal—an ideal of a perfect bread. Couldn't they come much nearer their ideal if they got together—all six of them—and of their common knowledge worked out a recipe and a baking method for their bread?

They could and they did. The result was the Master Loaf. In White Rose, their Master Loaf, you have the pure cream of the combined experience, skill, and ideals of these six successful bakers.

It found favor at once—this Master Loaf—not only in the original six towns but in an ever widening area.

Today more than 150,000 New England homes serve White Rose, the Master Loaf of the Six Bakers.

For the Master Loaf is a home loaf. The ingredients are the kind you yourself would use for a most particular baking, each one the finest of its kind: Pillsbury flour, Domino Sugar, Diamond Crystal Salt, Swifts's best shortening, plenty of Libby's milk, filtered water and Fleischmann's Yeast. Only the richest and purest ingredients mixed and baked with the kind of care a good housewife gives to her cooking.

It's like homemade—firm and substantial, not fluffed up. It's well done—no soggy spots—and it keeps moist and fresh. It slices cleanly—wafer thin if you like—no torn crust or ragged crumb. And you've only to look at its deep rich brown crust—you've only to sniff its sweet aroma—to anticipate the rich flavor that has made White Rose, the Master Loaf of the Six Bakers, a favorite with people who love good food.

The fame of the Master Loaf has gone abroad out of New England. People who ate it there wanted it at home; neighboring cities wanted it.

But the Six Bakers have been cautious about extending the territory they serve. Their growth must not disturb the careful routine of their bakeries. The bread must never fall off in quality. For every month the Six Bakers continue to meet together to study their loaf—to see to it that the standard is never lowered.

Now for the first time White Rose, the Master Loaf of the Six Bakers, is being served to the people in Norwich. Your grocer has it. Ask for it tomorrow—the loaf with the pleasant checked wrapper, like a fresh, clean tea towel.

Then you yourself may judge of the goodness of White Rose, the Master Loaf of the Six Bakers—the loaf that is a favorite in more than 150,000 New England homes.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

As delightful an afternoon as the Killingly Women's club have experienced in a long time was provided Wednesday by Miss Ellenor Cook of Hartford, in a recital of Russian, Czecho-Slovakian and Jugo-Slovakian folk songs, in the assembly hall of Killingly High school. The recital was in costume—the costumes worn by Miss Cook having been acquired by her while she was visiting and observing in the countries whose folk songs she so splendidly interpreted. Miss Cook was assisted by Miss Ruth Hazen, pianist, her playing giving an added touch of artistic beauty to an especially pleasing entertainment.

Holders of the first preferred stock of the Connecticut Mills, Inc., were delighted Wednesday to learn that checks had been sent out paying five of the seven back dividends on that issue of stock of the big corporation. The dividends paid are quarterly ones at the rate of $1.75 per share—on a basis of 7 per cent.—so that each first preferred stockholder is receiving $4.75 on every share outstanding.

This evidence of stability of the company coming so soon after the acquiring of a majority—and therewith company control—of the Class A common stock has already produced a most reassuring effect, and the prospect that in due time the company will pay all the accumulated dividends not only on the first preferred, but also on the second preferred stock on which no dividends have been received for about three years.

Production at the plant here while not up to the tremendous output attained during the war years, when the mills were running night and day, is at the present time highly encouraging. The Connecticut Mills is a big industrial asset to Danielson and good news relative to it is not only good news for the stockholders, but also for the employes and all of those who benefit indirectly from the prosperity it contributes so largely to maintaining in this town.

At a session of the town court on Wednesday, Joseph Matulewski was presented to answer to a charge that he had assaulted Andrew Kitilijka on November 2. He was found guilty and fined $1.00 and actual costs.

Another case disposed of at Wednesday's session was that of John Natorski, or Jankowski, of Goodyear, at whose place about 20 gallons of moonshine and a still were seized Tuesday. On a reputation count the man was fined $50 and on a charge of keeping with intent to sell another $100, with costs, a total of $187.05, which he paid. The accused is an old man.

While Danielson's walks and streets were coated Wednesday with a chewed up blanket of ice, trees, poles and wires being also heavily encased, there was very little ice of this kind at Putnam, where sleet of the consistency of coarse sand covered the ground to a depth of several inches. At East Killingly the ice storm was more than double as severe as in Danielson and ice conditions to the south, especially in the vicinity of Sterling and over the state highway route through that place into the villages of the Pawtuxet Valley, were still worse. At Ekonk hill wires snapped off under the weight of ice and along the state highway route mentioned automobilists who got an early start Wednesday morning found the road blocked by fallen trees and telephone poles. These had to be pushed aside or cut away before the route was opened sufficiently to let any traffic through, according to reports brought in by motoring parties arriving here.

The ice storm in its destructiveness proved to be streaky, as is the case with many such weather disturbances. It was heavier in some sections than in other places only three or four miles away. Places in high locations seemed to be the worst hit.

There was practically no relief from the grip of the ice during Wednesday. The wind continued to cling in the northeast, out of which quarter it has blown since Sunday, and the temperature persistently remained below the freezing point throughout the day, so by late afternoon the going was not so bad, though nothing to boast about.

But with the inconveniences the storm brought there was something of good. Ice cutting days were brought nearer to hand. It began to look Wednesday as if the harvest by the companies that supply the borough is right in the forefront.

A deputy collector of internal revenue will bet at this institution Feb. 25th to 27th inclusive to assist you without charge in filing your income tax return. The Windham County National Bank, Danielson, Conn.—adv.

Wednesday morning at 8.30, the funeral of Mrs. Mary Collins was held from her home on Main street with services at St. James' church at 9 o'clock. Rev. Joseph Deschaud, M. S., Rev. Charles Kirby, M. S., and Rev. F. X. Richards, M. S., were officers of the solemn high mass of requiem. Relatives from various sections of eastern Connecticut and from points in Rhode Island and many friends were in attendance. Rev. Ignatius Kost, pastor of St. Joseph's church at Dayville, in which parish Mrs. Collins was a resident for years, occupied a place in the sanctuary. The bearers were Thomas Gannon, Frank Connelly, John McManus, James McGuire, Eugene Vetter and James Monohan. The body was entombed at St. Joseph's cemetery in Dayville. Louis E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Fiske, in the Mashentuck district, Wednesday afternoon at one o'clock, funeral services for their infant son, Harold E. Fiske, were conducted by Rev. Walter R. Williams of the Westfield Congregational church. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

Consideration by the Chamber of Commerce of the petition of the clerks for a Thursday half-holiday throughout the year, excepting at the Christmas holiday season, will have to wait until next week. No meeting of the chamber was held Tuesday evening, because of the storm, and adjournment, it was stated Wednesday, was until next Tuesday evening.

Insofar as anything that had happened up to Wednesday noon would indicate, taxpayers of the town of Killingly are quite well satisfied with their assessments as fixed by the board of assessors. At least up to that time only one taxpayer of all those in the town had appeared before the board of relief to talk about getting a reduction. The board is meeting practically throughout this month.

William McDermott left Wednesday for Louisville, Ky., where he expects to be located for some time to come with a concern with which he has been employed for several years.

No meeting of the Treble Clef club was held Wednesday evening, the regular meeting night, but a rehearsal is scheduled for Wednesday evening of next week.

Judge James N. Tucker recalled that four years ago this week there came an ice storm much like the one of Tuesday night that was the forerunner of nearly seven weeks of as rough and cold weather as this section has experienced in more than half a century.

Skiing came into its own here Wednesday. Skates, too, were employed by some of the young people in sliding down the ice-coated hills where they were at play.

John B. Lucas remains at a Boston hospital receivin gtreatment. Mrs. Lucas and her daughters are making weekly visits to Boston. After their most recent visit they reported Mr. Lucas slightly better, but still very seriously ill.

Henry B. West of Springfield was a visitor with friends in Danielson on Wednesday.

Stocks of tire chains began to move rapidly Wednesday, after one of the slowest seasons in years for this commodity.

The Baltic Wanderers met the Service Battery team at basketball in the state armory Wednesday evening, as told in the sporting news this morning.

It is stated that the drive against the moonshine makers will be continued with vigor in towns in this section. Officials are a unit and enthusiastic about these prosecutions, and rightfully for the stuff is little less than rank poison, and the sale of it is really a crime against humanity as well as being in violation of the law.

The local lines of the Connecticut company were clear of ice Wednesday after one of the toughest battles its crews have had in a long time in fighting against this sort of impeder of traffic. At times late Tuesday afternoon and early Tuesday evening there was from two to three inches of ice on the rails, and the overhead also was covered.

Offerings of souvenirs in stocks of Danielson stores recall that St. Valentine's day is only a week away.

The town clock was right twice during Wednesday at 10.43—forenoon and night. The clock stopped at that time Tuesday night, and this fact was charged against the ice storm beating against the faces of the Monk most exposed to the storm.

The members of the Roundabout club are to meet Friday with Mrs. L. S. Ingalls.

PUTNAM

Announcements were received here this (Thursday) morning of the marriage in New York Wednesday evening of Malcolm M. Willey and Miss Nancy D. Boyd of Brooklyn, N. Y. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Boyd.

The bride, a graduate in the class of 1923, Barnard college, is engaged as a research statistician with the National Industrial Conference board, New York. Her engagement to Mr. Willey was announced during the past summer.

Mr. Willey, son of Mrs. Helen M. Willey of this city, is a member of the faculty of Dartmouth college, in the department of sociology. He is a graduate of Putnam High school, of Clark university, Worcester, and Columbia university, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Willey went to Hanover, N. H., following the wedding, and are now enjoying the winter carnival being held at Dartmouth. Mrs. Willey is to continue in her position in New York until next fall.

The common council did not accept the resignation of Prosecuting Attorney J. F. Carpenter, re-appointed the past month to fill the office for another year. Instead it tabled the matter and, upon the suggestion of Alderman Berthiaume, appointed a committee of the council to confer with Mr. Carpenter, with a view to having him reconsider and withdraw the resignation. Alderman Berthiaume announced that he had talked with Mr. Carpenter and believed that he can be induced to reconsider.

Relative to the arduous duties attached to filling the office of prosecuting attorney there was more or less discussion Wednesday relative to appointing an assistant prosecutor, a post now vacant by reason of the present common council failing to fill it when appointments for this year and next were made in January. In the present situation there is the possibility of appointing an assistant and in this connection the name of Peter Gardner was heard Wednesday. Mr. Gardner is the city health officer and also serves as probation officer.

Mr. Carpenter's letter of resignation was as follows:

To the Mayor and Common Council:

Gentlemen:—I hereby tender my resignation as prosecuting attorney for the city of Putnam, the same to take effect as soon after next Tuesday, February 5, as my successor can qualify.

I am truly sorry not to continue with the office.

The police force is ideal, and I am indebted to many courtesies from them, and I think each and every member of the police force and myself have worked harmoniously and have a kind regard for each other.

The fact is I am over tired. January has been a strenuous month and I have had to neglect my private business and it begins to seem that when I work the hardest for the city I accomplish the least results.

I especially thank the mayor and the several members of the common council for their uniform courtesy to me, and their apparent appreciation of what the police and I have endeavored to accomplish.

My very kindest regards to you all and my assurance that I will always work for the interests of the city.

I remain very truly yours,

JOHN F. CARPENTER.

Also featuring the meeting of the common council was the message of Mayor Victor Chapdelaine, this message marking the outset of his second term as chief executive. Mayor Chapdelaine said he appreciated the responsibilities of his office and had done his utmost to eliminate all partizan feeling. His message reviewed the accomplishments of the past year and various departments to the city's activities, especially as to installing the filteration plant for the city's water supply. The mayor complimented the police on the excellent record made and of the manner in which, cooperating with the prosecuting attorney's office, many minor difficulties and misunderstandings that might have means business for the court were adjusted without burden to the city. Praise also was contained in the message for the good work done by the fire department and also for the fine work of the health officer.

A request, through Alderman Desire Labbe of the fire committee, was received by the meeting for an order to purchase 20 rubber coats and 20 pairs of boots for the fire department. This request brought an inquiry if similar furnishings had not been supplied the department last year. Chief Engineer Ralph E. Thurston, who was present, explained that coats and boots have a remarkable tendency to disappear from the fire department equipment. The coats and boots may be lettered with red paint to definitely establish them as property of the fire department and of the city, but in some strange manner they do disappear, and yet they are never seen worn by anyone about the streets on a rainy day.

Practically all the property owners on Mill street petitioned the council to have the street laid out and provided with sewers and lights. It was explained in connection with this petition that City Engineer George Perry is now engaged in making a layout of this street, and it appears that the improvements asked will come as a matter of course.

The police report for the month showed that there were 26 arrests in Putnam during January. Of these arrested 18 were sent to jail. Ten doors were reported by the police as found open during the month. Tramps to the number of 39 were lodged at the police station during January. The fines and costs, chiefly from liquor cases, amounted to $1666.34, a fine start in the court finances for the new year.

Sealed bids for the contract of carrying prisoners committed to Brooklyn jail from the Putnam city court were received and Alphonse Dumas was awarded the job. His bid was $4 a trip. A competing bidder was Peter Gardner, who has carried the prisoners down during the past year. His bid was $3.50 for carrying 4 single prisoner, $1.00 additional for a trip with two prisoners and 50 cents additional for the third and all other prisoners above two. The council members believed that the flat rate bid submitted by Mr. Dumas would be cheaper for the city during the course of a year.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Otis Fox and Mr. and Mrs. William A. Wheaton are in New York, where Messrs. Fox and Wheaton have been attending during the week a meeting of the Northeastern Lumbermen's association, at the Hotel Pennsylvania. They are expected to return here Friday.

It was recalled here Wednesday that Rev. Hubert Dahme, the Bridgeport priest, who was mortally wounded by an assassin this week and died Tuesday, was, during a summer period about 26 years ago, at St. Mary's parish, in this city during the absence in Europe of Rev. Fr. Van Jon Neort, for many years pastor here. At that time Father Dahme had been only recently ordained. He was an exceedingly scholarly man, of unusual mental attainments.

William E. Penny, who has been the plant engineer for the Manhasset Manufacturing company and formerly was head of the machine department at the State Trade School here, left Wednesday to take up his new duties as assistant to the plant engineer on design and equipment following up work at the Durant automobile plant at Elizabeth, N. J. Mr. Penny had been a resident here for eight years, five years of this period being spent at the State Trade school. Prior to coming to Putnam he had been a department head at the State Trade school in Bridgeport and also had experience as a machinist in the plant of the Locomobile company in Bridgeport, and with the H. H. Babcock company at Watertown, N. Y.

Miss Katherine Byrne, member of the executive committee of the McKinley association in Connecticut, will be in Hartford today (Thursday) attending the McKinley banquet to be held in that city. Wednesday Miss Byrne was at Worcester attending a conference of republican leaders in the New England states, the conference followed by a banquet at the Bancroft hotel. Miss Byrne is a member of the republican women's state central committee for this district.

John J. O'Brien, principal of Israel Putnam school, was notified on Wednesday morning of the death of his father at Hingham, Mass.

Miss Louise Rivard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rivard, died on Wednesday morning at their home here. Miss Rivard succumbed to septic poisoning which developed from a scratch she received on her finger when she threw away a small bottle which she happened to pick up for inspection. Her death came as a shock to her relatives and many friends. Miss Rivard formerly was engaged in the millinery business here. She was a member of the chamber of commerce. She is survived by her father and mother, three brothers, Joseph and Godias, both of this city, and Albert, who is in Vermont, and by two sisters—Mrs. Alexander Gilman of Putnam and Mary, who is in Montreal.

Secretary John H. Corbett of the Windham County Y. M. C. A. has caused to be issued a new publication the "Y" County News. The following of special interest appears in the initial issue:

At the last meeting of the Windham County Y. M. C. A. committee, W. E. Moss, chairman of Camp Woodstock, the tri-county camp of the Y. M. C. A.'s of Hartford, Tolland and Windham counties, reported that the trustees had arranged with G. H. Gilpatric for the purchase of the beautiful camp site on Black Pond where Camp Woodstock is located. The purchase price of the property is $5,000 over $1,000 of which has already been subscribed by several friends of Camp Woodstock. Plans are being made to secure the balance of the purchase price, also funds for the erection of tent houses, a dining hall and a club house on the lake front at an early date. All three of the counties are planning to provide their proportionate shares of funds for the development of this project.

MAKES FAT PEOPLE SLIM

New York Physician Perfects Harmless Method of Reducing Weight.

The loss of as much as a pound of excess fat a day with no harmful results is the record made by many patients of Dr. R. Newman, a licensed practicing physician of 286 Fifth Avenue, New York, who announces that he has perfected a treatment which has quickly rid fat people of excess weight. What is more remarkable is the Doctor's statement that he has successfully treated thousands of patients for fat reduction without change of diet or unnecessary exercise. It is also said that fat people who suffer from chronic rheumatism, gout, asthma and high blood pressure obtain great relief from the reduction of their superfluous flesh. Realizing that this sounds almost too good to be true, the Doctor has offered to send without charge to anyone who will write him, a free trial treatment to prove his claims, as well as his "Pay-when-reduced" plan. If you want to rid yourself of superfluous fat, write him today, addressing Dr. R. Newman, 286 Fifth Avenue, New York City. Dept. B-35.

A 30 minute ride will win you to the new Essex. And you will join the legions who know this new Six, that is built by Hudson, in saying it provides ideal transportation.

It continues the well known Essex qualities of economy and reliability. It adds a smoothness of performance which heretofore was exclusively Hudson's. Both cars are alike in all details that count for long satisfactory service at small operating cost.

Steering is like guiding a bicycle. Gears shift easily. Care of the car calls for little more than keeping it lubricated. For the most part that is done with an oil can.

Fuel economy is impressive. Oil consumption is unusually low and tire mileage surprisingly high.

The New Essex is backed by a service policy that keeps maintenance down to the minimum.

CUTTING THE TAXES.

Within the year it has been pointed out that there could be no expectation that the Mellon plan of tax reduction could go into effect this year, since it would be impossible to put through such legislation and make provisions for the changes inveived before the time fixed for tax payment next month. That statement was entirely correct, but there is nothing that stands in the way of cutting the existing income tax this year so that the taxpayers will be relieved of about 25 per cent of what they otherwise would pay. This would of course be entirely aside from the cut that is proposed by the Mellon plan which would be effective next year. The reduction this year, however, has received the approval of Secretary Mellon who states that it can be met without serious confusion in the treasury department.

It can be appreciated that if the treasury situation is such that the income tax payers can be given a reduction that will be effective at once it is all the more desirable that it should be done. It is a plan that has developed as the result of the efforts to depart from the general plan of the Mellon tax reduction arrangement. It will mean, if adopted, that the Mellon plan will not be prevented from going into effect if the proper sanction by congress is given, but additional benefit in the way of lowered taxes will be obtained a year sooner.

The idea of getting away from the tax burdens that have been carried by the people of this country for a long time is in keeping with widespread sentiment. There is certainly no desire to have taxes increased and if they can be cut there is no wish to have them maintained at present levels. There is of course nothing like action when it comes to providing the relief that is needed and desired. With the government revenue such that it is no longer necessary to exact as large taxes it is time the taxpayers received the benefit of some relief. It will be more gratifying to know that measures underway to such an end have been adopted.

M'ADOO'S HEARING.

Enough has been heard of the oil leases and the schemes of the oil magnates to get the benefit of such influences as men of prominence might exert to create interest in each and every session of the investigating committee.

Having asked for a hearing in order that he may put forth his side of the matter, William G. McAdoo may or may not lend interest to the inquiry. He is of course concerned at the present time over his own welfare. As a candidate for the presidency of the United States he has been drawn into the oil puddle in a manner which while not disclosing any other than a business relationship with E. L. Doheny and his enterprises nevertheless establishes such a connection as to do no good to his endeavors to get the democratic nomination. There are claims that it has killed his chances.

Whether it has or not, Mr. McAdoo insists upon presenting his side of the matter, and he is of course entitled to his day before the committee. Possibly he will be able to show that he hasn't received as much money from the oil interests as has been stated. He may be able to point out that his services were rendered entirely after he left public office, though he may recognize that it was because he had been high in government circles that he was picked for the work that he was. He may be able to convince the committee that his oil bath has had no effect, that the fact that his firm is still retained as counsel for Mr. Doheny's business is no more than lawyer and client, and he may have no great difficulty in convincing his hearers that future views and conduct would not be influenced in any way by the fees he has received.

But whether he can do all these things there is no question but what he should have the chance to set forth his position. He is interested for other reasons than as counsel for the oil interests. His endeavor now must be to prevent any break in the confidence which has existed in him.

PROGRESS IN MEXICO.

More or less uncertainty has surrounded the news relative to the progress of the revolution in Mexico and the manner in which the Obregon forces were dealing with it. Difficulty in getting the facts has been experienced. Claims that have been made by the respective sides have made it hard to understand just what was being accomplished. It was even the assertion of the revolutionists that the sale of arms to the Mexican government was advantageous to them for no sooner were they being placed in the hands of the government troops than they were turned over to the revolutionists through the desertion of the Obregon forces.

Consistent progress seems to have been made for the most part by the government's forces. They have gradually overcome the effects of the desertions and have made progress in regaining the important places that were lost. If it is so that the key to Vera Cruz has been captured, that that important port is about to be regained and that de la Huerta has departed, the conclusion seems justified that Obregon has made good progress toward victory, though the scattered revolutionary groups may continue to offer resistance and make trouble for some time. It is with the disorganized groups that Obregon has had marked success in dealing in the past and he certainly has lost no cleverness in that respect.

While it is too early to expect the end of the revolution in Mexico, it is to be hoped that it is not far off. For the good of Mexico the quicker the revolutionary outbursts can be suppressed the better. The attention of that country should be directed toward other things than fighting, while it is time that it gave its support to an established government and insisted upon respect for the constitution. De la Huerta undertook to assume control of the neighbor to the south by means of bullets instead of ballots. It was his act of disregarding constitutional methods that operated strongly against him, although he seemed to be satisfied that he had got or could get plenty of support in his undertaking.

THE BOK PRIZE WINNER.

Increased interest in the Bok peace plan is bound to be awakened in this vicinity because of the fact that the author, Dr. C. H. Levermore, is a native of eastern Connecticut. That fact is not enough to alter the opinions of those who have studied the matter, but it cannot fail to direct the attention of many hereabouts to a question that might not otherwise have been seriously considered.

The winner of the prize, regardless of his birthplace, is to be congratulated. That he is one who has devoted his life to a study of international peace through organization is not surprising. It was to be expected that it would be such an individual who would be in a position to set forth a plan that would command consideration. Dr. Levermore's plan is the product of 40 years' study. He readily acknowledges that it is a compromise plan calculated to bridge the differences between the advocates and opponents of the league of nations.

He has won a prize of unusual size, and one which he had no way of anticipating during the four decades that he has been devoting his efforts to wrestling with the problem. It is only natural that one so steeped in the subject should be determined to give his best to the carrying out of the plan. As one who has labored through various organizations in behalf of world peace he well understands the arguments that exist upon both sides of the league of nations. His judgment is good when he figures that if any plan can succeed it will be one involving a compromise, but undoubtedly he realises that there is a small chance that the senate will give its approval even to the compromise.

GHANDI'S RELEASE.

When the British government recognized the havoc that was being caused by the Ghandi activities in India it found it necessary to take prompt measures for their suppression. Plainly it was a case of going to the fountain head. The result was the arrest and conviction of Ghandi, who was striving for the overthrow of the Indian government and the setting up of an independent govvernment. For sedition the sentence of six years in prison was not a heavy one for a leader who was plotting the overthrow of the government. The aim was not so much to be severe as it was to check the work of this leader and bring about a disorganization of his forces. From the manner in which they have dispersed, it becomes evident that it was a one-man affair but with a large and constantly growing following.

Ghandi in prison meant the end of his influence. But even though it has been but about a year since he was imprisoned, the fact that he is suffering from a severe illness offered an admirable opportunity for the British government to end his period of punishment. Having established the fact that such tactics as he was engaged in would not be tolerated there is no desire to make of him a martyr. If he subsides, even as his followers seem to have, all will be well. Possibly he will regain his health and return to his old time efforts, but evidently the British consider it wise to take a chance that he will profit from his experience and cease to preach disloyalty. It is not improbable also that it is expected that the treatment of Ghandi will have its good effect upon others who, even though they may not be of Ghandi's capacity as a leader, can cause plenty of trouble among the people of a country like India.

HIS EDUCATED TOE

The 12-year-old strolled into his father. Yes, this must be the same boy. His father looked at peace with the world, puffing his long black cigar after a most satisfying dinner. It was now or never, probably.

"Say, dad, you were pretty good at drop kicking, weren't ya?"

"Well, Kenneth, modesty makes me refrain from shouting it from the housetops," said Kenneth's father "but if I were sufficiently urged I might sob out the bitter truth on your young shoulder. But why do you ask?"

"Oh, nothin' much. Only me an' Bud Abbot an' Timmy Purnell was practicin' in the vacant lot next door to Abbot's, an' we just got to talkin'. Say, you and Mr. Abbot used to play on the same team at college, didn't ya?"

"Yes, I reckon we did. Yessir—we played all right. Good old Hank Abbot—yes, we played in many a game together." His voice trailed off in a retrospective chuckle. Those were the good old days all right.

"Bud's dad thinks you were one of the best drop kickers the school ever had, all right, that's what he thinks," said the 12-year-old.

"That so? Hank Abbot say that? Well, well, good old Hank."

"Say, look, dad, do you believe in a fella getting a birthday present before his birthday—if it's real necessary—I mean—well, you know, fr instance take me, now."

"Whoa! Begin all over, son. Now suppose you tell me what's troubling your young, though fertile mind."

"Well, you see, it's this way. I'd really oughta have a football o' my own, dad. Lotsa times I could be practicin' kickin' and stuff, an' Bud can't be out—and he's got the football, ya know. Well, fr instance now, I'm gonna practice how to drop-kick all the time till I get to college, an I wanta be as good's you were, ya see, so no one couldn't hardly say I didn't live up to your record, or somethin'.

"Well, fr instance now, how can I get any practice in without a ball o' my own, so I wouldn't have to wait for Bud all the time? Well, my birthday's late in December, an' a football wouldn't hardly do any good then—till next year, I mean. So I thought maybe you'd kinda like to get my birthday present offa your mind anyway, an' maybe if you think sometimes it's a real good thing for a fella to have a birthday present before my birthday; see dad?"

Kenneth's father saw clearly. After all, why not—the kid might as well have it now. So old Hank Abbot thought he was one of the best drop-kicks the old school had ever had, eh?

When Kenneth's father arrived home he was carrying a large, square box tucked under his arm. "Well, old man," was the greeting, "how goes it?"

"I raked the lawn all up slick, 'n' burned the leaves 'n' everything, dad!" Kenneth was a bit breathless.

"Yes, I see you did, and it's just such demonstration of your industry as this, my boy, that makes me feel justified in presenting you with your birthday present now instead of making you wait till later for it, when it wouldn't do you any good till next year, maybe."

"Honest dad — honest injun, didja get me a football? Oh boy, oh gosh, why didncha tell me you were really gonna get it? Gee look—wait—I'll go down in the basement an' get my bicycle pump, 'n' we'll pump 'er up, huh?"

There was much weighty discussion over footballs and drop-kicking and the like that afternoon luncheon.

"By the way, Ken," said Kenneth's father, "when did Bud Abbot's father tell you he thought I was one of the best drop-kickers the school'd ever had?"

"Well, you see, dad, he didn't exactly say it, but I know he thinks it, cuz he told Bud that he was the only one that could drop-kick further'n you could—gosh this is a peachy football!"

And Kenneth was lost in reverie. Before him loomed beautiful visions of many conquests on the grid, when with his educated toe he would enter the portals of his dad's college.—Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Soldiers' Bonus

Mr. Editor: May I express a few words in your paper, concerning the soldiers' bonus question? Being a member of one of the largest veteran organizations in this city, I feel justified in giving a few points on that question. In the first place, the bonus is much talked of today especially by those who have taken part in the recent world war. Naturally enough everybody is interested to some extent. And now the question is, Will they get it? Being a veteran of the world war I am certainly in favor of it, inasmuch as being constantly amongst former service men in this city and state I have had the opinion of the majority of ex-service men and find that 90 per cent. are in favor of the government bonus. Most of them are the everyday working class of men, who would readily serve their country again if called upon. We understand, that there is an anti-bonus movement started in this city lately, which claims to be 100 per cent. Americanism. Its aims no doubt can properly afford much opposition. It is true, however, that the disabled veterans need better care, and all the help that we can secure, but why should the soldiers bonus be used for the disabled veterans, when the government provides compensation, hospitals, etc. readily, to those who are entitled to it? While I was overseas we were told by some high officials that when the Germans were licked and the job was finished, nothing would be too good for us. When we returned home, and nothing was right many of us were lucky enough to find a job to go to while many others found their jobs gone. Many of the states have given their boys a bonus in recognition of their services. Connecticut has not done so. But its large industries, factories and nearly all corporations did give their employees a bonus during the months were were over there doing our bit for $30 per month. Are we not entitled to some sort of compensation? We have already heard people say, that a soldiers' bonus bill if passed would only tax the people and that you and I would be paying for it. Not necessarily. There are many ways in which the money could be raised. We read that back in the revolutionary war Washington and his soldiers received a bonus from the government, whether of money or land. Was this recent world war of less importance? Perhaps I might say in ending that this item is no selfish thought or wish of my own, but the true feeling of the many young veterans of this city and state who still pledge themselves to one flag, one country and one language.

A VETERAN OF FOREIGN WARS
Norwich February 5, 1924.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Patrick Hastings, who has become Attorney General under the new Labor Government in Great Britain, has been described as one of the busiest counsel at the bar, rivalling in this respect some of the oldest and most eminent members of the legal profession. He is a Londoner, born in 1880, and was educated at the famous Charterhouse School. Twenty-five years ago he began his career as a mining engineer. He served with the British forces in the South African war in 1900 and 1901, and during the next two years occupied himself chiefly with journalism. Taking up the study of law, he was called to the bar of the Middle Temple in 1904. He quickly made a reputation as a junior counsel with a large practice, and was created a K. C. in 1919. He was elected a Labor member of the House of Commons two years ago and was re-elected last year.

Stories That Recall Others

Smart Young Woman

The fair young thing was making her first long trip alone and had been warned of wicked men and the many dangers that beset her path. She had to change cars and was much puzzled, so she said to a young man: "Sir, what train do I t ake?"

"Where are you going?" he inquired.

She glared icily and swept on to another. One of those dreadful men. This was repeated three times. Finally she asked the ticket man and when he asked where she was going she hesitated and then mildly said, "Boston."

He put her on the Boston train and just as it was drawing out of the station she leaned out of the window and shouted back: "Ha, ha! I fooled you. I'm going to New York."

Figures Can't Lie

Two little brothers, Lewis and Edward, whose ages were five and four, had just learned to count to 100.

Lewis, being of a studious mind, had begun to put "two and two" together, even at his tender age.

One day after some deliberation he came to his mother and proudly announced: "Mother, when I am 100 years old, Edward will only be 99."

SICK WOMAN MADE HAPPY

Entirely Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mart, Texas.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to build me up as I was all run-down, nervous and sick. I ached and hurt all over so that I was often compelled to go to bed, and I had to have most of my work done. No medicine seemed to help me until one of my neighbors who was taking the Vegetable Compound insisted on me trying a bottle of it. The medicine helped me from the first, and the best of all is that I can even sew again without that awful, nervous feeling I was used to having. And I used to take crying spells, with such a blue feeling that I cannot explain. Now all that has left me. I feel so cheerful, and I have gained in weight, sleep well and eat hearty. Oh! I wish I had words to express what this medicine has done for me! I am a housekeeper and do every thing from the sewing to the washing now and it doesn't hurt me. You may use my letter in any way you wish. I will be glad to help any suffering woman to the road of health and happiness."—Mrs. B. F. BRANNON, 404 Travis Ave., Mart, Texas

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

AMOY

Amoy has no movies.

Accustomed as we are to think of the motion picture as an invader of the most remote places of the world it is surprising when an American consul recommends their introduction in a busy, cosmopolitan port of China's coast.

"If you ever purchased narcissus bulbs or 'Irish lace' in one of the Chinese stores in almost any large American city, or ate in a Chinese restaurant, used the soy sauce and had preserved fruit for dessert, it is likely that you are a patron of Amoy's industries," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"Though Amoy has been impervious to the 'movies' she reached out to Holland for the bulbs which constitute an important export. An altruistic lady brought from Ireland the linen thread and patterns which set her women working at bobbin lace making. She has so many kinds of currency that trade is hampered by the difficulty of making definite exchange rates.

"In a morning's trading you might acquire the silver yen of Formosa, the Hongkong silver dollar, and the piaster of Indo-China, in addition to various kinds of paper money issued by Chinese and Japanese banks. When you want to deposit your change in an Amoy bank your account would be in terms of an extinct currency unit—the so-called Spanish dollar. And to save bookkeeping the bank will consider all your coin dollars as having the same value in relation to the hypothetical 'dollar' unit.

"Though it has a fine natural harbor and a strategic trade location opposite the middle of Taiwan (Formosa), Amoy suffers from its hinterland's poverty. Fukien, of which it is the port, is one of the least developed regions of eastern China. It is mountainous and its valleys once were fertile, but centuries of cultivation have exhausted their soil. Consequently Fukien's most stalwart sons emigrate to the Philippines, the Straits Settlements or to the Dutch East Indies. More than 80,000 have left annually, in recent years.

"Because the mountain ranges parallel the coast, rivers are short and the interior is inaccessible. There are practically are no roads. The principal lines of communication are narrow footpaths, raised a foot or so above the fields. One writer says, 'The only commissioner of their highways is the ceaseless thousands bearing their heavy burdens over them, from one generation to another.' There are no fences, and no signposts.

"Traveling along these paths one may observe primitive kinds of agriculture. Human backs bend over rude hoes. Occasionally a more progressive farmer will acquire a one-handled plow with a hardwood plowshare, and hitch it to one or the other of Fukien's two domestic animals, a water buffalo or a hybrid yak.

"Much of the agriculture land is held by clans and farmed on a community basis, with the head of the clan presiding over this ancient Soviet system.

"Railroads are lacking in Fukien. The Chinese started to build one from Amoy to Changchowfu, of which Amoy is the natural port, but trains run only 17 of the 32 miles between the two populous cities because a bridge has not been built across the Kiulungkiang river at Potham.

"Just fifty years ago Amoy shipped to the United States 7,500,000 pounds of tea in a single season. In 1899 it shipped 31,000 pounds, which was the last shipment. The decline in our importation is indicative of the decline in Amoy's tea trade. First, Formosa (Taiwan) surpassed the quality of the Fukien product. Then Amoy firms moved their tastern to Kiirun (Keelung), on the island, and for a time continued to store and ship the tea from Amoy. But the improvement and modernizing of Kiirun's harbor ended that practice."

DEMONSTRATION AND SALE OF National Sewing Machines

We are sole agents in Norwich and vicinity for National Sewing Machines, a dependable family Sewing Machine that is known from one end of the country to another. When buying a Sewing Machine it is well to consider the quality. If you will compare the quality of National Sewing Machines, with any other make, at the same or at much higher prices, you can easily see the superiority of the "National."

A CLUB IS NOW BEING FORMED

During this demonstration and sale, a Sewing Machine Club is being formed, each member being entitled to buy a Sewing Machine on the easy payment plan. Make an initial payment and the machine is immediately delivered to your home—the balance in easy payments in accordance with our club plan.

FIVE MODELS TO SELECT FROM

Winner $29.50
This is a good reliable Sewing Machine and in every respect compares most favorably with machines sold at much high prices. Special features are: High Arm, Double Lock Stitch, Automatic Gear Releasing Device, Automatic Bobbin Winder, Improved Stitch Regulator, Positive Steel Forged Four-motion Feed and Plate Tension equipped with Release. The case is a five-drawer semi-drop cabinet model, substantially built of a good grade of oak with a high varnish finish.

"P. & M. Special" $42.50
This is a five-drawer, open-front model and combines to a marked degree the desirable qualities of careful construction, elegant finish and great utility. It is constructed from selected oak and is supplied in a hand polished golden oak finish. It has an Automatic Lift—the head is raised to sewing position by means of a steel chain, automatic lifting device, a convenience to the operator.

National B $47.50
This is a well designed, four-drawer, drop front, automatic lift model. It should make a special appeal to those who appreciate simple, yet neat design. It is well constructed from the choicest of quarter-sawed oak and is finished in rich golden oak finish. It has an automatic lift—the head and drop front panel, are raised to sewing position by means of a tested steel chain automatic lifting device.

National Rotary $55.00
This is a strictly high grade, four-drawer, drop head automatic lift model. It is superior in both construction and finish to the great majority of Sewing Machines that are being sold by our competitors as "high grade" and at prices that offer no comparison. This model is made from selected quarter-sawed oak and is supplied in a rich golden oak finish.

National Two-Spool $65.00
This is a strictly high grade, six-drawer, drop head model. It is carefully constructed throughout from selected quarter-sawed oak and is supplied in a rich hand-rubbed golden oak finish that will appeal to the most discriminating. Special features are: Ball-bearing Pitman connections, Belt Retaining Guard, smooth running Casters.

National Electric $79.50
In addition to the foregoing five models, there is a National Electric Machine. Every day there is some new device placed on the market to use electrical power in relieving the housewife of work. Of all the articles that have recently been equipped with electrical power the sewing machine is the leader. The Electric Sewing Machine combines beauty with utility. It has all the advantages of an electric sewing machine, and when not in use converts into a small desk or stand.

We extend a general invitation to visit our Third Floor during this demonstration and learn about National Sewing Machines and the advantages of the club plan. A visit entails no obligation to buy.

SOPRANO AND CELLIST GIVE FINE PROGRAMME

Jean Bedetti, first cellist of the Boston Symphony orchestra, scored a triumph before a large audience at Slater hall Wednesday evening in the Slater hall musical course, and Olive Marshall, soprano, won warm favor that demanded several encores for one of which she gave by special request, With Verdure Clad, from The Creation, by Haydn. This came after her third group of songs and was given with such impressive appeal that a second encore was called for and she responded with, I Love You, by Grieg. After her second group of songs she was recalled for another number and delighted her audience with Leoni's Tally-Ho. Ola Gulladge at the piano, rendered sympathetic accompaniments. Miss Marshall showed a voice of much beauty of tone, flexible and well controlled, which she used with artistic feeling.

Mr. Bedetti scored with his audience with his first number and he drew spontaneous and insistent applause at every appearance. With wonderful bowing, a mastery of technique and a tone of wondrous warmth and beauty, his consummate skill brought him an ovation for every number. He made one change in his program, substituting by request Saint Saens's, The Swan, for the Locatelli Largo, which had been set for the first number of his second group.

He gave three encores during the evening, rendering Adagio (Cervetto) after his first appearance, and giving Spanish Dance (Granados) arranged by Kreissler, when he stirred his audience to insistent applause by his playing of The Bee (Shubert). The third encore came after his masterly work with Elfentanz (Popper) and he responded with Tarentalla, by the same author.

The following was the program:

I Chose a Rose ..... Stickles
The Shadders ..... Whiteley
The Red, Red Rose ..... Cottenet
Miss Marshall

Suite Ancienne ..... Breval

ELIZABETH ST. SCHOOL BOYS HOLD MEET

Enthusiasm ran high yesterday afternoon in the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium when the Elizabeth street grammar school lads, seventy-five strong, met for their preliminary athletic meet, to determine the school's best athletes who will later compete in a final meet between Greeneville, Broadway and Elizabeth street schools. It was a big day for the young athletes, and the athletic officials were kept on their metal to keep the youngsters busy with their stunts. One of the features of the afternoon and one that gained a round of applause from the boys was the rope-climbing of William Epps, a colored lad, who shinnied up the eighteen-foot rope in 7 4-5 seconds, which would be a good time for most of the "Y" seniors.

The boys making the best scores in the various events were as follows:

Rope Climb—Nathan Meyer 5.1 sec.; Wm. Epps 7.4; Harold Babbitt 8; Jos. Porthier 8.3; Jos. Sadinski 9.1; Floyd Jackson 10.

Standing Broad Jump—Fred Jackson 8.11, Harry Rossell 7.7, Jos. Porthier 7.4, Wm. Epps 7.4, Nathan Meyer 7.3, Ray Porthier 6.10, Harold Babbitt 6.9, L. Green 6.6, Leo Strumm 6.5.

Basketball Shooting—Milton Sakowitz 7 sec., Telzonski, Alec Resnik, Sidney Blinderman, Louis Aldrich, Abraham Feldman, Donald Royce, Peter Parcheski, Wm. McGinnis, Fred Murphy, Ansell Tombari.

Potato Races—Boys qualifying in finals: Stanley Trebenski, Greer, Jno Parcheski, Leonard Boag, Jacob Waitz, Russell Aldrich, Nathan Meyer, Richard Worthy, Joseph Porthier, Leo Strumm, Milton Sakowitz, Ansel Tombari, Louis Hasan, Louis Green, Donald Royce.

Practically all the boys participated in each event, all being given thorough try-outs to make the big team for the finals, which will be announced by Principal J. B. Stanton. A beautiful trophy cup is being contributed by J. A. Ferguson, the Main street jeweler, and the cup will shortly be placed on exhibition in Ferguson's jewelry store on the square.

ARMORY DECORATIONS BEAUTIFUL SETTING FOR AUTOMOBILE SHOW

Forty automobiles of various well known and popular makes are being exhibited at the automobile show which opened Wednesday evening at the armory under the auspices of the Norwich Automobile Dealers' Association and the local National Guard companies. During the evening several hundred people visited the armory to inspect the 1924 touring, coupe, sedan and sport models being shown by a dozen local dealers. The armory has been beautifully decorated in a way that surpasses anything of the kind ever carried out at a local auto show. The drill shed ceiling is entirely covered with a white body and panels of pigeon blue. A large basket entwined with southern smilax and American Beauty roses is suspended from the center of the ceiling. The walls are covered in blue, white and gold and there are elaborate electrical effects. Facing the entrance to the hall is an illuminated fountain and arranged around the dealers' exhibit spaces are handsome baskets of flowers. White columns mark the spaces for the dealers and over the columns is lattice work trimmed with smilax and roses. The front of the balcony is covered with heavy blue plush cloth made in France. Gold stars are attractively arranged on the balcony decorations. The decorating was done by a Hartford concern while the floral decorations were in charge of Hawkins, the Florist.

Throughout the evening a concert programme was given by Herb Smith's orchestra, located in the balcony. As added features there were solos by Mrs. Mary Mathieu and Arthur Roy, both of Willimantic. The orchestra will provide a programme each evening of the show which will conclude Saturday night and there will also be special features each night.

Just at the left of the entrance Julian L. Williams is showing three models of the Buick. One is the Brougham sedan, five passenger. The others are touring cars, the four cylinder and the six cylinder models. All are equipped with four wheel brakes. Mr. Williams is personally in charge of the exhibit and is assisted by Kenneth Webb and William Bottomly.

William F. Bailey of Bailey's Garage is showing the Flint and the Star. The Flint, a new car recently put on the market, is shown in two models. One, the five passenger sedan and the other is the five passenger touring car. A Star special sport touring car finished in baby blue is on exhibit. Mr. Bailey is in charge of the space and is being assisted by John Gorman. Mr. Bailey intended to show several other models of the Star and Durant machines but owing to the lack of space is limited to three cars.

The new Paige seven passenger touring model is shown by Louis H. Maples, the local agent. Mr. Maples is also exhibiting the Jewett Brougham and the Jewett five passenger sedan.

Among the attractive exhibits is that of William R. Frisbie of the Reo agency. He is showing a five passenger Reo touring car tipped up on its side with the bottom of the crank case removed. There are also shown two models of the five passenger Reo sedan, one equipped with 33x4 1-2 tires and the other with the much talked of balloon tires, 32x6. Mr. Frisbie is in charge of the space and is assisted by George Chase.

Frank G. Pieper of the Armory Garage has three models of the Gardner car on exhibition. He is showing the radio special sedan, radio special touring and a maroon closed car. A feature of his exhibit is the Gardner engine set up on a block for public inspection.

Two models of the Jordan are shown by the W. S. Williams Motor Co. They are the Jordan Victoria six cylinder four passenger closed car in simplex gray and the Jordan Blue Boy four passenger open car in simplex gray. Mr. Williams expects to have on exhibition today (Thursday) and for the remainder of the week the new Rollin five passenger sedan which is equipped with four wheel expanding brakes and balloon tires. Mr. Williams and W. Russell Baird are in charge of this exhibit.

The Jordan Auto Company of Norwich and Willimantic are showing three models of the Dodge car, the coupe, the sedan and the touring car, all attractive machines.

Both the four and six cylinder Nash are shown by Ring Bros. The four cylinder is the five passenger touring car and there are also shown the six cylinder four door coupe finished in maroon and the five passenger six cylinder touring.

Three Cadillacs are exhibited by the A. C. Swan Co. There is a seven passenger DeLuxe Suburban, a two passenger coupe and a five passenger coupe. E. W. Jewett and A. G. Lillibridge are in charge.

The Hupmobile standard sedan, club sedan and five passenger touring cars are shown by C. V. Pendleton. Mr. Pendleton is in charge of the Hupmobile space and is being assisted by A. M. Mitchell of the L. & H. Motor Co., of Hartford.

Ernest White is showing the Hudson and Essex cars. He has on exhibit the five passenger six cylinder Hudson sedan and the five passenger six cylinder Essex coach.

The much talked of Chrysler, a six cylinder car just put on the market, is shown by John Herbert who also handles the agency for the Maxwell cars. The Chrysler is the five passenger sedan. There are also seen here the Maxwell sport touring, attractively finished in gray and a five passenger Maxwell sedan.

Another car new to Norwich is the Westcott made by the Westcott Motor Car Co., of Ohio. The Westcott is being shown by the Rinella-Leeney Motor Co., and the model on exhibition is the demi-sedan, six cylinder. Although new to Norwich the Westcott has been on the market for a number of years. The Rinella-Leeney company are also showing models of the well known Velie. They have on exhibition the Velie, model 56 sedan and the Velie, model 56 five passenger touring. A feature of their exhibits is the Velie engine on a block showing the oiling system at work. Mr. Rinella, Michael D'Atri, and Joseph Gendron are in charge of the exhibit and are being assisted by A. C. Rowe of the New England Velie Co.

The Williams Tire and Supply Co., Heebner Bros., cylinder grinding and machine work, and William E. Shanley, radiator specialist, have booths near the entrance to the main floor.

The committees in charge of the show are as follows:

General committee—W. S. Williams, W. R. Frisbie, A. G. Lillibridge and F. L. Rinella.

Advertising committee — Rolland Jordan, Ernest White and John J. Herbert.

Entertainment committee — William F. Bailey and Frank S. Pieper.

Decorating committee—Julian L. Williams, Bernard Ring and C. V. Pendleton.

W. S. Williams is president of the auto dealers' association, William F. Bailey, vice president, Julian L. Williams, treasurer, and Frank L. Rinella, secretary.

The auto show will be open each afternoon and evening for the remainder of the week. The doors will open at 2 o'clock and will remain open until about 10.30 at night.

MASONIC MEMBERSHIP MADE 1,524 GAIN IN YEAR

The growth in membership in Masonry in this state the past year was a healthy one and there was manifested an evident desire on the part of young Masons to find some work to do in connection with the order, said Grand Master Arthur M. Brown of Jewett City, in his address before the grand lodge of Connecticut, F. & A. M., assembled for its one hundred and thirty-sixth annual communication at the Masonic temple in Hartford Wednesday.

Continuing the grand master said this desire on the part of men, young in Masonry, was praiseworthy and should be encouraged. "Although the actual exemplifying of the degrees in the lodge room may not furnish an opportunity to work for all those who may decide such opportunity, Masonry offers other broad fields of service which may well challenge the energies and abilities of us all. We have the duty of carrying out of the lodge room into the world the great principles of brotherly love, relief and truth—so beautifully taught within the lodge and so living and practicing these great principles, that our contact without fellow men everywhere shall be a blessing and an encouragement to them, and our fraternity become a tremendous force for good in this world, and a force of right living and right thinking. As I have come into contact with the Masons all over this state I have felt that they were coming more and more to recognize the great privilege of being Masons and the tremendous responsibility which such privilege entails."

Grand Lodge Opened

The Grand lodge was opened in ample form at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning by Grand Master Brown and associate officers. Prayer was offered by Rev. Alexander H. Abbott of Norwich grand chaplain.

The grand master appointed Grand Secretary George A. Kies of Hartford and Deputy Grand Secretary Harold E. Waldo of Glastonbury as the committee on credentials.

The address of the grand master followed the appointment of committees for the session and the reception of visitors from other grand jurisdictions.

In his address the grand master made reference to the death of Isaiah Baker, Jr., of Hartford, a trustee of Grand lodge more than 30 years; and to the death of Past Grand Senior Warden Arthur H. Brewer of Norwich.

On April 2, assisted by other officers of the Grand lodge, the grand master constituted Solar lodge, No. 131, at Chester. He laid the cornerstones of new Masonic temples in Stamford and West Hartford and dedicated new Masonic temples in Greenwich and Wethersfield. On August 27 he granted a dispensation for a new lodge in Stamford to be called America lodge.

The address summarized the reports of the nine district deputies. In the summary of the Fifth district mention is made of the new Masonic temple of Hiram lodge in Bloomfield, which the members are building themselves.

Raises Own Son

The grand master made many visitations which were, he said, "occasions of great personal pleasure." His own lodge, Mt. Vernon of Jewett City, gave him a reception on May 8, and on Jan. 3, 1924 he raised his elder son in Mt. Vernon lodge. He visited the Grand lodge of Rhode Island at its annual session May 21, and attended the centennial celebrations of St. Andrew's lodge of Winsted and Adelphi lodge of New Haven, the 125th anniversary of Eastern lodge of Willimantic and other anniversary occasions.

An event of great interest, in which the grand master with other grand masters had part, was the laying of the cornerstone of the George Washington Masonic National Memorial at Alexandria, Va., on November 1. The two previous days he attended the annual meeting of the Masonic Service association in Washington, D. C.

Grand Secretary's Report

Grand Secretary George A. Kies reported a membership on January 1, 1914, of 41,205, a net gain of 1,524. There were 2,295 candidates raised, 97 applicants affiliated, 41 reinstated and 185 demitted. There were 589 deaths.

The four lodges with the largest memberships are: Hartford, Hartford, 1,542; St. John's, Hartford, 1,286; Hiram, New Haven, 1,173. The five lodges raising more than 50 candidates were St. John's, Hartford, 114; Annawan, West Haven, 79; Center, Meriden, 57; Hartford, Hartford, 56; Adelphia, New Haven, 54; St. John's, Bridgeport, 53.

The receipts of the grand secretary's office were $112,813.42. He expressed appreciation in his report, for the kind wishes and courtesies extended him in March when he underwent an operation.

Officers Elected

The annual election of officers was held in the afternoon, with the election resulting as follows: Grand master, Winthrop Buck, Wethersfield; deputy grand master, Water T. Arnold, Meriden; grand senior warden, Arthur N. Nash, Pawcatuck; grand junior warden, Theodore Foster, Chester; grand treasurer, Joseph Buths, Hartford; grand secretary, George A. Kies, Hartford; grand senior deacon, Robert S. Walker, Waterbury; grand junior deacon, Harry C. Schofield, Stamford.

Grand Master Elect Winthrop Buck was raised in Pythagoras lodge, F. & A. M., of Old Lyme (then in Hamburg, Lyme), December 1, 1902. He affiliated with Siloam lodge of Old Saybrook, November 7, 1904, and was senior warden of the lodge six months, then removing to Hartford. He affiliated with Hartford lodge of Hartford, April 20, 1908.

Mr. Buck was born in Hartford and was graduated from the Hartford High school in 1896; Yale university in 1900, with the degree of bachelor of arts and received the degree of master of arts in 1902. He has made teaching his vocation and after teaching in Old Lyme and Saybrook came to Hartford. He has been principal of the Lawrence street school and is now principal of the Noah Webster school, Hartford.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

Get Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 17 years and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, but a healing, soothing vegetable laxative.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated, olive-colored tablets. They cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you'll find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets at bedtime.

Thousands take them every night just to keep right. Try them. 15c and 30c.

A THREE DAYS' COUGH IS YOUR DANGER SIGNAL

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. —(Adv.)

ACADEMY BASEBALL TEAM HAS STIFF SCHEDULE FOR COMING SEASON

CAPT. PHIL McNAMARA

Manager Martin J. Gilman of the Academy baseball team completed the 1924 schedule on Wednesday, signing up McKnight's All-Collegians for two dates that remained open. The schedule includes 15 games, the first being with the All-Collegians on April 26th and the final game with Westerly on June 11th. There are ten games on the campus and five scheduled away from home.

Two new teams make their appearance on the slate. They are the Connecticut Aggie freshmen who come here on May 17th, and the North High school team of Worcester, Mass., the attraction for Memorial day. The schedule this season is slightly stiffer than last year and includes two games with Bulkeley, which, by the way, brings to mind Charles F. Noyes' offer of $5,000 for a new athletic building providing the Academy teams win over Bulkeley in baseball and football.

The schedule is as follows:

April 26—McKnight's All-Collegians at Norwich.
April 28—Stonington at Stonington.
May 3—Windham at Norwich.
May 6—Westerly at Westerly.
May 10—Chapman Tech at Norwich.
May 14—Bulkeley at New London.
May 17—Plainfield at Norwich.
May 20—McKnight's All-Collegians at Norwich.
May 23—Chapman Tech at New London.
May 27—Connecticut A. C. Freshmen at Norwich.
May 30—North High of Worcester at Norwich.
May 31—Bulkeley at Norwich.
June 5—Windham at Willimantic.
June 7—Stonington at Norwich.
June 11—Westerly at Norwich.

Capt. Phil McNamara is looking over likely material at the Academy and is in hopes of turning out a real contender for the high school baseball title this year. Coach Brigham, who was in charge of the football squad last season, will have charge of the baseball squad, and intends to start indoor battery work within the next few weeks. Arrangements are being made to get suitable location for a cage and the pitchers will soon be limbering up the arm. Ellie Segal will be the mainstay of the team as he was last year. Another pitching recruit will be Johnny Fellow, a portsider who worked to advantage last year. The remainder of the team will be built around Capt. Phil McNamara at third and Tombari at second, two veterans of last year's squad.

The local high school team will need the support of the local alumni and it is hoped that they will get the needed support. There is urgent need of bleachers and repairs in the playing field that can be taken care of by the alumni as it is done in other high schools in the state. There is ample opportunity for the graduates of the school to get together and do something worth while for the Academy.

DUNDEE NOT TO GO TO PANAMA FOR BOUT

New York, Feb. 6.—Johnny Dundee, featherweight and junior lightweight champion, probably will cancel altogether plans to invade Panama for a match with Jose Lombardo, according to James J. Johnston, Dundee's manager.

Johnston said today that he had postponed the proposed match because of an injury to Dundee's hand but added that, because of other plans now in view, there was little likelihood of the champion going to the Isthmus.

A match with Benny Leonard for the lightweight title during the outdoor season is now the goal of Dundee, who thus would be seeking his third pugilistic crown. Negotiations for this contest, according to Johnston, have gained impetus through the veteran's victory last week over Pal Moran, New Orleans lightweight, who previously had been considered as Leonard's leading rival in the 135-pound division.

PRINCETON RELAY TEAM TO OPPOSE U. OF V. AT WILCO GAMES

New York, Feb. 6.—Princeton university's one-mile relay team, which will oppose the University of Virginia crack team in a match race at the Wilco A. A. games in Brooklyn, February 16, will be selected from W. H. Hitzrot, G. E. Leh, S. C. Conger, R. G. Craft and T. G. Klumpp, it was announced today. The first three composed the team which defeated M. I. T. in a match relay at the Millrose games after H. L. Nathan, lead-off man, pulled a tendon and was compelled to withdraw.

Basketball Results.

LEBANON REFUSES TO PLAY BATTERY B TEAM LAST NIGHT

The members of the Battery B basketball team were not a little peeved and not without reason, on Wednesday evening when they went to Lebanon to play the Lebanon team, and were turned down cold. The Battery B team was asked to play at Lebanon and went there with the expectation of playing. On their arrival in the thriving little hamlet they were informed that the Lebanon team could not play. No reason was given.

No member of the Battery team had been informed that the Lebanon team could not play and expected that the Lebanon manager was a man of his word. To cap it all the Lebanonites had the colossal nerve to say that the Battery team would be permitted to come to Lebanon again next Tuesday evening for a game. Manager Goodrow informed the Lebanon manager that his team was not touring for their health and that if Lebanon wanted a game they would have to come to Norwich. The Battery team returned to their home camp more or less disgruntled at the treatment they received from the village boys.

MURCHISON PROVES TO BE SENSATION OF NEWARK GAMES

Newark, N. J., Feb. 6—Three spectacular spring victories by Loren Murchison, Newark flier and national champion, featured the fourth annual games of the Newark A. C. tonight in the first regiment armory. Murchison made a clean sweep of the series of dashes at 50, 60 and 70 yards showing his heels to "Boots" Lever, former Penn track captain, and Jackson V. Scholtz of the New York A. C. who finished in that order in each event.

Ray Watson, of Chicago, national half mile champion flashed his best performance of the indoor season when he captured the 600-yard Newark special, leading Vincent Lally, of New York to the finish by ten yards, with Lloyd Hahn, Boston star, third, two yards further back. Alan Helffrecht, of Penn state and Tom Campbell, former Yale star, were forced to withdraw from the race.

TWO RECRUIT CATCHERS RELEASED BY YANKEES

New York, Feb. 6. — Two recruit catchers were released on option today by the New York Yankees, William J. Mahoney, Georgetown university catcher, was sent to the Wilkesbarre, Pa., club of the New York-Pennsylvania league, and Bernard Starr was released to the Pittsfield, Mass., team of the Eastern league. Starr was with the Yankees two years ago and was recalled at the end of last season after playing with Barre, Vt.

BOWLING BECOMES MINOR SPORT AT YALE

New Haven, Feb. 6—Bowling has been officially recognized as a minor sport at Yale and today was made a unit of the Yale university athletic association. An intercollegiate league has been formed comprising Yale, University of Kentucky, Michigan, Syracuse, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute of Troy and Minnesota and will get under way next Wednesday night when the first scheduled games will be played. The pairings will be Yale vs. Minnesota; Kentucky vs. Michigan and R. P. I. vs. Syracuse. The matches will be telegraphic.

The schedule calls for the full league rolling every Wednesday night until April six, each team being matched with each other twice.

The schedule will include the above mentioned games next Wednesday and the following matches:

February 27, Kentucky vs. Syracuse; Michigan vs. Yale; R. P. I. vs. Minnesota; March 5, Kentucky vs. Minnesota; Michigan vs. Syracuse; R. P. I. vs. Yale; March 12, Kentucky vs. Yale; Michigan vs. R. P. I.; Syracuse vs. Minnesota.

The second round will be a repetition of the first, starting March 19 and ending April 10.

The Yale 1916 team won the intercollegiate championship in a tournament rolled on the Yale alleys and since that time there has been no league.

WOMEN SHATTER THREE MORE SWIMMING RECORDS

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 6—Three more records were broken today by the Women's Association swimmers on the second day of their meet here. Sybil Bauer, Illinois A. C., star, made her first record breaking trip when she won the 100 metre back stroke in one minute 22 2-5 seconds. Miss Bauer's former world record was 1 minute 26 1-5 seconds. Gertrude Ederle, Aileen Riggin, Adelia Lambert and Helen Wainwright, swimming one hundred metres each, broke the world 400 metre relay record, finishing in 5 minutes flat, nine and one fifth seconds under the record.

Agnes Geraghty, of New York, set her American breast stroke mark in the meet when she swam the 200 metre event in 3:34 2-5. Dorothy Waters held the former American record 3:58 4-5. The world's mark is 3:31 2-5.

HARVEY UNABLE TO RAISE $500 BAIL

New York, Feb. 6—Colonel Valentine Harvey, who was arrested as he disembarked yesterday with the British International squash team, started a second day in jail tonight when he was unable to raise the $500 bail for which he was held on a charge of abandoning his wife.

Mrs. Harvey, who charged he deserted her here five years ago, had him arrested at the pier. Colonel Harvey's good humor was maintained until he learned that none of his teammates would bail him out. Members of the team said he had attached himself to the organization and that as a consequence of what they had learned, they had relieved him of membership.

The team played and won its first game today.

LEADING CHESS PLAYERS ARE NAMED FOR TOURNEY

New York, Feb. 6.—Selection of 11 of the 12 chess masters, comprising leading talent here and abroad, who will compete in the international congress to be held here beginning March 17, was announced today.

The list is headed by Jose Capablanca of Cuba, present world's champion, and also includes Dr. Emanuel Lasker of Germany, former world's titleholder, Alexander Alekhine, Russian champion; E. Bogoljubow, Russia; Geza Maroczy, Hungarian champion; Richard Reti, Czechoslovakia; Dr. S. Tartakower, Ukrainia; David Janowski, former French champion; Frank J. Marshall, United States champion; A. Kupchik, New York, and Edward Lasker, Chicago. The twelfth entrant will be either Sir George Thomas, British champion, or Oscar Chajes, metropolitan expert.

FAUVER WITHDRAWS HIS RESIGNATION AT WESLEYAN

Middletown, Conn., Feb. 6—The resignation of Dr. Edgar Fauver, director of physical education at Wesleyan university, was withdrawn today by Dr. Fauver in a letter to Acting President Holland the latter stated that the resolutions of the faculty and academic council showed that the faculty supported his work and that the resolution passed by the board of trustees in New York showed that the trustees not only committed themselves to faculty control of athletics but that they had no idea of changing the present policy.

NO GRAND CIRCUIT MEET AT GOSHEN THIS YEAR

Cleveland, O., Feb. 6.—There will be no Grand Circuit at Goshen, N. Y., this year, it was announced by Win H. Kinnan, secretary of the Grand Circuit, tonight. The announcement followed receipt of a communication from Averell Harriman, head of the Goshen association, declaring that it is impossible to get the track into condition in time.

As a result, the week of August 16, allotted to the Goshen management will be taken over by the North Randall management, which will conduct a nine-day meeting, starting August 11 as per schedule.

SPECIAL RELAY RACES TO FEATURE N. Y. A. C. GAMES

New York, Feb. 6.—Two special relay events will be among the outstanding features of the New York Athletic club's track and field games at the Twenty-Second Regiment armory on February 21. One will be a three-cornered intercollegiate race to which Yale, Virginia and Harvard have been invited, and the other a two-mile test between Boston A. A. and New York A. C. middle distance stars.

SPEED SKATING TITLE RACE TO BE HELD AT ST. JOHN, N. B.

New York, Feb. 6.—The international indoor speed skating championships will be held in St. John, N. B., on February 25, 26 and 27, it was announced today by Joseph K. Savage, president of the International Skating union. At the same time he said the start of the American national championships at Saranac Lake had been set back one day to February 14, because of the late arrival of the American Olympic skaters from abroad.

Other important skating dates, he announced, include the Canadian national championships at Toronto, February 5 and 6; New Jersey state championships at Long Branch, N. J., February 9 and 10, and the Metropolitan championships at New Rochelle, February 13.

YANKEE STADIUM OFFERED FOR ARMY-NAVAL GRID GAME

New York, Feb. 6.—Edward G. Barrow, business manager of the New York Yankees, announced today that the Yankee stadium had been offered to the United States Naval academy for the 1924 Army-Naval football game.

The choice for the scene of the game rests with the Naval officials. It is understood that invitations have been received by the Navy from Franklin Field in Philadelphia and Venable stadium in Baltimore for the annual contest, which was staged last season at the Polo grounds.

PLAINFIELD CLAIMS BASKET BALL TITLE OF EASTERN CONN.

Since defeating the "Recs" of South Manchester Friday night who in turn defeated the Army and Navy quintet of Taftville, the Plainfield management can see nothing standing in their way to prevent them from laying claim to the championship of Eastern Conn.

The Plainfield management has for some time been trying to arrange a series of games with Manager Murphy of the Army and Navy Club but due to some unforeseen reason Manager Murphy has spurned all inducements made by the Plainfield management to him. Perhaps Manager Murphy can for see what would happen if these two teams did meet.

FAMOUS BATTERY REJOINS GIANTS AS SCOUT AND COACH

New York, Feb. 6.—"Iron Man" Joe McGinnity, and Roger Bresnahan, famous battery of the New York Giants twenty years ago, will rejoin Manager John J. McGraw's team, it was reported reliably tonight, McGinnity as a pitching coach, and Bresnahan as a scout.

It was understood that McGinnity would serve throughout the season, as he had refused an offer from an old teammate, Christy Mathewson, president of the Boston Braves, to help Dick Rudolph teach the youngsters of that club during the spring.

Borg Title of Antipodes

Hobart, Tasmania, Feb. 6—Arne Borg, the Swedish champion swimmer and holder of the world record of 23 minutes 34 seconds for the mile, open water, today won the Australasian mile championship. His time was 22 minutes 45 3-5 seconds. F. E. Beaurepaire, Australia finished second.

Indoor Baseball Challenge

The indoor baseball team of the Riverview club of the Norwich State Hospital hurls a challenge at the Battery B indoor team for a game or a series of games to be played in the near future. The battery team won the city championship in December and now the Riverview team challenges that title.

British Squash Team Wins.

New York, Feb. 6.—The British amateur squash racquets team won the first match played since its arrival in America, defeating a special New York team at the University club today, 3 matches to 1.

Chesbro to Coach Pitchers.

New York, Feb. 6.—Jack Chesbro, old time pitching star and baseball coach at Harvard university, has accepted an offer from Clark Griffith to coach the Washington pitchers, it was reported today.

Terry Signs With Giants.

New York, Feb. 6. — William H. Terry, infielder, returned his signed contract to the New York Giants today. Terry came to the Giants from Toledo last season.

Boston Hockey Team Wins

Boston, Feb. 6—Boston Athletic association hockey team defeated St. Paul here tonight, 2 to 1 in an exhibition game that went overtime play.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

The Montreal Curling Club, oldest of its kind in America, dates from 1807.

The oldest continuous racing fixture in America is the King's Plate for Ontario, or as it was originally instituted under Queen Victoria, the Queen's plate. It has been run without a break since 1860, when her late Majesty first donated fifty guineas with the object of encouraging the breeder of thoroughbreds in the provinces.

This year's Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs will mark the golden jubilee of the famous turf classic.

A tournament for the straight rail billiard championship of New England will be held in Boston the week of February 18.

BARROW TURNS DOWN OFFER TO BECOME MANAGER OF WASHINGTON BALL CLUB

New York, Feb. 6.—An offer to manage the Washington Senators next season, made by Clark Griffith during a meeting in Boston yesterday, was turned down by Edward G. Barrow, business manager of the Yankees, it was learned today. Details of Griffith's offer were not revealed but it was understood Barrow declined to accept because, as a stockholder and secretary of the Yankees in addition to his business duties, he desired to retain his connections here.

Washington is the only major league club without a pilot. Since Donie Bush was released, the names of Eddie Collins, White Sox second sacker, and Kid Gleason, former White Sox manager, have been mentioned for the post, while it also was intimated that would take over the active reins in addition to his duties as club president, if unable to find a capable field general.

Barrow has had wide experience as a baseball manager and executive. He piloted the Detroit Tigers in 1903 and 1904 and led the Boston Red Sox in 1918, 1919 and 1920. His 1918 club captured the last American league pennant Boston has had and defeated the Chicago Cubs in the world's series. Barrow also served for some time as president of the International league. He came to the Yankees after leaving Boston and acquired substantial financial interest in the club, it was understood, after Colonel Jacob Ruppert bought out the half interest of his partner, Colonel T. L. Houston, last spring.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

BREED THEATRE

It is the unexpected, unforeseen happenings in life that tend to make living interesting. In "A Woman of Paris," Charles Chaplin's drama of life which is shown for the last times at the Breed theatre today, are the unexpected happenings of the photoplay, showing something new and different in the motion picture, creating new and added interest to this form of the public's entertainment and recreation.

In the first place it was unexpected that the justly famous Charles Chaplin should even temporarily desert his comedy roles for the production of serious drama. It had been unthought of that he would produce a photoplay in which he himself did not appear, yet these and more unforeseen happenings have come to pass, and it is the unexpected incidents that appear in "A Woman of Paris" that make it the most interesting photodrama yet produced.

In this Charles Chaplin production for United Artists Corporation, the movie fan who can always anticipate the next incident or what will follow, is going to meet with a reversal of form. Chaplin outguesses one at every turn. Where one may visualize a scene to follow or what will next happen, one is treated to something entirely different, yet there is never any feeling of disappointment, so quickly does one realize that he is witnessing something just a little better than he anticipated, something new, something more interesting, and altogether away from the stereotyped form of movies.

Other pictures on the bill include a news and a comedy.

Quartette of Musical Misses Feature Palace Show

A versatile aggregation of vaudeville stars make up the program at the Palace Theatre for the last half of this week. First and foremost are the famous Hamil Sisters, a quartette of beautiful misses in a musical oddity that will delight both real music lovers and also lovers of the more popular jazzy form of syncopation. These four girls together with their able music leader Mr. Stross present an act that has delighted Broadway for many months past—in fact, they come to us direct from New York City.

Arthur and White, the Doctor and the Maid offer one of those farcial comedy acts that everyone loves to see. Full of good fun, funny situations and irresistable dialogue they keep their audiences in a continual spasm of happy laughter.

Close behind them in fun-making proclivities come Runyan and Trent two clever fellows in a Laugh a Minute comedy vehicle.

The MacIntyres, who have lately played the Palace Theatre New York is an act that lovers of originality will want to see. They title their act Hitting the Target and it will surely Hit the Target of our vaudeville patrons.

Sensational Togo a yong man who comes from the Land of the Rising Sun possesses all the inherent ability of his Japanese forefathers. Togo's breathtakingg finale has caused gasps of awe and surprise in Shubert's finest theatres. Although still youthful, he has attained a high place in his chosen art. His daring and sensational stunts should be seen to be appreciated.

The long awainted picturization of Jack London's famous novel "The Call of the Wild," comes to the Palace Theatre today. The hero of the story is a dog whose father was a St. Bernard and whose mother was a Scotch shepard dog. The dog is called Buck and, from puppyhood, is raised in the luxury of civilization. Then he is stolen away to the Klondike, where he experiences a strange climate, meets strange men and adapts himself to strange habits and labors. He is a bewildered dog—until the strain of his forefathers begins to assert itself—until he feels the call of the wild.

Melt in spoon; inhale vapor; apply freely up nostrils.

James L. Case has sold for Joseph Zoghby to William C. Dreschler the cottage house of 7 rooms and bath located at No. 56 Lincoln Avenue. Mr Dreschler will improve the property and occupy the same for his home.

STRAND THEATRE

A well balanced B. F. Keith vaudeville bill composed of big time acts and feature picture has been arranged for today, Friday and Saturday.

Dan Sherman, Mabel DeForest and Co. in The Jazz Circus is to vaudeville what Shakespear's The Dromios is to the legitimate stage, viz: the funniest comedy ever presented. For years Dan Sherman has shown his Jazz Circus until every vaudeville patron is more or less familiar with the doings of himself and his twin, and what more, all are anxious to see again the funny situations and hear the funniest dialogue ever presented.

Joe Sully and Cliff Hall present a skit called The Great Lovers. As lovers they are absolutely and entirely sans romance and sentiment. Their idea is the greater the lover the greater the laugh and so they have made The Great Lover truly great.

Mills Melody Maids is sure to please you with their clever singing and dancing.

A rare treat for lovers of music will be found in Jean Schwiller who with his famous cello has played to the nobility of Europe.

Among some of the celebrities with whom he has appeared are the late Caruso, Tetrazzini, and John McCormack. Mr. Schwiller has appeared before the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Westminster, Lord Rothschild and quite a number of people of this kind as well as many thousands of others.

Malinda and Dade are indeed Royal Entertainers. They are colored folks and like most artists of their race, enjoy their work so thoroughly that others cannot help but enjoy it.

They sing and dance and have a bit of musical novelty. This consists of making music on a washboard.

Palace

Fortunate indeed is the actor lucky enough to have a role in a production which scores one of the biggest hits, in the history of the cinema art, but when he comes right back as a featured member of the cast of another production hailed at least as equally great, he can surely be said to be a child of destiny. Such is Ernest Torrence, who plays one of the principal roles in The Hunchback of Notre Dame, which opens its local engagement at the Palace on Sunday, Feb. 10.

Torrence was given lavish praise for his work in The Covered Wagon, but all who have seen him in the new Universal production, admit that he has accomplished a piece of art that will go down into history. In The Hunchback of Notre Dame, his part is second only to that of Lon Chaney, the star, who portrays the role of Quasimodo. Torrence will be seen as Clopin, King of the Underworld. It is no reflection on either man to say that with any other man than Chaney in the title role Torrence would have "stolen the stellar honors.

Aside from Chaney and Torrence the cast is one of the most notable ever assembled there being a total of 75 principals, including Tully Marshall, Brandon Hurst, Patsy Ruth Miller, Gladys Brockwell, Norman Kerry, Nigel de Bruller and Kate Lester, 300 players, ordinarily programmed names, played small parts while the extras totaled in excess of 3,500.

The production was 18 months in the making, six in technical research and 12 in actual "shooting." The entire Cathedral of Notre Dame was reconstructed in its entirety at Universal City, as well as eight blocks of Parisian houses and squares of the period of Louis XI. It was directed by Wallace Worsley.

Mrs. Leslie Carter

Mrs. Leslie Carter needs little introduction to the amusement loving public of America. Critics and people alike have proclaimed her to be an actress of rare human charm. The Selwyns consider it indeed a pleasure to offer Mrs. Carter this charming artist in a dramatization of Olive Higgins Prouty's delightful novel Stella Dallas, adapted by Gertrude Purcell and Harry Wagstaff Gribble. Those of you who have read Miss Prouty's story need no further data on same and to tell the story in advance would be as if one reading a book would jump from the first to last chapter and spoiling a really good tale, by being inquisitive. Suffice to say the Selwyns have secured a cast in keeping with the author's ideas when writing the dramatization. In the cast, in addition to Mrs. Leslie Carter, will be found, Margaret Hawkins, Beatrice Moreland, Almeda Fowler, Julia Cobb, Ruth Darby, Anne Morrison, Albert March, Mathilde Baring, Guy Milham, George W. Howard and others.

The oldest of the existing hunt clubs in the United States is the Rose Tree Fox Hunting Club, organized by sportsmen of the Philadelphia district in 1859.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT
By DAVID CORY

Buying Something for Mother

Are you saving your pennies to buy something for mother, little boys and girls who read this story, because you will never forget the look in her eyes when you give her a present. That's what Little Jack Rabbit does. Yes sir. Every day he saves a carrot cent, and some time, not so very long, he'll buy Lady Love something with his saved up money.

I'll save each day,
My pennies, yes I will.
For sakes alive,

Just twenty-five
Will make a lettuce bill,
And when I have my little bank
Just full of carrot cents
I'll try to get another one
To hold a million pence.

When I tell you that Little Jack Rabbit made up this poem all by himself you'll be surprised. But he did, and dear Uncle Lucky was so proud that he had it printed on a lovely big card with the picture of a tiny savings bank in one corner and Little Jack Rabbit's picture in the other.

Lady Love, his pretty bunny mother was very proud of her little rabbit boy poet. But she didn't know why he was trying so hard to save his money. He wished to surprise her, you see.

"Here, mother," he shouted, as he hopped quickly up the path through the bushes, "see what I have!"

"What is it, my little bunny boy?" she asked, hugging him close.

"Just you wait till you've opened it," he answered, with a laugh.

Untying the string, the little bunny mother drew forth a blue apron with pockets made of daisies. "Dearest me!" she exclaimed, tears of joy in her eyes, "did you buy it all yourself?"

"Yes, I did, and with my very own money," he answered.

And then, would you believe it, that little lady bunny picked him up and commenced to dance around in and out among the flowers in the garden. "Cock-a-doodle do!

You've lost your little shoe,
You'd better put it on again

Before the sunshine turns to rain," crowed the Old Red Rooster, looking up from his work. You see, he had come over to weed the garden that day.

"Never mind the little shoe, Mr. Cock-a-doodle do," answered Lady Love, "I have a new apron, and my little boy bought it for me with his saved-up pennies."

"Goodness me!" mumbled the Old Red Rooster, "she makes as much fuss over a new apron as Henny Jenny over a new-laid egg. Only she laughs instead of cackling. Women folks are funny things," and he went to work again at the weeds which had grown up all around the pretty flowers.

Just then the little canary bird began to sing:

"Pleasing mother, that's the way
Golden sunshine every day
Makes the flowers blossom sweet
All about the grasses feet."

And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

New German Oil Formula Rubs Out Rheumatic Pains

Remarkable Discovery Promises Relief to Rheumatic Sufferers

German chemistry that has given to the world the boon of Aspirin for the relief of headache pain and Novocain for painless dentistry, has now come forward with another scientific discovery that promises to make rheumatic pain a thing of the past for thousands who have suffered terrible tortures.

A new combination of certain oils has been discovered, which produces a clear amber liquid that affords immediate relief from pain in many instances. It is so penetrating that it disappears within a few second, so that it must be entirely absorbed by the body tissue. Even in the most advanced and stubborn cases the use of this remarkable oil has shown astonishing improvement at once in many cases. Tired muscles regain life, creaking joints with the pain all gone become supple, and the annoying twinges cease.

Rehumatism, in many cases, is due to internal abscesses, such as a blind pus pocket in a tooth, which gives off poisons. These poisons are carried by the blood to the muscles and joints and this new oil is designed to neutralize these pain causing poisons.

So astonishing have been the results from the use of this oil that the American distributors have authorized local druggists to dispense it to rheumatic sufferers in this city, with a positive written guarantee, signed by themselves to return the full purchase price of the first bottle if the rheumatic pains are not speedily relieved. All who suffer rheumatic pains should take advantage of this liberal offer. Unless you are relieved from the very first bottle, your money will return your money. It is called Tonikon Oil, and can be had at good druggists, such as Lee & Osgood, John A. Morgan, George M. Rathbun, Andrew McLaughlin, G. G. Engler.

Keeping Millions Free From Colds and La Grippe

W. H. HILL'S LIFE WORK

Colds cause more illness than any other human ailment. Realizing this 50 years ago, W. H. Hill determined to develop a quick-acting scientifically correct cold and la grippe remedy.

Years of research brought success. Mr. Hill discovered a most remarkable formula. He backed it with energy, faith, integrity and a name that meant "satisfaction or money back."

Today more than 4,000,000 families—one-fifth of America's population—use and recommend Hill's Cascara Bromide Quinine.

The formula has never been changed in a quarter century. What Hill's has done for millions, it can do for you. Demand red box bearing Mr. Hill's portrait. All druggists, 30 cents.

A Story of Success

How Studebaker Cars became leaders

145,000 people last year paid $200,000,000 for them

THE most talked-about cars among fine cars are the Studebaker Sixes—at $975 and up.

Sales have almost trebled in the past three years. The demand for these cars, growing by leaps and bounds, has been Motordom's chief sensation.

Over $200,000,000 was last year spent for Studebaker models.

Now we wish to explain, to all who are interested, the reasons for that success.

Studebaker has always led

For 73 years the name Studebaker has stood for quality and class.

Studebaker equipages, in the carriage days, held premier place. The White House owned them in the days of Grant and Harrison.

Now we make motor cars only. But the Studebaker name, in this modern field, simply had to maintain its prestige.

* * *

We had the money, we had the incentive — we who now control. And our one ambition has been to maintain the Studebaker place.

$90,000,000 assets behind us

Studebaker assets are $90,000,000. We have $50,000,000 in modern plants and equipment.

Not old plants re-adapted. We have spent $32,000,000 in new plants in five years. We have equipped them with 12,500 up-to-date machines.

Over $8,000,000 was spent on drop forge plants alone. Another $10,000,000 on body plants, to maintain our prestige in coach building.

We believe that no other plant in the country is so well equipped to build quality cars as Studebaker.

Engineering—$500,000 yearly

We created an engineering department which costs $500,000 yearly.

There are 125 skilled men there who devote their time to studying betterments in cars. They make 500,000 tests yearly.

There is a department of Methods and Standards. They decide and fix every standard in these cars.

We spend $600,000 yearly to machine all surfaces of crank shafts, just as in Liberty Airplane Motors. That is the reason for that perfect balance, that absence of vibration.

Every Studebaker car is Timken-equipped. The Special-Six and the Big-Six have more Timken bearings than any car selling under $5,600 in America. The Light-Six more than any competitive car within $1,000 of its price.

Open cars have real leather upholstery. They cost $25 more per car than imitation leather.

Our closed cars have Chase Mohair upholstery. This is made from the soft fleece of Angora goats. And a Sedan requires from 15 to 18 yards.

Velour for this upholstery would save us up to $100 per car.

Note the finish of every detail. Mark the infinite care. They add 25% to labor cost on luxurious closed bodies.

Note the completeness of our larger closed cars. The nickel-plated bumpers, the extra disc wheels and cord tires, the steel trunk, the courtesy light, etc. Think what they would cost you, bought as extras.

Thus we have made the Studebaker the leader of quality cars. We have built a demand exceeding 145,000 cars per year.

Learn the results of these efforts, in fairness to yourself. Don't buy a car at $1,000 or over without knowing what we offer.

Compare the parts and details. Mark the advantages we offer — scores on scores. Our experience is that 95% of those who do that buy a Studebaker car.

Learn why 145,162 bought Studebakers in 1923

In 1919, the public paid over $80,000,000 for 39,356 Studebaker cars.

In 1920, the public paid over $100,000,000 for 51,474 Studebaker cars, an increase of 31% over 1919.

In 1921, the public paid over $120,000,000 for 66,643 Studebaker cars, an increase of 29% over 1920.

In 1922, the public paid over $155,000,000 for 110,269 Studebaker cars, an increase of 66% over 1921.

In 1923, the public paid over $201,000,000 for 145,162 Studebaker cars, an increase of 32% over 1922.

In 1924, business has opened with Studebaker as never before.

Learn why all these buyers preferred Studebakers.

Our factories employ 1,200 inspectors, to make 30,000 inspections on all Studebakers cars. Few flaws, few mistakes can escape them. That, we believe, is the finest organization ever devoted to motor car building.

POETRY

The Bayberry Leaf

The white ships cleave the foamy trank
The salt sea breezes blow,
And to my lonely heart bring back
The days of long ago.

Soft gray-winged gulls in airy flocks
Wheel 'twixt the sea and sky,
The sand-birds flitting 'mid the rocks
Send up their plaintive cry.

Watching the surge in sullen wrath
Break o'er the whitening reef,
Idly I pluck beside the path
A bayberry's waxen leaf.

When, with its fragrance sweet, a tide
Of memories, like the sea,
Through time's dark floodgates bursting wide
Comes rushing back to me.

Like this, the day was bright and fair,
The same sweet breezes blow,
The rocks, the very waves were there,
The same deep sky of blue.

And one dear form walked by my side
Along the selfsame way,
Who gave to me with tender pride
A leaflet of the bay.

The long years come, the long years go,
But never more with me
Her gentle footsteps, soft and slow,
Will wander by the sea.

And so today I walk apart
And watch the sea alone,
But like these bruised leaves my heart
In sweeter life has grown,

And trusting holds the fond belief
That, mindful still of me,
She plucks the bayberry's fadeless leaf
Beside the Eternal Sea.
—Eugene Barry in Boston Transcript.

The Cyclamen

Over the plains where Persians hoe
Laid down their lives for glory
Flutter the cyclamens, like ghosts
That witness to their story.
Oh, fair! Oh, white! Oh, pure as snow!
On countless graves how sweet they grow!

Or crimson, like the cruel wounds
From which the life-blood flowing,
Poured out where now on grassy mounds
The low, soft winds are blowing;
Oh, fair! Oh, red! Like blood of stain;
Not even time can cleanse that stain.

But when my dear these blossoms holds,
All loveliness her dower,
All woe and joy the past enfolds,
In her find fullest flower.
Oh, fair! Oh pure! Oh, white and red!
If she but live, what are the dead!
—Arlo Bates in Indianapolis News.

Mrs. Alfred H. Chapman, of the West Side, while driving her automobile on the Post Road toward Westerly near the John William Opie farm, Wednesday afternoon about 4.30 o'clock escaped serious injury when the automobile turned completely over. The slippery condition of the highway was the cause of the accident when the automobile skidded, crossed over to the left side of the highway and struck a stone and landed on its top with four wheels in the air. The door opened and Mrs. Chapman who was alone stepped out getting off with a few bruises. Some of the side windows were broken and the underpart of the car was damaged to some extent. The automobile was righted and brought to a garage in Westerly, late Wednesday evening.

Edwin Robinson Davis, 55, son of the late Clark and Julia Gavitt Davis, formerly of Westerly, died Wednesday afternoon at the Hotel Jefferson, Phoenix, Arizona. Mr. Davis had been in Arizona since last October and expected to travel through the state of Wyoming, having gone west as representative of a Boston stationery house also for his health. The announcement of his death comes as a surprise to friends in Westerly where he was born and where he attended the public schools before going to Boston. He married Bertha Irene, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Sleicher of Troy, N. Y. Besides his wife he leaves three children, Edwin Jr., Gretchen, Dwight, who make their home in Natick, Mass. where his mother now resides.

Lewis Howe saw in The Bulletin the other day an item about an old paper of 1847. Mr. Howe owns one of the largest collections of antiques and historic relics in this end of the state, and from his old paper files he submits the following list to meet all competitors:

Newport, R. I. Mercury, 1781.
New London Republican-Advocate, 1781.
Washington, D. C.—U. S. Telegraph, 1822.
New York Tribune, 1844 and 1841.
Boston Transcript, 1846.
Norwich—The Free Soil Pioneer, 1848.
New London Chronicle, 1850.
Norwich Courier, 1857.
American Messenger, 1872.
Boston Globe, 1872.
Nome, Alaska.—Nome News, 1900.
Topeka Capital, Sheldon edition, Mar. 13, 1900.
Trenton, N. J., Times, 1901.
Chelsea Courier, 1826.

Ninety copies of the New London Gazette during the century beginning at 1700, including a copy describing the burning of Washington, D. C., by the British, in 1812.

Funeral services were held for Mrs. John B. LeClaire at St. Mary's church, Wednesday morning. Solemn requiem high mass was celebrated by Rev. James J. Tyler. Rev. Frederick M. Coholan, of Greeneville was deacon and Rev. John J. McCabe sub-deacon. The flowers from the family and friends were beautiful. Mrs. Noel Garand sang, Beautiful Land on High, as a waiting hymn. The bearers were Noe Dugas, Velo Sharkie, Joseph Boisvert, Henry Bailou, Judson La Fountaine and Felix Guillotte. Relatives were present from Putnam and Taftville. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery in Lisbon, where Father McCabe read the committal service.

Hourigan Bros. were the funeral directors in charge.

Dr. Frank D. Browning, W. M.; George T. Bell, S. W.; William McCluggage, J. W., of Mt. Vernon lodge, No. 76, F. & A. M., are attending the annual session of the Grand lodge in Hartford

An item in the Jewett City news of The Bulletin one year ago today, reads that 16-inch ice could be cut on the same place where a few weeks ago Shea Bros. cut 18 inch ice, also of the same date. Campers on the upper Assinook were obliged to cut through 20 inch ice to get water.

On the Doorville fields, Wednesday, there was scant 7 inch ice, topped by an inch of frozen sleet.

Old Cluey says that surely, if there is a business in the world, that demands patience and perseverance it is trapping. Something has been interfering with his traps on a line extending from in back of the Wiley school house to the eastern foot of Mt. Misery. Not in many years has a fisher, Mustela Canadensis, been reported in this region, yet when the old man found 14 traps torn to bits, it reminded him of the fisher cats of his boyhood home, down in Somerset county, Maine. He and two other boys there, years ago, had a two mile line repeatedly torn up, and Cluey tells the story of the afternoon when he was chosen to watch for the marauder.

"About midway of our line of traps a stream ran through a shrubbery opening, in which, some five or six rods from the bank, there stood a clump of low hemlocks. Among these I secreted myself. I had three of the traps in sight. They were all on the other side of the stream from my hiding place, and all within range of the old 'queen's arm', I calculated. It was rather lonesome business, but the afternoon were away. There had been a frost, and the whole forest had come out in its autumn finery. Crows and jays were mustering for their long journey southward. 'Twas a noisy, gaudy scene, but nothing came near the traps. About three o'clock it came on cloudy, and by four, it had become lowery and dark. I had got dreadfully sick of my job, there alone in the fast darkening forest.

"I was almost starting for home when suddenly the brush crackled in the woods below, and, a few minutes later, a largish black creature came out into the open, and putting up its mussle, began to snuffle and look around stealthily. My first glance showed me that it was no dog, and that I need not expect any man behind it, but I kept quiet. It was still some 20 or 25 rods off. After watching awhile, it moved up the brook toward the lower end of the traps. Its motions were cat-like, and its body, though long, was slim and lithe, while its legs were short. Coming to the lowest of the traps, it thrust in its paws between the poles of the 'spring,' pulled them apart, and ate the bait, then after smelling around a little, started on to the next one which was nearest to me. Now was my time. I cocked the gun but the animal heard the click, and stopped with a suspicious glance at the hemlocks. I pulled the trigger, got an awful kick, and for a second or two couldn't see a thing for the smoke, but scrambling out of the hemlocks, I saw the creature bound away and disappear into a great crevice in a ledge of rocks.

"Soon the boys came up from the old farm where they had been hearing to hear my shot. We could hear him snarl, but it sounded a good ways in and we couldn't see anything of him from the mouth of the den. How to get at the beast was a question. Finally Sam Wheeler, a cousin of ours, up from New York, who had more zeal than wisdom, and not a drop of downward blood in him, volunteered to crawl in and shoot him out, so we knotted his long 'comforter' to his ankle. He took the gun and slowly wriggled in. It took some time for his old boots to disappear. We had paid out nearly all the comforter, when there occurred a sudden halt, a bump, and a deafening explosion, followed by yawls and sudden shouts from Sam. We pulled and yanked, something suddenly gave way, out came the comforter with one of his boots.

"The uproar inside redoubled, volumes of stifling smoke, bearing a horrible odor of burnt hair, gushed out, midst which there leaped forth,—not Sam,—(who ought to have come first) but the cat, spitting and yawling. We all started to run, but Leve Edwards let him have two ounces of heavy buck shot, with the muzzle of the musket not two feet off the beast's head. That settled him, and there was no further trouble with our traps.

Sam squirmed out, unhurt, but a sorry sight with his pants and coat terribly torn. All he would say was, "Why didn't you pull a feller's leg off, and done with it?"

ASKS ACTION TO STOP THE RISING PRICE OF GASOLINE

Pierre, S. D., Feb. 6.—Governor W. H. McMaster today wired President Coolidge asking the executive to take some action to stop the rising price of gasoline. The governor declared the cornering of the crude oil market by the large oil interests has taken the fight outside of the state of South Dakota, where it was originally begun on August 7, 1923.

"The state government is amply able to crush out excess profiteering in the distribution of gasoline within the state but we have no power to control the price at the refineries," the message said. "If a state government has performed its duty in preventing excess profiteering in the distribution business, shall not the federal government likewise do its duty and prevent excess profiteering in the refining of gasoline?"

WILLIMANTIC

Practically all the business houses in the city were closed from 3 to 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, during the funeral services of ex-President Woodrow Wilson. The various manufacturing plants in the city suspended operations for five minutes, 2.30 to 2.35 p. m., and the school of the town and public offices of the town building were closed for the day.

The flag flying at half mast in the business section was at the chamber of commerce building where the flag was put out by Amos Fowler. At the upper end of Main street flags were flying at half mast from the U. S. postoffice building and the town building.

When the early birds of Willimantic came forth from their homes Wednesday morning they found themselves, in fairyland. Shrubs, trees, wires, houses and the ground were sparkling with a thick coating of ice formed from sleet which froze on during the night. Limbs drooped low and wires sagged with the weight of the ice. Walking and driving conditions were were rather dangerous Those who turned out on sidewalks which had not been sprinkled with sand could not afford to take in much of the surrounding splendor, as they found it necessary to use every sense of caution in keeping right side up. The roads were slippery and rutted, making automobile driving precarious. In many cases tree limbs hung so low that they scraped the tops of machines and in some places the drivers had to turn back and take another and more open route. Limbs from two trees on Jackson street, between Ash and Bolivia streets, were broken and dropped to the street. Mountain street near the home of Dewey Griggs, was blocked by a large limb and similar happenings were reported on High street, above Prospect street, Lebanon avenue and Hayden street.

Considerable trouble was met with the Southern New England Telephone company, several wires being torn down and a number of toll lines were put out of commission. Western Union Telegraph clocks in parts of the city were affected.

The Rockville Willimantic Lighting company had a force of men out Wednesday to repair damage caused by Tuesday night's storm. The residences along part of Pleasant street were without lights until Wednesday morning, as a section of electric light wire broke near the Burnham carriage shop at the corner of Pleasant and Bridge streets. A wire on Pearl street opposite the Johnson home burned brightly for several minutes and workmen were sent there and at the corner of Prospect and Spruce streets where a pole had fallen and had pulled down a number of wires.

The Connecticut company kept flangers at work during part of the night to keep the conduit wires and tracks clear of ice. The contact of the trolley pole with the icy wires caused flashes of bright blue flame which illuminated the sky at both ends of the city and was thought by some people to be lightning. The contact of electric wires near Hayden street in the over-the-river section also started fireworks which attracted considerable attention. Besides laying it to lightning some of the wise observers were ready to claim that they were seeing a display of northern lights. The electric flashes were all the more visible shortly after ten o'clock, when the entire city was thrown into pitch darkness for about fifteen minutes.

The borough of Colchester was without electric power Wednesday, and all manufacturing establishments were forced to suspend operations when a large transformer located almost in the center of the borough on the Connecticut Electric Light and Power Company line was burned out, about eight o'clock Wednesday morning. The Light and Power company supplies the entire town both for domestic and manufacturing purposes. A section of the pole to which the transformer was attached was also burned.

Colchester was hard hit by the storm. A large elm tree opposite St. Andrew's church fell under the weight of ice and the traffic at this point was blocked for several hours.

All the peach trees in Glastonbury were bent to the ground.

The young son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Casey sustained a severe injury to his eye Wednesday, while coasting on Summit street. The boy seemed to have lost control of his sled and after knocking over two or three children the sled tipped over and struck the child in the eye. He was rushed to St. Joseph's hospital where he was given treatment and then was taken home.

While driving over the slippery highway Tuesday evening, a Maddon sedan, said to be owned by a Norwich party left the road near the Willimantic Camp Ground, on Windham road, and was badly damaged. A number of young men were called and after hard work the machine was put back on the road and hauled back in the direction of Norwich.

When it was said that some wise observers believed they were seeing lightning, during the storm Tuesday night, theyre may have been some ground for this belief, as it is reported that in the vicinity of New Haven and the western part of the state a severe thunder and lightning storm raged. The storm probably came near enough to this city so that the lightning could be seen.

A White Rose bread truck which had been parked in front of the home of F. J. Kirtland, of 147 High street, headed down the hill, started suddenly down the incline when the brakes released. People who saw the machine thought that the driver was behind the wheel as it turned down across High street into Spring street. The truck turned the corner too sharply, however, and struck a stone wall knocking out a few stones. The machine then bounded across the street and came to a stop against a maple tree, in front of the Weeks home on the opposite side of the street. After the truck had been unloaded it was driven back to Hartford under its own power.

On account of the frozen sleet which covered the ice at the pumping station pond the work of harvesting ice at the municipal ice plant was suspended Wednesday. The ice cutters received their first pay Wednesday at the city clerk's office. L. A. Girouard who is in charge of the work stated that about 2200 tons of eleven inch ice had been housed to date. He plans to harvest about six thousand tons.

The police were informed Wednesday forenoon by a local clothier that a man was going about the city and canvassing for orders for suits and overcoats. The business man did not think this was fair to the local merchants and the police are watching for the canvasser, to determine on what lines he is doing business.

John White of Scotland was before the town court of this place Tuesday evening, charged with operating a motor vehicle without having an operator's license or registration. White pleaded guilty through his guardian ad litem, James H. Johnson. White was arrested last Sunday by State Policeman John Highrain, of the Stafford Springs barracks, on complaint of a Scotland resident. Justice of the Peace A. H. Gallup imposed a fine of $5 and costs on both charges, amounting to $27.83 which was paid, Grand Juror Harry Chesbro prosecuted.

A drive for recruits is now on by Company C, 169th Connecticut Infantry. A total of one hundred men and officers is being sought. Eight new members were recruited last week and five more were taken into the company ranks Tuesday night. The entertainment committee of the company announced that they had booked the famous Paul Whiteman orchestra of the steamship Leviathan to play in this city the latter part of this month.

The thick coating of ice which settled about the big clock in the tower of the town hall building so chilled the timepiece that the oil in the machinery became gummed up and the clock ceased to function. Engineer Joseph Ellis summoned Herbert Smith, a clock expert. Mr. Smith treated the oil and the clock was once more put into running order.

Past Exalted Rulers' night was observed at a meeting of Willimantic lodge, No. 1311, B. P. O. E. Wednesday evening. Past exalted rulers were in charge of the initiation of a class. Luncheon was served and later there was an entertainment.

The officers of Eastern Star lodge, No. 44, A. F. and A. M., attended the annual Grand Lodge Communication in Hartford Wednesday. Afternoon and evening sessions were held.

Eddie John of this city, who was sentenced in the Windham county superior court at Putnam, Friday, January 4, to one year in jail by Judge George E. Hinman, after he had pleaded guilty to operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, was released from Brookiyn jail Monday night, after commitment of one month.

It was stated that John was released on probation for the balance of his sentence of eleven months. John was arrested in Danielson September 29, by Stte Policeman Keith after the machine he was driving had collided with a car owned by a Springfield man. At the time, John's operator's license had been suspended after conviction of a charge of driving while intoxicated and because John ran away after the accident he was charged with avoiding responsibility.

The novelty dance given at Al-Pierre Taparin Wednesday evening was a decided success. The music by the Rumbling Trade merry as gayeties

George Gaudreau, 13, of Hewitt street, sustained a severe cut on the ear while coasting down Summit street hill, Wednesday afternoon, when his sled tipped over and the boy slid on the hard crust. He was taken to his home.

Guard Against "Flu" With Musterole

Musterole is a counter-irritant that relieves congestion (which is what a cold really is) and stimulates circulation.

It has all the good qualities of the old-fashioned mustard plaster without the blister.

Just rub it on with your finger-tips. First you will feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Have Musterole handy for emergency use. It may prevent serious illness.

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

COLCHESTER

The worst ice storm in a long time commenced Tuesday. By night, limbs which were heavily coated with ice began to break off and put the electric lights out of commission as well as a number of telephone lines. The roads were heavily coated with ice, making traveling on them hard. The busses made their trips and were only a few minutes late.

There was a large attendance at the moving picture show in Tip Top hall for the benefit of the senior class of the high school. The picture was entitled The Man from Glengarry.

John M. Riley was a visitor in Hartford Wednesday.

At the meeting of the Fire company held in their room Monday evening the following were elected for the ensuing year: Foreman, Arthur H. Chapman; first assistant foreman, James E. Purcell; second assistant foreman, Harry Friedman; secretary, Francis Shea; treasurer, James E. Purcell; steward, Charles Lyman, Jr. The borough officials are to have the parlor of the engine house newly painted, papered and a new floor laid. The new Reo pumper and chemical engine is expected to arrive here about the 15th of this month.

Earle Stevens of East Hampton was a caller here Wednesday.

James Johnson was in Ekonk Wednesday.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

The demand for seats for the Old Homestead, which was played by local amateurs in the Warren Memorial hall Tuesday night, far exceeded the supply and as a result the play was repeated before another large audience Wednesday evening. The proceeds will be turned over to the boys' club. The town did not charge any rent for the hall on account of the purpose for which the funds are to be used.

The body of James Hampston, a former resident, was brought here from the Norwich state hospital on Tuesday for burial in St. Edward's cemetery.

The snow of Tuesday night and Wednesday morning was the heaviest of the season and several sleighs were out Wednesday. The state highway department had the snowplow out cleaning the state roads.

Deputy Judge Ernest K. Taft was on the bench Wednesday morning in the absence of Judge Heald who was confined to the house with a severe cold. The only case presented was that of John Christiansen for intoxication. He pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs which amounted in all to $20.43 and was paid by the accused.

MANSFIELD DEPOT

Mrs. J. W. Carpenter, wife of Rev. J. W. Carpenter of Mansfield Depot, formerly of the parish of East Killingly, Conn., and originally of Providence, R. I., died at the parsonage at 3.30 p. m., Tuesday, after suffering from a paralytic shock. She was stricken while at prayer meeting Thursday afternoon, Jan. 31, at the home of F. McCollum. She was the only child of Mrs. William Webb of Providence.

The funeral services are to be held at Providence.

For many years Mrs. Carpenter was connected with the Sunday school of the Broadway Baptist church, Providence.

MOOSUP

Moosup's woman judge, Mrs. Edith M. Kennedy, is winning considerable notice, as her square, impartial rulings have made their mark in this town. Allsides appear to be satisfied with her decisions.

Quit Oil Firm Because Of Suspected Bribe

Archibald Roosevelt, who recently testified before the Senate Committee investigating the Teapot-Dome lease. He claims he quit the Sinclair Oil companies because of what had been revealed to him as to the leasing of the naval reserve. He states that he had grave although not proven, suspicions of the processes by which Sinclair obtained the lease and he felt he could not in justice to himself, remain in their employ. Roosevelt was president of the Union Petroleum Company and on the boards of other subsidiary companies of the big oil aggregation.

NEW LONDON TO HAVE MEETING OF STATE S. A. R. WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 6.—Archibald Buchanan, of Mansfield Center, agent of the state board of education, who sustained a dislocated right shoulder yesterday afternoon when he tripped and fell on the steps of the Jennings school, was discharged at Lawrence hospital this afternoon, returning to his home. Other patients discharged were Mrs. Edward Latham, of Centerbrook and Mrs. Robert Palmer of Waterford.

Mrs. Anna Hahn, widow of Joseph Hahn, died this afternoon at her home, 220 Huntington street, after a lingering illness of heart trouble. Mrs. Hahn is survived by a son, Magie Hahn of New London and by three daughters, Mrs. Morris Rosoff and Miss Rose Hahn of New London, and a daughter who resides in New York.

Bernard F. Smith and Mrs. Nora O'Grady of 9 Fourth street, were married this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, the nuptial mass being celebrated by Rev. John J. McGrath. Timothy O'Leary was best man and Miss Mary Hill attended the bride. A reception was held following the ceremony at 9 Fourth street, after which Mr. and Mrs. Smith left on a wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside at 9 Fourth street. Mr. Smith is yard switchman in the employ of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad.

Mrs. Katheryn A. Edgecomb, 82, died last night at her home on Jefferson avenue, death ending an illness of many months' duration from infirmities attending advanced age. Mrs. Edgecomb was born in New London, the daughter of Edwin E. and the late Mary Wolcott Manwaring.

The funeral of Anthony Samataro, formerly of New London, who died at New Haven, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, a mass of requiem being celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, where a volley was fired over the grave and taps sounded by a squad of sailors from the submarine base.

Minnie B., 42, wife of Patriak J. Foley, died yesterday at her home, 3 Denison court, Groton, death terminating a lengthy illness. Besides her husband Mrs. Foley, is survived by her mother, Mrs. Mary Baldwin, a sister, Mrs. Joseph Bailey, and a brother, Jesse I. Baldwin of New London.

Fire was discovered at 4.30 o'clock this morning in the home of Bert Warner, 30 Home street, when a lively blaze was in progress and which probably originated from a defective oil burning heater. A still alarm summoned Deputy Chief Thomas Shipman and the Northwest Hose company. The fire was burning briskly for furnishings in the room had been ignited. However, the work of subduing the fire occupied a short time for a deluge of chemicals extinguished the threatening blaze, but not until the room had been badly damaged. The investigation of Deputy Chief Shipman resulted in the opinion that oil leaking from a defective connection of the stove and being ignited by the flames from the burner, caused the blaze.

Andrew J. Maher, 69, member of the plumbing firm of Murray & Maher, died this morning at his home, 358 Broad street, from a complication of diseases. Mr. Maher is survived by his wife and a daughter, Mrs. Harry L. McGuire, of New London. He was a member of New London lodge of Elks for many years and was a trustee of the order. He was a democrat in politics and had served as a member of the board of water and sewer commissioners. He was identified with the directorate of the New London Baseball club when New London was a member of the Eastern league and which time Morton F. Plant was owner of the club.

Mr. Maher was taken ill about two months ago.

Arthur Boucher, of 37 Franklin street, Norwich, was in New London yesterday and went to the Y. M. C. A. cafeteria for lunch. There he hung his overcoat while he eat. John Marooney, a youth who is a stranger in this city, happened in and also took off his coat and hung it up. When he went out in a few minutes he took the Boucher coat and left his own. Mr. Boucher did not miss the coat till he had finished his meal. Then he started to find it. He was unsuccessful, but his friend soon observed a young man wearing the Boucher garment. He called a policeman and Marooney was arrested. The latter claimed he was under the influence of intoxicating liquor else, he said, he would not have exchanged the coats Marooney said he came from Providence and that things at his home were not pleasant for him. He declared that he got the liquor he drank in the basement of the Salvation Army building and that it was supplied to him by Mike Sullivan, a man who was in the navy. Marooney was turned over to Probation Officer Mansfield and the stolen coat was given to Mr. Boucher.

Miss Melvina Mason, of 15 Beradell place, secretary of the girls' club of the Y. W. C. A., was held up and robbed of a small sum of money on Huntington street last night. The thief obtained $3 and a key.

Miss Mason was passing the corner of Stony Hill and Huntington street about 10 o'clock when, she asserts, a man jumped from behind a tree and seized her purse, which she carried on her wrist and which contained the money. The thief then searched Miss Mason's coat pockets and in doing so he removed a key.

Miss Mason did not make the incident known last night, but did do so today when she reported it to the police.

The condition of Miss Ruth Williams of Blackhall street, a nurse at Lawrence hospital, who has been ill at the Mitchell ward of the institution some time with diphtheria, is considerably improved and she will be able to resume her duties, it is believed, during the present month.

As a result of falling in the yard of her home on West Colt street yesterday, Mrs. David Nagle, wife of Patrolman Nagle, sustained a fracture of a bone in her leg, the fracture having been revealed by an X-ray picture taken at Lawrence hospital.

The Nameaug Engine company's fire apparatus in responding to a call for aid yesterday afternoon for a blaze at the plant of the Robert Gair company at Montville, was in collision with an automobile on Williams street, but only trivial damage resulted. Chief Rose, however, reported the collision at the police station, but the driver of the automobile was not known. The automobile was descending the grade when the fire apparatus was climbing it. The speed of the auto, which was a Ford coupe, was excessive, causing it to skid as the fire apparatus was about to pass, the automobile side-swiping the larger vehicle.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley St. C. Donnelly left last night for Miami, Fla., to remain several weeks.

Mr. and Mrs. Edmund D. Barker of Channing street are in Florida where they will remain a number of weeks.

Mrs. Louis B. Lincoln of Willetta avenue, and her children have moved to Madison, N. J., where they will reside. Mr. Lincoln, a former newspaper writer in New London, has recently become editor of the Madison Eagle, a weekly publication.

Charles B. Greene left today for St. Petersburg, Fla., and will not return to New London until spring.

At the annual banquet of the state Society of the Sons of the American Revolution to be held at the Hotel Mohican Washington's birthday afternoon, Rear Admiral F. C. Billard, U. S. C. G., commandant of the United States coast guard service, stationed at Washington, D. C., will be the principal speaker. Admiral Billard was at one time stationed in New London and was superintendent of the local United States coast guard academy.

Assessor Frederick C. Burrows was absent from his desk in the municipal building today, being ill at his home.

Ernest Champlin of Westerly, Buddy Seipel of Shaw street, Miss Catherine Scott of Westerly and Mrs. Angelo Pucci of Westerly, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were able to return to their respective homes today.

A three-cornered accident occurred late this afternoon when two automobiles were damaged, one badly and a trolley car somewhat disfigured. The accident occurred near Hallam street when a machine, owned and operated by Frederick Middleton, 647 Ocean avenue, was headed in a southerly direction. As Middleton's car, a Ford coupe, approached Hallam street, a Dodge touring car, owned and operated by William J. Siteman of the Hotel Strand, New Haven and which had been parked beside the curb, started in motion. Middleton was in the act of causing his machine to pass Siteman's car and the former sounded his siren to warn the other autoist. As Middleton's car turned out to pass Siteman's machine it entered the rails of the Connecticut company and as the trolley car which left State street at 4.45 o'clock was approaching, Middleton applied his brakes, but instead of the machine coming to a stop it skidded along the slippery pavements. The trolley car did not stop either, and crashed against Middleton's car, which was forced backward a considerable distance and against Siteman's machine. Middleton's car is a complete loss, according to the owner. There was little left intact when Middleton scrambled from it unhurt except for a few minor bruises.

Sergeant Charles Hammond this evening reported a section of Bank street in dangerous condition because of broken pavements. The matter will be called to the attention of the highway department tomorrow.

A dog owned by Lieut. Thorne of the submarine base, was killed this afternoon when the animal was struck by a commercial car, operated by Stanley F. Searle of 256 Montauk avenue as the machine was being driven through Bank street.

A robbery occurred at the Fournier house, 147 Bank street, last night or today, presumably this forenoon and as a result Mrs. Bert De Vault, a lodger there, is mourning the loss of all her jewelry.

Mrs. DeVault complained to the police this evening that the jewelry, consisting of a lady's wrist watch, 17 jewel, with a square chip diamond in each corner; a lady's gold ring with amethyst setting, pair of earrings with sapphire setting and a pair of earrings of the gypsy type, had been stolen from a bureau drawer. Mrs. De Vault asserted that she wore the jewelry last evening and depositied the articles in the bureau drawer about 10 o'clock. Late this afternoon she discovered that the jewelry had been stolen. It is more probably that the thief had knowledge of Mrs. De Vault being out of the room occasionally and used a skeleton key in order to gain admission.

Several moving blocks in State street in front of the union station are so loose that they are dangerous for vehicles passing over them.

Samuel Shapiro reported to the police this evening that some thief had entered his room while he was away from it and had stolen a gold chain, a silver fountain pen, an old English coin and a couple of nice hair brushes. The police found that entrance was effected by some one who had a key.

CHIEF JUSTICE TAFT HAD ATTACK OF INDIGESTION

Washington, Feb. 6.—Chief Justice Taft, by direction of his physician, Dr. Thomas August, has cancelled all engagements for the immediate future and entered upon a period of complete rest. This course was determined upon after the chief justice had suffered an attack of indigestion today. Although the attack is yielding to treatment he followed his physician's instructions and went to bed.

Because of his illness Mr. Taft was unable to attend the funeral of Woodrow Wilson for which he had been named an honorary pall-bearer. At the same time he decided to abandon a trip to New York and New Haven which he had planned for tomorrow.

Although the supreme court is in a three weeks' recess, he had been working intensely in preparing opinions for delivery upon the re-assembling of the court February 18. It is believed too close application to this duty is responsible in part for his condition.

MAGNESIA BEST FOR YOUR INDIGESTION

Warns Against Doping Stomach With Artificial Digestants

Most people who suffer, either occasionally or chronically, from gas, sourness and indigestion, have now discontinued disagreeable diets, patent foods and the use of harmful drugs, stomach tonics, medicines and artificial digestants, and instead, following the advice so often given in these columns, take a teaspoonful or two tablets of Bisurated Magnesia in a little water after meals, with the result that their stomach no longer troubles them, they are able to eat as they please and they enjoy much better health. Those who use Bisurated Magnesia never dread the approach of meal time because they know this wonderful ant-acid and food corrective, which can be obtained from any good drug store, will instantly neutralize the stomach acidity, sweeten the stomach, prevent food fermentation, and without the slightest pain or discomfort. Try this plan yourself, but be certain to get pure Bisurated Magnesia, especially prepared for stomach use.

RAIN KILLS THE BIRDS

New England ornithologists report great mortality among the birds this summer. Usually heavy rains have drowned fledglings and starved their fathers and mothers to death by the thousands. From a single tall chimney at one town in Maine two wheelbarrow loads of dead swallows were taken. They died of starvation, says the bird experts. Swallows, the same authorities declare, fly with their mouths open and feed on the insects with which the summer air abounds. The heavy rains this season have driven the insects to the ground. The food supply of the swallows has thus been cut off, and great numbers of the birds have died of exhaustion in the chimneys in which they nest.

But swallows are not the only birds that suffer from the rains. Those that nest on the ground or in low bushes along the banks of streams have been severely affected. Nests with eggs in them have been swept away in flooded meadows. Young birds were drowned where they were hatched New York Herald.

Lose Your Fat, Keep Your Health

Superfluous flesh is not healthy, neither is it healthy to diet or exercise too much for its removal, or to apply greases and salves to the skin. The simplest method known for reducing the overfat body easily and steadily is the Marmola Method, tried and endorsed by thousands. Marmola Prescription Tablets contain an exact dose of the famous Marmola Prescription, and are sold by druggists the world over at one dollar for a box. They are harmless and leave no wrinkles or flabbiness. They are popular because effective and convenient. Ask your druggist for them or send price direct to the Marmola Co., 4612 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich., and procure a box.

You'll Have To Get Back Your OLD-TIME VIM

It Takes Keen, Active Men of Blood and Iron To Make Money Today.

Tired, Nervous Weaklings, Lack the Force, Courage and Will Power to Succeed.

WITHOUT health and strength your brain cannot work right—You are no match for the live, wide-awake vigorous fellow. He stays ahead of you with ease while you slip back—and soon people begin to speak of you as a failure in business, a poor provider in your home, and a sort of "rot-bladder" at social affairs—a burden to yourself and to others.

Yet, as a matter of fact, you are probably not suffering from anything like the lack of ailments you think you are, and once you get more iron into your blood to make it rich and red you will quickly notice a multitude of alarming symptoms disappear. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue—muscle and brain.

NUXATED IRON, for example, contains iron like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples and like the iron in your blood. Test your blood by the new method. Next time you feel tired, nervous and run-down, or if you suffer from weakness or lack of vitality, you owe it to yourself to make the following test—

See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were all but ruined by drugs have astonishingly increased their strength and endurance in two weeks' time while taking iron in the proper form. And this after they had in some cases been going on for months without getting hardly a bit from anything. Nuxated Iron is prescribed and recommended by physicians and used by over 4,000,000 people annually. Success guaranteed or money refunded. At all druggists.

ARE YOU	YOU CAN BE
Tired and careworn?	Strong and well.
Worried and discouraged?	Keen and active.
Nervous and run-down?	Full of optimism.
Does your blood lack iron?	A man of blood and iron.

IRON IS RED BLOOD FOOD

Why Don't You Try Nuxated Iron? It gives astonishing strength, vigor and endurance to run-down folks in two weeks' time in many instances.

NUXATED IRON ENRICHES THE BLOOD—GIVES YOU NEW STRENGTH AND ENERGY

MARKET IRREGULAR AT CLOSE

..New York, Feb. 6—Stock prices opened firm and then turned irregular in today's quiet trading, which was restricted by the crippled wire service to the west and the fact that the session closed at 12.30 p. m. out of respect for the memory of Woodrow Wilson.

Operators on the long side confined their activities to a few issues, staging a bullish demonstration in Baldwin which sent that stock up more than 2 1-2 points to 130 3-4, a new high for the year, extensive short covering giving impetus to the rise. It sagged to 130 1-8 at the close. Kreage jumped 10 points to 310, a record high, and Liggett & Meyers B moved up 4 points on one sale.

Buying was influenced to some extent by the reports that the Mexican revolution had been crushed, higher foreign exchange rates and the publication of statistics showing that January witnessed the first monthly increase in pig iron production since last June.

Sugars, which have been accumulated lately on the improved trade outlook, gave one of the best demonstrations of group strength. American beet sugar climbed 3 points and, American Sugar Refining and Cuban-American preferred advanced 2 each and Punta Alegre moved up nearly a point.

Good buying also took place in the oils although not all the early gains were maintained. Tidewater and Cosden preferred each gained about 2 1-2 points, Shell Union was the most active, improving fractionally on turn over of nearly 50,000 shares. Houston dropped a point on profit-taking.

Strength of Otis Elevator, which moved up 3 1-4 points, was associated with reports of the early declaration of a stock dividend, but these lacked confirmation.

Heavy realizing sales in corn products, Hayes Wheel, American Tobacco issues, Dupont and Wilson company resulted in net to 2 points.

Southern Pacific crossed 90 for the first time this year and then fell back to 89 1-4, up 5-8 on the day. Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio preferred and Erie first preferred closed at net gains of about a point, but the other issues in that group moved irregularly within narrow limits.

Call money held steady at 4 1-4 per cent. all day. Time money and commercial paper markets were dull with 4 3-4 per cent. the ruling rate.

Foreign exchanges were firm. Demand sterling moved up a cent to $4.-81 3-8 and French francs rallied about 5 points to 4.65 1-2 cents.

BOND MARKET

New York, Feb. —Bond prices were fairly firm in today's short session of the market, with quiet trading unproductive of any special features. Strength of the Mexican government issues, however, attracted attention. The effect of the evacuation of Vera Cruz, believed to be a death blow to the revolt in Mexico, was shown in advancing prices for these bonds, the 5s gaining more than a point and the 4 per cent. certificates moving up more than 2 points.

Price movements were mixed in the railroad issues, seaboard adjustment 5s leading the advance in the speculative field, while dwindling inquiry resulted in fractional losses for some of the high grade bonds.

Despite the short business day in the financial district a total of $35,-000,000 in new bond issues was offered, and found a ready sale, the $15,000,000 Lehigh Valley coal bonds being absorbed before noon.

Eastern Cuba 7 1-2s were the most active of the sugar issues and Punta Alegre 7s also were sold at higher prices.

Award of an $11,000,000 Los Angeles bond issue to a syndicate headed by the National City Company was expected to be followed by an early public offering here.

Other offerings scheduled for tomorrow include $13,664,000 Illinois Central & Chicago, St. Louis & New Orleans, 40-year joint refunding 5 per cent. bonds at 94 1-4 to yield 5.35 per cent.; $5,700,000 Continental Gas & Electric 30 year collateral trust 7 per cent. bonds at par and accrued interest; $2,769,500 Wabash Railway one to nine years 6 per cent. Equipment notes to yield from 5.35 to 6.75 per cent. and 6,000 shares of General Gas & Electric Corporation cumulative preferred stock at 101 1-2 to yield 7.85 per cent.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Feb. 6—For the ninth consecutive time wheat today showed an advance. Considerable new buying appeared to result from President Coolidge's remarks indicating likelihood that import duty on wheat would be raised to 45 cents a bushel. The finish was unsettled at the same as yesterday's close to 5-8 up, May 112 1-2 to 112 5-8 and July 111 7-8 to 112 1-8. Corn closed 1-4 to 1-2c higher, oats unchanged to 1-4c advance and provisions showing gains of 2c to 17c.

Bullish sentiment in wheat was partly stimulated by gossip current that crop conditions over the winter wheat belt have been sufficiently unfavorable to cause misgivings about probable serious damage. Attention to expected curtailment of spring wheat acreage tended also to emphasize the buying impulse.

The storm bound condition of telegraph facilities kept purchasing orders restricted in volume, and gave effect to profit taking sales.

One house that sold wheat here today was reported to have bought 4,-000,000 bushels in Winnipeg since Monday. On the other hand, smaller speculative sellers were reversing their position at the last, in view of sudden renewed buying on that part of a Chicago bull leader.

Corn closed at an equality with the highest prices heretofore on this season's crop. Stormy weather was a bullish influence both on corn and oats and there was general comment that the period of accumulation of stocks of corn at terminals was drawing to a close.

Higher quotations on hogs gave a lift to the provisions market.

CURB MARKET

New York, Feb. 6—Conflicting price movements took place in today's curb market with major activity on the downward side.

A break of 4 points in Vacuum Oil, which hsold as low as 43 3-4 in reflection of speculative disappointment over the size of the extra dividend, featured the oil group. Losses of a point or more also were recorded by Standard Oils of Kansas and Kentucky and Prairie Oil & Gas, Solith Pennsylvania Oil advanced $ 1-2 on a small turnover and Latin-American was active around 94, its top price.

Mixed changes took place in the industrial group. Ford Motors of Canada advanced 2 points to 478 and Checker Cab dropped 2 to 28. Dubilier Radio touched another new top at 19 1-4. Liggett & Meyers B advanced over a point in sympathy with the rise in the old stock on the "big board".

NEW ENGLAND SUICIDE RATE IS LOWEST

New England's suicide mortality rate is lower than any other section of the country, according to the records of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company. The average death rate from self destruction, per 100,-000 population is: Maine 6; New Hampshire 9; Vermont 4; Massachusetts 5; Rhode Island 8; Connecticut 5. Only Rhode Island's rate is in excess of the general average for the country, which is 7.

Most of the states with outstanding high suicide rates are in the west south and southwest with Oklahoma in the lead. California and Washington also show a suicide mortality rate above the average.

In its effort to determine the extent of suicide in the industrial population living in the cities of this country, the Metropolitan found that approximately three men commit suicide each year to every woman who destroys her life.

Statistics show that firearms are the commonest means of suicide employed by men and that few women take their lives in this manner. Poison and asphyxiation are the favored methods of suicide for women.

Study of suicide death rates over a long period of years emphasizes the fact that plans for self destruction chosen by women are usually relatively slow methods which do not disfigure the body or result in the drawing of blood.

	Common	8,486,000	$19,486,000

From a letter of Mr. Irvin W. Day, Vice-President of the Company, we summarize as follows:

BUSINESS: The Connecticut Light and Power Company supplies electric light and power to a population of about 300,000 in an important industrial section of Connecticut, including the cities of Waterbury and New Britain and the Naugatuck Valley district. The properties operated, including new construction to be in operation about July 1, 1924, represent an installed generating capacity of 155,300 horse power, of which 34,600 horse power is hydro-electric (two plants); about 200 miles of high tension transmission lines; 21 substations, and distributing systems in about 20 cities and towns.

SECURITY: The First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds are secured, in the opinion of counsel, by a first mortgage on the hydro-electric plant at Stevenson on the Housatonic River and the new tide water steam-electric plant at Devon, now nearing completion, together having an installed generating capacity of 115,000 horse power, 124 miles of important transmission lines, and valuable undeveloped water powers; and by a second mortgage, subject to the $1,000,000 divisional bonds, on the Company's second hydro-electric plant (9,600 horse power) and 25 miles of transmission lines. They are also a first lien on a 999 year lease of the electric distributing systems in Waterbury, New Britain and a number of other towns, including a steam-electric plant of about 30,700 horse power capacity.

The Company's property investment is valued at $28,751,489, or more than twice its $13,114,000 funded debt. This valuation does not include net current assets of $3,241,097. The owned property alone is valued at $20,945,377, of which $18,448,294 represents the property on which the $13,114,000 First and Refunding Mortgage Bonds are a first mortgage.

EARNINGS:

Years Ending December 31,	1921	1922	1923
Gross Earnings	$3,969,829	$4,426,621	$5,151,859
Operating Expenses and Taxes	2,302,191	2,779,730	3,375,457
Net Earnings	1,667,638	1,646,891	1,776,402
Other Income	60,859	160,777	441,498
Net Income	$1,728,497	$1,807,668	$2,217,900
Present Annual Interest and Rental Requirements, including interest on this issue,			$1,214,085

The estimated net income for 1924 is $2,783,350, reflecting, for a part of that year, the benefit from the large investment made and being made in additional power facilities which will add 90,000 horse power during 1924 to the present power generating capacity of the system and will greatly reduce the unit-cost of production.

SINKING FUND: Annual Sinking Fund, first payment June 1, 1925, to be applied to the purchase or call of Series B bonds, will be sufficient to retire, prior to maturity, at least $3,500,000 of the Series B Bonds.

We Recommend these Bonds for Investment

Price 96½ and accrued interest, yielding about 5¾%

CARD OF THANKS

During my great sorrow in the loss of my beloved wife, neighbors and friends, the members of the Rosary Society and others, were most consoling in their words of sympathy and acts of kindness; also in their gift of beautiful flowers. The memory of all will be cherished with heartfelt gratitude.

JOHN C. QUINLAN,
Norwich, Conn., Feb. 6th, 1924.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to take this means of expression of our deep appreciation for the many kind acts of sympathy shown us during the long illness and following the death of our husband and father. We also desire to thank those who were so kind as to send flowers to the funeral.

(Signed)

MILITARY TRAINING FOR CITIZENS IN CAMPS

Military Training Camps, under supervision of officers of the United States army, will be held at Camp Devens, Massachusetts and Fort Adams, Rhode Island, beginning August 1st and closing August 31st, 1924.
Young men 17 to 24 years of age, American born, or who have made application for first naturalization papers, may attend. Evidence of good character, and good physical condition will be required. No obligation for military service is involved. Attendance is absolutely free of expense. Railway fare, food, uniforms and medical attention are furnished by the federal government.
Four courses are included in the instruction—Basic, Red, White and Blue. The last is open to those who took the white course in 1923 and to warrant officers or enlisted men of the Regular Army, National Guard or Reserve Corps of nine months, or more, service and who have a high school or equivalent education. Graduates of this course may, subject to examination, be commissioned in the Officers' Reserve Corps when twenty-one, or more years of age.
At these camps all receive instruction in military drill and theoretical subjects. Individual and massed athletics are taught.
The young man leaves camp with improved bearing, greater self-confidence, increased chest measurement, and with, on an average, five pounds more good muscle.
Full information may be obtained from Army Base, Boston 9, Mass., Hon. John L. Gilson, 185 Church St., New Haven, Army Recruiting Stations or Navy Recruiting Stations.

Yale Courses for Teachers

With the opening of the second term of the University year at Yale this week public school teachers throughout Connecticut will have an opportunity to take courses in education and academic subjects given under the auspices of the department of education. These courses, although a continuation of those given the first term, have been arranged in distinct units not necessitating the work of the first term as a prerequisite.
The academic subjects include English, history and political science. In English a course in "Nineteenth Century Prose Writers" will be given by Assistant Professors Crawford and F. E. Pierce. A course dealing with "The Development of Western Civilization from the Reformation to the Present" will be given by Assistant Professors F. W. Pitman and R. A. Newhall.
The courses offered in education deal with the administration, the curriculum, and educational psychology. Professor Spaulding, chairman of the department of education, will give three courses in administration. These include 'The Administration of City School Systems,' designed especially for principals, superintendents and qualified teachers desiring to prepare for administrative positions, and "Problems in School Administration." The last is a seminar for the study of problems involved in the conduct of schools and school systems.

TELEPHONES IN STATE KEEP CONSTANT INCREASE

A new high record for telephone development in this state was established in the year just closed, convincingly indicating in Connecticut a period of intense business activity and disclosing a unprecedented demand for telephone service for social uses.
During the year ended December 31 last a net gain was recorded of 17,437 telephones making 236,340 the total number now efficiently operated for public use by the Southern New England Telephone Company. This is the largest growth this company has had in any year in its history, exceeding even the gain of 16,586 during the boom period of 1920. Officials of the company state that the present indications forecast a further substantial development during the current year.
Of the five districts into which the state is divided by the telephone company to facilitate its business, the Hartford district with an increase of 5,727 telephones shows the largest gain. The New Haven district with a gain of 4,320 is next: Bridgeport district with 3,622 is third: Waterbury district with 2,048 ranks fourth and New London district with 1,716 is fifth in line.
There are 36,112 telephones in use in New Haven, a gain of 2,907 during the year. Hartford has 35,764, a gain of 3,308; Bridgeport has 1408 more than a year ago and a total of 21,585; Waterbury with 13,107 telephones shows a net gain of 1,244 while New London has a total of 7,294, a gain of 453.
The net gains in 1923 in some of the principal cities of the state and the number of telephones in use in these cities on December 31, follows:

	Gain	In Use
New Haven	2907	36112
Hartford	3308	35764

TAFTVILLE

The best sliding of the year came Tuesday, when Providence Street was a sheet of ice from Post Office Hill to Merchants avenue. Crowds of youngsters not only got out their sleds and doubles, but some of the more daring came down the steep Merchants avenue grade on skates. Sleds starting at the top of Merchants avenue were able to go all the way to Post Office Hill, which is something over a half a mile. The curve at the bottom of the hill was icy and rather sharp, so that many coasters came to grief, by skidding up against the curb on Norwich avenue. Those who were skating had some trouble in "walking back" having to get up the hill by sticking the points of their skates into the ice.

Automobilists did not enjoy the slippery roads as much as the children. Going on all the village streets was very bad, and even horse drawn vehicles had difficulty, as it was hard for the animals to keep on their feet. Post Office Hill, always a bad place in slippery weather, was the scene of many near-accidents. During the day, cars that tried to negotiate it without chains soon learned their mistake. A heavily loaded coal truck caused several by-standers to gasp when it began backing down the hill, but was saved by the skill of the driver, and it finally made the grade.

The funeral of Mrs. Arthur Dupuis was held Wednesday morning from her late home on Norwich avenue, with a requiem high mass sung at Sacred Heart church. Burial was in the family lot in Sacred Heart Cemetery on the Canterbury Turnpike.

Castle Perilous, No. 3747, K. O. K. A. held a conclave Wednesday evening in the vestry of Taftville Congregational church. Two paynims were initiated into the degree of Page.

C. W. Beckwith of Old Mystic was a caller in the village Wednesday afternoon.

A Workers Conference was held Tuesday evening at the Taftville Congregational church with Superintendent Fred Knowles presiding. Several important matters were discussed. At the close of the business session, refreshments were served by the Misses Ruby Houston, Edith L. Heap, Jane V. Mayor, Mary Alice Watts, Gladys Kinder, Dorothy M. Aberg and Charlotte Pilling, all members of Miss Flossie Meyer's class.

Wilfred Pollard of Block Island, R. I., is the guest of his father, William Pollard of South Second avenue.

TRIANGULAR SHIFT IN POLICE BEATS

A triangular shift in police beats, which it was stated, was for the good of the service, was voted by the police commissioners Monday night and went into effect Wednesday night.

Edmund Maloney, who has had the day beat at the Falls from 9 a. m. to 7 p. m. was transferred to the night beat at Thamesville from 10 p. m. to 7 a. m.

William Ryan, who has had the Franklin square night beat from 6 p. m. to 3 a. m., was transferred to the day beat at the falls.

Charles McFadden, who has had the night beat at Thamesville, was transferred to the Franklin square night beat from 6 p. m. to 3 a. m.

Musical Program at Hospital.

Loyal Circle, K. D., gave a musical programme Sunday evening at the W. W. Backus hospital. The programme consisted of piano solos by Mrs. Olive R. Roberts, violin solos by Miss Elizabeth Lane, contralto solos, Mrs. Reuben Potter, Mrs. Olive R. Roberts accompanying.

Guests at Dinner

Bishop E. Campion Acheson, Archdeacon J. Eldred Brown, Rev. R. R. Graham and Rev. Lionel W. Mitchell, who attended the confirmation at Grace church, Yantic, Wednesday evening, were the guests of Rev. R. B. Day, the rector, at an informal dinner at the Wauregan house before the confirmation.

Serge Suit Prices

But little change in the prices for serge suits is promised from the reduction of 2 1-2 cents in the price of the cloth, announced by the American Woolen Co., when it is realized that this amounts to about 3 cents in the yardage of serge required for a suit.

A RELIABLE COUGH REMEDY

Why experiment with unknown remedies for that cough or cold when you can secure FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND? It is a safe and reliable remedy for the relief of coughs, colds, hoarseness. Equally beneficial for young and old. Mrs. Anna Cornell, Bridgeton, N. J., states: "I bought FOLEY'S HONEY AND TAR COMPOUND for my cold and find it great." Insist upon the genuine. Refuse substitutes. Adv. G. Osgood Co.

INSTRUCTED NORWICH TEACHERS ON VALUE OF THE SCHICK TEST

How the Schick test applied to school children or adults detects those who are susceptible to diphtheria and can then be made immune by inoculation with toxin anti-toxin was described by Dr. Howard Lanphere of the state department of health, Hartford, when he spoke at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the town hall at a meeting arranged by the town health board. It is the intention to carry on the Schick tests in the schools and thus have a part in the effort of the state to eliminate the effects of this disease, which has been known as the scourge of childhood, but which has been robbed of its terror by modern medical science.

Superintendent E. J. Graham introduced Dr. Lanphere to the gathering of about 100, mostly school teachers and said it was the object to have the school teachers pass on to the children in their grades what they would learn about the Schick test in order that the children might in turn explain to their parents.

There was no longer need for black despair on the part of parents when the physician's diagnosis says the child has diphtheria, said Dr. Lanphere. Given parents who are on the lookout for the welfare of their child, there need never be another death from diphtheria alone, provided the doctor is called early. With the knowledge we have there need never be another death from diphtheria. Some children, though not sick, carry the germs of diphtheria which can be transmitted to others. We can't detect these diphtheria carriers, but we can detect the children who are susceptible to the disease and it is with the susceptibility that medical science can deal by inoculation that gives immunity.

There is a natural immunity which some people have, said Dr. Lanphere, because their blood develops the ability to throw off the diphtheria germs. What is called passive immunity is secured by inoculation with anti-toxin, but this is temporary. Active immunity can be conferred in two ways; either the child can manufacture in his own body the protective anti-toxin, or it can be obtained by the inoculation with toxin anti-toxin. This will confer immunity on any child demonstrated to be susceptible to diphtheria.

Children up to the age of six years are so generally susceptible to diphtheria, said Dr. Lanphere, that it is a waste of time to apply the Schick test to them. They may all be given the toxin anti-toxin inoculation that will confer immunity from diphtheria. The Schick test is given by an inoculation in the forearm and will indicate whether a person will contract diphtheria if he has been exposed to it. After the inoculation, three things can be expected. Either nothing will happen, there will be a slight reddening of the skin at the point of infection for three or four days, or the reddening will presist for seven days, with hardening of the skin, slight temperature and other symptoms. The four day reddening indicates that the child is protected by his own blood. The seven day reddening is what is called a positive Schick test and indicates that the child is susceptible to exposure to diphtheria.

The positive test should be followed by an inoculation with toxin anti-toxin which confers permanent immunity. Dr. Lanphere recommended that another Schick test should be given not sooner than three months nor later than six months after the inoculation with toxin anti-toxin. With anti-toxin we have the cure for diphtheria and with toxin anti-toxin the immunity. The state furnishes free to every health officer the necessary supply of toxin anti-toxin.

Dr. Lanphere advised the teachers that the consent of parents is necessary before the children can be given inoculations.

He gave a demonstration of the Schick test by having a Norwich boy present who had been given the inoculation last Friday and had developed a positive Schick test.

Several questions were asked by teachers before the meeting adjourned.

ROTARIANS PAY TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF WILSON

During the meeting of the Norwich Rotary club on Wednesday noon at the Wauregan Hotel warm tribute was paid to ex-president Woodrow Wilson by President Charles A. Saxton and members of the club stood with bowed heads for a minute in silent tribute to the memory of Mr. Wilson. The American flag that is ever present at the Rotary meetings was lowered to half mast and will so remain for the period of 30 days of national mourning.

At the business session President Saxton presided. The resignation of Louis R. Porteous, who is leaving Norwich to make his home in Portland, Me., was announced and accepted with much regret by the club. L. M. Carpenter, reporting for the Jewett City members of the club, set Thursday evening, Feb. 21 as the date on which these five members would be hosts to the club at the Ashland club in Jewett City. Mr. Carpenter who is also chairman of the On to New Britain committee reported that he was in possession of full information regarding the spring conclave which will be held in that city on April 3 and 4. Registration cards for the conference were distributed and quite a number signified their intention of attending this important meeting.

President Saxton called attention to the concert to be given by Miss Pearson this month and a large number volunteered to sel lat least five tickets. It was announced that the topic of the debate next week would be "The Mellon Tax Plan" a subject that is bound to prove interesting. Joseph C. Worth, who is chairman of the trap-shooting committee at the Norwich Golf Club called attention to the shoots being held at the club every Saturday afternoon and extended a hearty invitation to everyone who is interested in the sport to attend, whether a member of the golf club or not.

Dr. Howard A. Lanphere, a member of the state board of health, who was to have been the speaker of the day was unable to be present owing to the icy condition of the roads between here and Hartford. The time however was agreeably spent the club being entertained by Otto F. Ernst, Edwin A. Harris and Frank L. Pullen.

As Wednesday's meeting marked the opening of the attendance contest with the Meriden club there was close to a 100 per cent. attendance at the meeting. The one or two absentees have promised to make up the loss during the next week. Dr. Clarence A. Spear was the song leader for the luncheon. The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

TEMPLETON WAS INVITED TO CONGRESSIONAL RECEPTION

Owing to the death of former President Wilson, all social affairs at the White House for the following thirty days were cancelled. Among these was the congressional reception of President and Mrs. Coolidge set for Thursday evening, February 7, to which Governor and Mrs. Templeton had been invited.

Governor Templeton had already been obliged to decline, because of a previous engagement to speak at the father and son banquet in Manchester on Thursday evening. This also accounts for his inability to be present at the McKinley dinner in Hartford on the night of February 7.

THREE SONE CHILDREN MUST PAY $690 TAX

The $54,096.16 new estate left by Isabel Kelley Sone, of New York, late mother of Edith Sone Rock of Lyme, will yield $690.96 in inheritance taxation to the state, according to an order signed by Sturgess & John P. O'Brien directing the executors of the estate to pay such sum to the office of the state tax commission.

Under her will, executed on February 1, 1917, Mrs. Sone divided her net property equally between her three children, Belle R. Sone of 43 West 68th street, and Louis K. Sone of 170 West 74th street, and Edith Sone Rock. She also named her three children, without bonds as the executors. The order of the surrogate places a tax of $230.32 upon the share of each child.

The gross value of the estate left by Mrs. Sone, who was the widow of Louis V. Sone, member of the firm of Sone & Fleming Manufacturing company, New York, dealers in oil and petroleum, amounted to $33,804.67.

The expenses, as charged up against the gross value, are for the funeral, $1,173; administration, $3,500; creditors, $4,356.57, and executors' commission, $478.94.

Mrs. Sone, who was a daughter of the late Mathew M. Kieley, a builder and the late Rachel Kieley, died on September 8, 1923.

Louis V. Sone, husband of the testatrix, documents show, was the president of the Sone & Fleming Manufacturing company, and a son of the late Adele M. McCreary. He died at the age of 61 on October 26,1907, leaving a net estate of $471,439.45, and by his will, executed on July 5, 1906, he ordered this to be divided as follows:

To his widow and three children, each $25,000, absolutely. To his widow, two-fifths of the remainder, also absolutely. To each of his three children one-fifth of the residue in trust for life, with the principal at his or her death to their respective issues.

The gross value of the estate left by Mr. Sone, who named his widow, without bonds, as the executrix as his estate, amounted to $578,464.47.

Mathew M. Kieley, father of Mrs. Sone, died on November 24, 1882. His first wife, Rachael (mother of Mrs. Sone) died at Haverstraw, N. Y., on August 8, 1866. He later married, leaving at the time of his death, in addition to his widow, Hannah M. Kieley, and Mrs. Sone, two other children, Margaret A. Gaston, and Mary L. Kieley, the latter of Elizabeth, N. J.

WILL CHARGE JURY IN AUTOMOBILE DAMAGE SUIT

The evidence was completed and three arguments were made in the superior court in N. L. Tuesday in the trial of the case of Robert Moore, summer resident at the Pequot, against the Gager-Crawford Co., of New London for $10,000 for personal injuries and damages to an automobile arising from an automobile collision at the corner of Montauk and Garner avenues on July 9, 1920 and a counter suit of the defendant against the plaintiff for $1,000 damages to an automobile truck as the result of the same accident.

The witnesses Tuesday afternoon were Timothy F. Connors, Mrs. Ida Bragaw, Arthur H. Gager and Russell E. Beckwith. Connors was driving the defendant's auto truck and he testified that the Moore car struck the delivery truck as it was coming out of Gardner avenue; Mrs. Bragaw was on the front of a passing trolley car which was struck by the Moore automobile after the collision and she said that the two automobiles came together at the same time; Mr. Gager, senior member of the defendant company, testified that the auto truck was sold for $50 after the accident as it wasn't worth repairing and Mr. Beckwith told of allowing $50 in trade for the truck.

Arguments were made by Attorney Arthur W. Chambers of New Haven for the plaintiff and Attorneys Arthur T. Keefe and John C. Geary for the defendants, after which court adjourned until Thursday morning when Attorney Nathan Belcher will make the concluding argument for the plaintiff and Judge Christopher L. Avery will charge the jury.

REV. E. H. SMITH ANTICIPATING RETURN FROM CHINA

In a letter this winter to friends here Rev. E. H. Smith of Ing-Hok, China, writes: "Do you realize how short the time now is before next July when we shall land D. V. among all our friends for a real visit. We count the weeks and days now until we start. This has been our longest time on the field, but it seems the shortest. God is very good to us. We are eager to see you all.

Writing of the work there he says, "Our daily lives are full of joy in the service. The Kingdom comes in a multitude of little things. So our lives here are made up of a multitude of things. We have to make up for the lack of Christian homes and schools and society. Duties are preaching, building, teaching. Here I am supposed to be general secretary of two Y. M. C. A.'s two days journey apart in important cities. Meanwhile my touring work takes me weeks and months on the road. Like Caesar's campaign in Gaul it seems as if everything needed to be done at once.

In a February magazine is a lengthy account of all that has since been accomplished in this section of China in large part through Mr. Smith's service since he began work there in 1901. Among results specified are the Huntington school for boys, a girls' school, Woodin Memorial church, parish house, modest hospital and dispensary.

During this last year's unsettled conditions in China, invading armies terrorized and seized inhabitants of provinces, compelling the poorer people in them to carry loads and to serve in the army. When the soldiers came to Ing-Hok, seized forty men to serve in the army, Mr. Smith went with them as one of their number sharing their work and its hardships that he might secure their release. This, by his presence and oversight, he was able to do on their reaching the first city south from Ing-Hok. When he returned with these men to their homes, Mrs. Owen Smith says, "Nothing that her son ever did so endeared him to the people of this province."

FRIVOLITY REWARD FOR SEASIDE SANATORIUM CHILD

One of the interesting incidents of Monday's meeting of the state tuberculosis commission was a report by one of the commissioners that he had received a check for ten dollars from one of the hardest working and most successful young business women of the state, asking him to use the money to buy "the most frivolous present he could think of" and to give it to "the most frivolous crippled child at The Seaside"—Connecticut's well known children's sanatorium at Niantic. The commission directed Dr. O'Brien of the Seaside to consult with the members of his nursing and teaching staff and to report at next week's meeting which one of his little patient's reserved the title of the "most frivolous." And as for "the most frivolous present possible" there were many suggestions made by the people present at the meeting, but most of these suggestions were adjudged too flippant for so serious a problem. It was finally decided to lay the matter on the table for a week, that the commission might study the facts in the case, perhaps seek advice from some children of their acquaintances interested in the Seaside.

CHARLES O. MURPHY ON PALMER ASSESSORS BOARD

Of local interest will be the announcement in a Palmer, Mass., newspaper that Charles O. Murphy, a native of this city and a former member of the town school board of Norwich, who recently removed to Palmer, has been elected to the board of assessors in the town election held on Monday, February 4th. The town of Palmer is to be congratulated upon having a man of Mr. Murphy's qualifications in that position as his knowledge of real estate values, acquired through years of experience in the building line, should make his services very valuable in carrying on the work of that office.

DEATH OF DAUGHTER OF MAJOR T. H. McHATTON

Norwich friends were grieved to learn from the New York Herald's Paris edition of Jan. 21, of the death of the little daughter of Major T. H. McHatton. The following is from the Paris Herald:

Mrs. Henry McHatton of Georgia and New York, has returned to the Hotel Savoy, Paris, having been recalled from Italy by a cable from her son, Major T. H. McHatton, saying that his little daughter, Elinore Elizabeth, died very suddenly last Tuesday of heart complications following measles. Mrs. McHatton expects to sail next Saturday for New York on the Paris and until she leaves Paris will be at the Hotel Savoy. Major McHatton is the head of a department at the University of Georgia and is living at Athens, Ga. His wife was Mlle Marie Elise Lustret, of Vichy, and has relations there in Paris.

MANSFIELD LOOKING UP LEVERMORE FAMILY HISTORY

(Special to The Bulletin)

Willimantic, Feb. 6.—People of Mansfield, where the winner of the Bok peace prize, Dr. Charles Herbert Levermore was born and of Lebanon where the $100,000 winner resided are deeply interested in him for the reason that few residents of those towns know that the now famous man ever lived in this section. Dr. Levermore has been away from Mansfield, the town of his birth for 64 years and from Lebanon, where he also resided, for 55 years. The old time residents of 60 and 70 years ago recall no family by the name of Levermore but do remember one known at that time as "Livermore." From 1858 to 1868 a Baptist preacher, Rev. Aaron Livermore was located at Goshen, in the town of Lebanon, where in addition to his pulpit and circuit religious duties he taught a number of pupils in a select school at his home. The clergyman was the father of the prize winner.

Vital statistics of the town were delved into by Town Clerk L. J. Storrs, of Mansfield, and he finds that Charles H. Livermore was born in that town October 16, 1856, the son of Rev. Aaron Russell and Mary Gay Skinner Livermore. The records further show that Aaron Livermore moved from East Windsor to Mansfield, where he purchased the Adolphus Landfear farm, Mansfield, September 5, 1842, in the section of the town now known as Mansfield Four Corners. Two years after the now noted man was born on December 28, 1858, Rev. Mr. Livermore sold the farm to Thomas Fish and moved to Goshen. When the family moved to other fields in 1863, Charles H. Livermore was only ten years old. As noted in the Norwich news, three years ago Mr. Levermore or Livermore visited at his old home in Goshen when he was the guest of a former school friend, William G. Thomas. The former Livermore home was situated about five miles from Lebanon Center. People of Mansfield do not recall any visits from the prize winner in recent years. George Fish, grandson of Thomas Fish, now occupies the farm formerly owned by the Livermores, at Mansfield Four Corners.

MISS MARY L. HOWARD COMING TO CENTRAL BAPTIST CHURCH

It was announced Wednesday that when the Woman's League of the Central Baptist church holds its indoor picnic Friday, an interesting program has been arranged. Following the picnic supper, devotional exercises will be led by Miss Alice M. Dean and there will be a vocal solo by Mrs. Helen M. T. Church. The address will be by Miss Mary L. Howard of Hartford, who is president of women's organizations for the state of Connecticut of the Baptist denomination.

Miss Howard comes of a pioneer family of Hartford, her father, the late James L. Howard having been at one time lieut.-governor of this state. At the close of the address, there will be a short reception to meet Miss Howard. Miss Alif Stevens, the president of the league, will preside during the exercises of the evening.

Before the picnic supper it has been arranged to have the members of the World Wide Guild present a simple pageant, "Following the Gleam."

FINDS CONDITIONS BOOMING AT HIALEAH

Mrs. James I. Hewitt of the Laurel Hill road who is now at Hialeah, Fla., writes home an interesting letter concerning that locality.

Reference is made to the work, night and day, of three shifts of men on the building for the holding of the Spanish game of Jai-Alai which is played by Spaniards from Cuba, the claim being made that Americans are not fast enough.

Much building is being done there. They have started on the horse race track and the fairs are to be held there. "Hialeah is only three years old," she writes, "but if it continues the way it has begun it bids fair to become a large city in a short time.

Mrs. Coolidge Finds Tanlac Perfect Tonic

Mrs. Marian Coolidge of 82 Water St., Hallowell, Maine, is another whose gratifying experience with Tanlac prompts her to publicly endorse the medicine.

"I honestly believe Tanlac is the best medicine ever made," said Mrs. Coolidge recently.

"It was nothing less than agony the way I suffered from indigestion. Although my appetite was very poor, what little I did eat caused awful pains in my stomach and around my heart. My nerves were so bad at times I could not lace my shoes. I spent many sleepless nights and felt so weak and worn-out I could hardly keep going.

"It is just grand to feel as fine as I do now. Every trace of indigestion and nervousness is gone. I enjoy my meals to the limit and I sleep like a child. I can't help but praise Tanlac it has been so good for me."

Tanlac is for sale by all good druggists. Accept no substitute. Over 14 million bottles sold.

STARTLING CHARGES FILED AGAINST TREASURY DEP'T

Charles H. Brewer, Department of Justice Attorney, Charges Duplication of Government Securities—Representative La Guardia Has Introduced a Resolution to Force Congressional Inquiry—Secretary Mellon Attributes Duplication of Numbers to Mechanical Errors—Maintains There Has Been No Loss to Either the Public or the Government.

Washington, Feb. 7.—The smouldering embers of the bureau of engraving controversy, which first blazed up two years ago with a wholesale dismissal of employes by President Harding, has again been fanned into flame.

Charles H. Brewer, department of justice attorney, who investigated charges of duplication of government securities, brought the case into the open today with the filing of sensational charges against the treasury, and despite denials by Secretary Mellon and other officials that Brewer's allegations contained merit, Representative La Guardia, republican, New York, began steps by introducing a resolution of inquiry to force a congressional inquiry.

The charges of Brewer were contained in a copy of a report he had sent previously to President Coolidge and Attorney General Daugherty, and were made public when they were attached as exhibits to an injunction suit filed here against government officials whom Brewer said were interfering with his inquiry. They set forth that there had been duplications of bonds; that the treasury had suppressed knowledge of them; that treasury officers had thwarted Brewer in his attempts to uncover the condition, and that duplicates of bonds had been destroyed in the treasury.

Secretary Mellon on learning that Brewer's charges had been made public, said that for every bond which has been issued, its face value had found its way into the treasury vaults. He added that there had been duplication of numbers, but there had been no loss to either the public or the government. He attributed the duplication of numbers to mechanical errors.

Brewer's charges covered a wide range, the main features of which have been known to treasury officials for many months and which, they said, had been under investigation and disproved. They included the assertion that a clique swayed the actions of the treasury department and that J. W. McCarter, former assistant register of the treasury, had been discharged because of his sharing protest before the treasury officials in connection with alleged irregularities. Brewer also charged spurious securities had been issued from the treasury and that duplicate bonds had been traced "to treasury sources from surrendered bonds stolen from treasury vaults."

The report of Brewer disavowed that he had caused the dismissal of bureau employes by President Harding and set forth that the president had been informed of "many irregularities" at the bureau before Brewer entered the case.

Treasury officials said today that the department of justice would make reply to Brewer's suit, which seeks to prevent the treasury from recovering bonds which the attorney has been using in his inquiry. These bonds were given to Brewer on his receipt. They also said that a detailed check had been going forward on all of the charges but that no alarming conditions had manifested itself.

Among the conclusions Brewer drew from his investigation, the report said, were these:

"There are between about 3,000 known pairs of duplicate bonds and about 4,000 pairs of duplicate coupons. Duplicates still coming in.

"That duplicates are being held by parties with guilty knowledge awaiting destruction of the bonds which would prove their duplication.

"That much that could be told has been held back by employes who fear the consequences.

"That treasury officials from the start had given no real effort to determine officially the cause of duplication; to join other enemies of the writer, in other war fraud cases, who are officially on record as seeking his discharge for two years: and to, themselves, attack him in the public press; and to falsely assail his honor in the same medium; to defy President Harding, to deceive Mr. Mellon, and to temporarily deceive President Coolidge while the charges of Brewer, the denials of Secretary Mellon and the threats of congressional investigation filled the air today the employes discharged by President Harding and later exonerated, called on Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, who has been active in their behalf, to make complaint that they had not been reinstated. Secretary Mellon has announced they would be given re-employment but no date has ever been set for it.

TO REDUCE ABUSES OF FRENCH DIVORCE LAWS

Paris, Feb. 7 (By the A. P.)—American lawyers here generally welcome the new ruling of the minister of justice in the administration of divorce cases which makes divorce for foreigners in France possible only on the same ground that governs such actions in the home states of the parties concerned.

They think it will tend to reduce the abuses hitherto more or less prevalent in France and also lessen the responsibility of attorneys concerning the validity in home states of divorces hereafter granted by French courts.

Legal experts, however, believe that the divorce business will not materially be affected by the new procedure requiring "a certificate of customs" showing that the grounds upon which a French divorce is requested are applicable in the home states of applicants because it is pointed out that most of the advantages of obtaining divorces in Paris, such as lack of publicity and the nature of the evidence required, remain unaffected by the new ruling.

The chief effects of the new regulation according to the consensus of American lawyers, will be to prevent the granting of divorce to a man and wife who come to Europe on the same boat, stay in Paris ten days and perhaps return on the same boat.

TO STUDY ST. LAWRENCE NAVIGATION AND POWER

Boston, Feb. 7.—Colonel Charles R. Gow, of Boston, former president of The Associated Industries of Massachusetts, today was elected chairman of the New England joint committee of thirty recently appointed to study and report on the St. Lawrence navigation and power project. The committee named the following state chairmen:

New Hampshire, Former Governor Robert P. Bass, of Concord; Connecticut, F. H. Chase, of Waterbury; Maine, Benjamin F. Cleaves, of Portland; Vermont, Willard E. Howe, of Burlington; Rhode Island, Arthur B. Lisle, of Providence; Massachusetts, Colonel Gow.

DEMONSTRATION IN PARIS AGAINST BREAD PRICES

Paris, Feb. 7.—A demonstration against bread at one franc twenty-five centimes and additional taxes was organized by the communists after the close of today's session of the chamber of deputies. A shouting crowd of several thousands assembled in the Place Concorde and attempted to cross the Seine to the parliament building. They were dispersed by the police and republican guards. Forty arrests were made and many injured in clashes between the armed force and the manifestants.

MID-YEAR EXAMINATION ON ROMANTIC POETRY

Cambridge, Mass., Feb. 7.—With books under their arms for ready reference, the students in Professor John Livingston Lowes' course on the romantic poetry of the nineteenth century appeared for their mid-year examination at Harvard today. Professor Lowes said that the innovation was intended to test the students' critical ability and their acuteness in searching out and applying information.

MURDER OF BRIDGEPORT PRIEST STILL A MYSTERY

Bridgeport, Feb. 7.—In attempting to trace the movements of Rev. Hubert Dahme, pastor of St. Joseph's church, on Monday night just before he was murdered by an unidentified assassin, police located today four persons who claim to have seen the priest within a block of the scene of the killing. They say he appeared to be accompanied by the man who shortly after shot him.

At noon the contents of safe deposit boxes in a local bank, which were hired by Father Dahme, were examined by police but they found no threatening letters of a nature as reported had been received by him.

Authorities interviewed all persons concerned in the suit brought against Father Dahme in settlement of the Peter Farley estate of $45,000 left St. Joseph's parish. They say the suit has absolutely no bearing on the murder investigation.

More than 12,000 persons have passed by the casket of Father Dahme, lying in state in St. Joseph's church today and tonight. Funeral services will be held at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning. Two hundred priests from all parts of the diocese are expected to attend the services to be conducted by Rt. Rev. John G. Murray, auxiliary bishop of Hartford diocese.

BANKERS TO PLACE LONG TERM ARGENTINE BONDS

Buenos Aires, Argentina, Feb. 7.—Finance Minister Molina has announced that an understanding has been reached between the Argentine government and the New York bankers who place the recent $40,000,000 Argentine long term bonds, by which the bankers instead of placing $20,000,000 additional of these bonds, will purchase at par $20,000,000 six months 5 1-2 per cent. treasury notes due August 25 next.

The proceeds of these notes, together with the $40,000,000 bonds, will be used to take up the $55,000,000 six per cent. notes due March 1 next.

Senor Molina explained that the bankers' insistence that the market was unfavorable for a further offering of bonds obliged the government to accept a short term refunding. The finance minister said he expected to receive formal ratification of the understanding today.

OFFICERS OF THE RETAIL LUMBERMEN'S ASSOCIATION

WOODROW WILSON CARRIED $20,000 LIFE INSURANCE

New York, Feb. 7.—Life insurance of $20,000 was carried by Woodrow Wilson in one New York company, it was learned today. The former president took out two $10,000 policies, one at the age of 37, when a professor at Princeton university, and the other in 1899, six years later.

London, Feb. 7. — A fair selection amounting to 11,905 bales was offered at the wool auction today. There was a good demand for fine merinos while medium merinos were irregular. Crossbreds with a steady tone at unchanged prices.

14 PERSONS MISSING IN ICE BRIDGE COLLAPSE

Quebec, Feb. 7—Fourteen persons were adrift on cakes of ice in the swelling waters of the St. Lawrence river tonight and efforts of a ferry boat to reach them were futile. The fourteen were members of a party of seventeen who were standing on an ice bridge between Quebec and Levis when it snapped and broke away. Three were rescued.

Hurried formed rescue parties set out for Quebec bridge, toward which the ice floes were drifting, in the hope that they could rescue the victims with ropes as they passed beneath them, from points along the shore it was reported as many as nine or ten persons had been seen on one cake of the floating ice.

The ice bridge, the first to be formed here in 25 years, was an unusual sight and hundreds of persons flocked to witness it. The persons who were carried away when it broke, were standing at about the middle of the stream, making efforts at rescue all the more difficult.

As the night wore on no trace was found of the missing persons on the ice. Estimates as to the actual number varied, some running as high as 40, but were without confirmation.

Anxious relatives of those supposed to be on the ice braved the winter night and stood shivering along the banks of the river waiting for a glimpse of the helpless victims. A swarm of ferry boats and smaller craft put out in the search, but no rescues were reported.

Measures were taken to form a chain of vessels across the river at a point further down stream where the banks are not so far apart.

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

A tax revision bill was reported by the house ways and means committee.

The senate oil committee abandoned its purpose to examine Albert B. Fall.

Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, delivered a prepared address attacking the Sinclair and Doheny oil leases, Secretaries Denby and Nelson, and Albert B. Fall.

The senate adopted the Walsh resolution looking to annulment of Standard Oil leases in the LK hills, California, naval reserve, and renewed the authorization under which the oil committee is acting.

E. L. Doheny wrote the senate oil committee that Wm. G. McAdoo's law firm received only $160,000 from him instead of $250,000 and that the payments were in no way connected with cases now before the committee.

The state department announced that arrangements had been made for the withdrawal of the marine legation guard at Managua, Nicaragua, after last [illegible].

President Coolidge directed the department of justice and the federal trade commission to investigate charges of Governor McMasters of South Dakota, that the crude oil market had been cornered.

Charges of duplication of federal securities were contained in exhibits filed in the District of Columbia supreme court by Charles B. Brewer, department of justice attorney, and the charges were denied by Secretary Mellon.

JOHNSON RETAINS HIS PRESIDENTIAL ASPIRATIONS

Washington, Feb. 7.—Senator Johnson of California, formally denied tonight published reports that he soon is to withdraw from the race for the republican presidential nomination.

"The reports circulated about my withdrawal are, of course, untrue," he said. "They emanate from my opponents, who, after manufacturing them, have the interest newspapers print them and editorialize concerning them. It's a contemptible and cowardly method of campaigning.

"I've just come from Chicago, where I have been in consultation with my representatives in the primary states of North Dakota, South Dakota, Nebraska, Michigan, Indiana, Ohio and Illinois. All were enthusiastic and optimistic. We begin now an active, aggressive and militant campaign, which will, continue until the republican national convention renders its decision."

CATHEDRAL OF ST. JOHN THE DIVINE WILL COST $15,000,000

New York, Feb. 7.—Completion of the Cathedral of St. John the Divine will cost about $15,000,000 Bishop William T. Manning, said tonight in an address at the annual dinner of the Church club of New York, urging support of the enterprise. Work on the nave of the edifice, which will cost between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000, may be begun, he said, when a little less than $3,000,000 is available. This sum would enable the constructors to carry the nave to a height of 60 feet.

The cathedral will be one of the greatest works of art and architecture in the world, Bishop Manning declared. The present time, when the world is in uncertainty and trouble, he asserted, is the best possible time to build the cathedral. "It is just such times that the great cathedrals have been built," he said.

POINCARE WINS BATTLE IN CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES

Paris, Feb. 7.—(By the A. P.)—Premier Poincare won the first phase of his battle with the chamber of deputies for administrative economies and higher taxes today by a majority of 128 votes.

The moderates and conservatives, after another violent session in which the socialists and communists and radicals repeated their obstructive tactics, rallied around the premier and gave him about 50 more votes than the government had counted upon after yesterday's tumultuous debate.

OIL COMMITTEE TO RESUME HEARINGS TODAY

Washington, Feb. 7.—Abandoning further efforts to question Albert B. Fall, the senate oil committee went forward today with plans to press the naval oil lease investigation along every other available channel.

A new grant of authority for the committee to act was given by the senate to remove any ground for a challenge of its jurisdiction such as that made by Mr. Fall last Saturday when he refused to testify.

Police Puzzled by Newton Shooting

Papers Found on Wounded Man Gave His Address as Haverhill.

Newton, Mass., Feb. 7.—Lewis F. Curtis, crack trapshooter and wealthy clubman, proved his ability with an automatic pistol when he fired four shots into an intruder in his home in the fashionable Chestnut Hill district early today. The other man, supposed to be Roy G. Vance, shot Curtis in the arm.

Curtis' wound was slight. Vance was said to have little chance of recovery, and the police were unable to get any statement from him. While papers found on his person gave his address as Haverhill no one who knew him could be found in that city. Recently he had been living at a lodging house in Boston, where he had given his home as Cambridge.

The police are puzzled by the fact that when discovered at the Curtis home Vance was lying on a divan in the sun porch. He had removed his overcoat and his shoes, which were soaking wet. The maid who saw him as she came downstairs this morning said that a revolver and a flashlight were lying beside him. She ran back and notified Curtis.

Hurrying down in his bathrobe with an automatic pistol in his hand, Curtis told the police that he saw Vance approaching him. He asserted that Vance fired at him and he returned the fire. Curtis, wounded in the arm, pushed Vance through the outer door.

The wounded man, in his stocking feet, reeled to the street and boarded a trolley car. At the Lake street terminal he changed to another car for Boston. The police had been notified meanwhile and officers in a commandeered automobile caught up with the car. They found Vance sitting in a corner holding a newspaper but half falling from his seat.

The officers took Vance to St. Elizabeth's hospital in the Brighton district of Boston, where it was found that all of Curtis' shots had taken effect and that Vance was probably fatally wounded. He became unconscious soon afterward. In one of his pockets the police found a watch which they said they had identified as one stolen recently from a house in Waltham.

Vance was well dressed. A book in one pocket indicated that he was a member of a carpenters' union, although at his lodging it had been understood that he was a restaurant cashier. He had only three cents in money.

Curtis is engaged in the wool business in Boston with his father, Thomas P. Curtis, of Newton Highlands. He has long been a member of the gun club of the Boston Athletic association and in 1917 he was a member of the American trapshooting team which defeated a Canadian team at Toronto. In the same year he won the New England amateur trapshooting championship and in 1920 the state championship.

CONVENTION OF PUBLIC SCHOOL SUPERINTENDENTS

New Haven, Feb. 7.—The Connecticut Association of Public School Superintendents met in annual meeting here today to take up the discussion of the problems of school heads throughout the state. The qualifications of superintendents, it was pointed out, and the demands which have been made of them with the improvement of the school system, have become vital subjects of debate and the views of the attending members of the association were requested as a help towards maintaining a proper standard in the schools.

The discussion was an open one on "what has the school board a right to expect from the superintendent of schools?" The general opinions brought out that school superintendents of the present day have much to contend with and in order to shoulder the responsibilities of office should be able to adapt themselves to meet every occasion expected to confront them, which should include educational, physical, social, moral and spiritual qualifications.

Albert B. Meredith, commissioner of education, summarized the general discussion as "a complex situation."

The convention will be resumed tomorrow morning.

QUARTERLY STATEMENT OF BANK COMMISSIONER BYRNE

Hartford, Feb. 7.—A total increase of $7,114,681.41 in deposits in state trust companies during the quarter ended December 31 is shown by a quarterly statement prepared by Bank Commissioner John B. Byrne today. During the same period the trust companies increased their reserves by $6,146,411.02.

Of the total increase in deposits $3,143,517.33 is in general deposits and $3,971,164.08 is in savings accounts. General deposits on December 31 amounted to $124,077,847.61 and savings deposits to $35,006,198.01, making a grand total of $159,084,045.62.

While loans and discounts decreased $211,516.61 the banks were building up a cash reserve more than $4,000,000 greater than it was on September 30. This indicates that business in general is still exercising the caution that has characterized it since early last fall, and that banks are continuing to build up cash reserves so that they will be able to care for any demands for money made upon them as soon as business requires funds, Commissioner Byrne said. The total reserve on hand December 31, was $22,771,961.44, of which $5,704,968.16 was in specie and currency.

INCREASE IN RESOURCES OF NATIONAL BANKS

Washington, Feb. 7.—Aggregate resources of the country's national banks increased $431,171,000 during 1923, Comptroller Dawes of the currency announced tonight in making public an analysis of banking conditions as shown in the call of December 29. The total resources were $22,406,128,000, the greatest since the call of December 29, 1920.

Deposit liabilities of the national banks December 29, amounting to $17,838,861,000, were greater than at any call date in history except that of December 31, 1919. This represents an increase of $788,381,000 since the call of September 14, but an increase of only $408,380,000 over the end of 1922 because of the reduction in deposits during the summer producting season when heavy calls were made for funds.

To Probe Alleged Corner in Crude Oil

Department of Justice to Sift Charges Against Standard Oil.

Washington, Feb. 7—The department of justice will immediately set in motion its machinery to go to the bottom of charges by Governor McMastery of South Dakota, that "allied interests of the Standard Oil" had cornered the crude oil supply and enhanced gasoline prices. The department action has been taken upon instructions from President Coolidge to whom was directed today a telegram from the South Dakota governor setting forth his charges and also a similar message from Governor Bryan of Nebraska.

Shortly after the announcement that the president had ordered an inquiry into the gasoline and crude oil situation, former Representative Campbell of Kansas, speakin for the Prairie Oil and Gas Company, submitted to the executive a statement giving reasons for fluctuation of crude oil and gasoline prices in the last year. Mr. Campbell suggested that the operations of the economic law of supply and demand alone were responsible for the fluctuating prices.

The president's instructions, it was said at the department of justice, would mean a broadening of an inquiry which has been under way for many months. United States Attorney Long has had instructions, officials added, to aid local officials in efforts to run down monopolistic tendencies of all kinds and those orders, it was emphasized apply to oil and gasoline as well as any other commodities.

Although there has been constant observation of conditions in the oil industry, department officials said there would now be an intensive study of the situations of which the two state executives have complained.

JOHN T. KING SUMMONED I OIL LEASE INVESTIGATION

Washington, Feb. 7.—John T. King of Connecticut has been summoned, to appear before the investigating committee now holding oil hearings and the summons was served on him at Miami, Florida, where he was staying. Mr. King was asked to appear before the senate committee tomorrow and is expected to reach Washington in the morning but whether he will be called on tomorrow will not be known in advance as a number of other witnesses have priority on the senate list.

PLANNING WITHDRAWAL OF MARINES FROM NICARAGUA

Washington, Feb. 7.—Plans for the withdrawal of the American legation guard of 100 marines from Managua, Nicaragua, after the inauguration of the new administration there in January, 1925, were announced today by the state department.

Arrangements have been made between the two governments for the organization of an efficient constabulary to assure the maintenance of order when the marine detachment is recalled.

Correspondence between the Washington and Managua governments made public with the announcement shows that the latter has accepted the offer of the American government to provide instructors in creating the constabulary as well as the services of Dr. H. H. Dodds, secretary of the National Municipal league, to assist in the administration of the electoral law adopted by Nicaragua.

M'ADOO TERMINATES HIS SERVICE WITH DOHENY

Washington, Feb. 7.—William G. McAdoo announced here tonight he had terminated his professional service with E. L. Doheny, California oil magnate.

Mr. McAdoo's announcement was contained in a letter to Chairman Lenroot, of the senate oil committee, in which he expressed the desire to testify before the committee immediately. He may be heard tomorrow.

The former treasury secretary said that when he read in the newspapers Mr. Doheny's "amazing disclosures about his transaction with ex-Secretary Fall," he refrained from immediately terminating his professional services with Mr. Doheny, as was his first impulse, but had done so now "fearing that the newspaper accounts might be vicious and unfair" to Mr. Doheny as some of them had been to him.

ANOTHER WARRANT ISSUED FOR ARNSTEIN

Youngstown, O., Feb. 7.—Warrants charging Nick Arnstein and Charles Drucker, central figures in the $5,000,000 bond theft investigation in New York four years ago, and three others with obtaining $43,800 under false pretenses, were issued here today.

The warrants, issued on application of M. W. Kashmerick, of Boswel, Pa., charge that the money was obtained in a wire tapping swindle in Youngstown, in July 1919. Police are investigating another wire tappings wire tapping scheme here the same year in which a Hoboken, N. J., man was said to have lost $80,000, in an attempt to connect Arnstein and Drucker.

PRICES ARE ADVANCING IN THE COFFEE MARKET

New York, Feb. 7.—The coffee market, which has been gradually advancing for the past several weeks, showed increased activity and strength today owing to continuous firmness in Brazil and reports of higher Rio exchange rates.

The price for March delivery advanced to 12.88 and September to 12.19, making new high records for the season and advances of about sixty to eighty points, from today's closing quotation. The market closed within a few points of the best, showing gains of 52 to 56 points for the day.

TAFT RECOVERING FROM ATTACK OF INDIGESTION

Washington, Feb. 7.—Chief Justice Taft was said to have made rapid progress today toward complete recovery from the attack of indigestion which prevented him from attending the funeral of former president Wilson. Although he remained in bed, he did not refrain from work, dictating considerable correspondence and giving attention to his judicial duties.

The chief justice received a number of callers during the day and expects to leave his bed tomorrow.

LLOYD GEORGE DENIES THE INTERVIEW ON RHINELAND

Former British Premier Surprised When His Attention Was Called to Interview Printed in the New York World—Concerns Alleged Secret Rhineland Agreement Between President Wilson and Premier Clemenceau at the Paris Peace Conference.

London, Feb. 7—(By the A. P.)—Mr. Lloyd George, through the Daily Chronicle, has issued the following statement concerning the interview printed in the New York World on the alleged secret Rhineland agreement between President Wilson and Premier Clemenceau at the Paris peace conference.

"I did not give the interview referred to and was more than surprised when my attention was called to it by telephone messages. I cannot accept the views attributed to me as accurately setting out the facts of what thappened at a critical moment in the peace conference. As to those facts, the official statement issued by the French foreign office is substantially correct."

Then, alluding to how he was called to London at the time in question, Mr. Lloyd George proceeds: "I found on my return to Paris that during my absence an agreement had been arrived at between Mr. Wilson and M. Clemenceau on two very important issues. One was the military occupation of the Rhineland and the other a guarantee by the United States of the French frontier against acts of aggression by Germany.

"To describe this agreement as 'a secret compact' between Mr. Wilson and M. Clemenceau is ridiculous. Mr. Wilson, I need hardly say, acted with perfect loyalty, and it cannot be imputed as a blame either to the late president or to M. Clemenceau that I was called to England at the time these grave matters were under discussion.

"The fact that the late president and M. Clemenceau had arrived at an agreement during my absence was communicated to me on my return, and the agreement regarding the occupation of the Rhineland was after some modification ultimately incorporated in the peace treaty."

Expressing regret that any public reference should have been made to a communication sent to him by the British foreign office, Mr. Lloyd George says: "The facts are in effect set out in the foreign office communique." (This communique was issued by the foreign office Wednesday).

The former premier then explains that the communication from the foreign office was not signed, and, owing to this fact, there was delay in replying to it, which he regrets. He adds that of the documents thus proposed to be distributed by the French government, one is headed" articles concerning the guarantees of execution of treaties." Another is headed, "treaty between France and the United States." Both of these documents says Mr. Lloyd George, are foot noted identically thus:

"As approved by President Wilson and M. Clemenceau on April twentieth."

"These documents," he writes, must, I imagine, now be published. They will tell their own story."

The former premier observes that he had no intimation from the foreign office to the effect that it was considered disadvantageous to publish the documents, adding:

"Premier MacDonald will probably fin dthat most, if not all, of these documents have already been published by Tardieu in France or Baker in America. Both of these gentlemen have between them published most of the secret documents of the Paris conference."

EXPERTS HAVE COMPLETED THEIR DUTIES I NBERLIN

Berlin, Feb. 7.—(By the A. P.)—Although Reginald McKenna and the other members of the second committee of experts who are investigating Germany's financial status left Berlin today, admitting that much of the data they were seeking with regard to hidden wealth abroad could not be obtained, Brigadier General Charles G. Dawes and the members of the first committee announced today they would remain in Berlin until February 15.

The extension of the time of the first committee in Berlin, it was stated, was necessary to hear additional persons the German government desires to have appear before the committee, including labor representatives.

It probably will be some time after the experts have returned to Paris before they will be able to co-ordinate their Berlin investigations and make a report to the reparation commission, as the information at their hands at present is piecmeal and must be compiled and studied as a whole before any final conclusions can be reached.

Jones, Ralph Russell Seymour, Carl Ringius, Harold Abbott Green, Nunzio Vayana, William H. Smith, and William Bradford Green. The council meets tomorro wto elect officers. Carl Ringius, Nunzio Vayana and Albertus E. Jones were chosen for the hanging committee for the fourteenth annual exhibit of the academy to be held in Hartford in April. The jury of selection for the exhibit includes Daniel F. Wentworth, James Goodwin McManus, Albertus E. Jones, Carl J. Blenner, George Thomson, Mrs. G. C. Vetter, Thomas Brabazon, Harold Abbott Green, Whitney M. Hubbard, Mrs. Norma Wright Sloper and Nunzio Vayana.

TELLS MANY CONFLICTING STORIES OF MURDER

Canton, Ohio, Feb. 7.—Unshaken in the principal details of previous confessions, Joseph Pierce, 31, Detroit, for the second time today led the authorities to the spot where he said he and another man attacked Miss Florence Nitzman, pretty 19 year old telephone operator, choked her to death and then weighting her body with stones, threw it into a creek where it was found last Friday.

Pierce has told several conflicting stories. At first admitting that he alone was responsible for the crime, he now places most of the blame on an alleged companion.

The authorities today received a telegram from Little Falls, N. Y., that Pierce had received treatment for mental disorders in a hospital there two months ago.

Miss Nitzman disappeared on the night of January 30, and her body was found two days later.

IMMEDIATE TAX REDUCTION URGED BY DRY GOODS ASS'N

New York, Feb. 7.—Resolutions urging immediate reduction of taxes, favoring the principles of commercial arbitration on a state rather than a national basis and approving steps taken by manufacturers to establish a clearing house to improve trade relations, were adopted today by the National Retail Dry Goods association.

The tax resolution approved a 25 per cent reduction of income taxes and urged the repeal of all excise taxes.

ITALY AND RUSSIA HAVE SIGNED COMMERCIAL TREATY

Romet, Feb. 7—(By the A. P.)—The representatives of the Italian and Russian governments signed the commercial treaty today, and thus, in conformity with Premier Mussolini's previous decision, established de jure recognition of Russia.

The Italian government will immediately appoint an ambassador to Moscow, thus restoring diplomatic relations.

HARTFORD TEACHERS "MORALLY NOT GUILTY"

Farmington, Conn., Feb. 7.—"Morally not guilty" was the decision of Justice Austin M. Barney in the Farmington town court last night after hearing the evidence in the cases of Robert V. Sinott and Edward Brown, Hartford high school instructors, who were held as frequenters of a place where liquor was sold illegally when the Farmington Coffee house was raided last week. John J. Curtin, the proprietor, was found guilty of having liquor in his possession with intent to sell and fined $250, but the evidence disclosed that the high school teachers showed no signs of having imbibed liquor of any sort, had none with them and did not appear to have any desire to get any. The court ruled, however, that whether or not a person has any knowledge that the place he enters is one in which the violation of the law is taking place he is technically guilty under the law and taxed the defendants costs. When they attempted to appeal from this decision the court ruled that the case having been nolled, they had no grounds for appeal.

LIGGETT PURCHASE OF STORES CONSUMMATED

New York, Feb. 7.—The Louis K. Liggett company, against whom a restraining order to prevent further acquisition of stores of the National Drug Stores corporation was asked, incidental to a suit against the National corporation, has filed affidavits in court setting forth that all contemplated purchases of National stores have been consummated. These purchases were made in the regular course of business and the affidavits assert that no negotiations looking to further purchases are in progress.

The restraining order was asked in an action filed on Monday by Ralph B. Wattley, former president of the National Drug Stores corporation, and other stockholders, which charged neglect and mismanagement on the part of directors of the National corporation and asked that a receiver be appointed for the concern.

The Liggett company, officials said today, has no connection whatever with the National Drug Stores corporation and was joined in the proceedings only because of its recent purchase of several of the stores of the other corporation.

DECLINE OF QUOTATIONS IN THE COTTON MARKET

New York, Feb. 7.—The cotton market declined approximately 75 points today with contracts for May delivery selling down to 23.43 as compared to 24.97, the high mark touched in the advance of last Monday.

The decline was accompanied by continuous reports of a poor demand for cotton goods. The selling became more active and general late in the afternoon when there were rumors of prior offering of spot cotton in the south.

Closing prices were about the lowest of the day, showing a net decline of 73 to 75 points on present crop months and of 23 to 39 points on later deliveries.

TO DEBATE IN HARTFORD "THE BOK PEACE PLAN"

Hartford, Feb. 7.—E. J. Coffey of New Haven, a deputy collector of internal revenue under Colonel Robert O. Eaton, and Robert P. Butler, corporation counsel of Hartford, will debate "the Bok peace plan" at the Emanuel Synagogue Monday night. Mr. Coffey will present the negative side and Mr. Butler the affirmative. Mr. Butler was chairman of the democratic town committee in 1920 when the league of nations was the important factor in the campaign.

SENTENCE COMMUTED TO LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Carson City, Nevada, Feb. 7.—Thomas Russell, sentenced to die in the lethal gas chamber here tomorrow, was saved from that fate in a last minute order received tonight which commuted his sentence to life imprisonment.

WILLIMANTIC

Past Exalted Rulers' Night was observed by Willimantic Lodge, No. 1311 B. P. O. E., at its regular meeting in Odd Fellows' Hall Wednesday evening, a large number of members attending. The past exalted rulers who occupied the chairs were: Thomas J. Kelley, exalted ruler; R. Ernest Melody, esteemed leading knight; C. W. Alpaugh, esteemed loyal knight; T. Frank Cunningham, esteemed lecturing knight; esquire, James F. McClene; chaplain, Michael E. Sullivan; inner guard, John B. Edgarton. Each of the officers delivered a brief address.

After the business session a fine vaudeville entertainment was staged, the following artists appearing: Miss Dolly Tuttle "The Little Girl with the Big Voice." Eddie McGinley, black face comedian and Dolly Clifford, novelty entertainer. Violin and vocal selections were contributed by R. C. Fletcher a member of the local lodge. McGinley, who was a member of the American Thread Company baseball team several seasons ago, made a big hit. Luncheon was served. During the business session a resolution on the death of Ex-President Woodrow Wilson introduced by Valentine L. Murphy was adopted unanimously: It paid tribute to the late ex-president as one who gave unselfishly of his heart, his soul and his great mind to the cause of humanity in this and other lands, lauding his lofty ideals and principles, his high endeavor to implant them in the hearts of men and thus to further that brotherhood in which the Elks so earnestly believe. The secretary of the lodge was instructed to send a copy of the resolutions to the bereaved family and to spread them on the records of the meeting.

Dancing every Friday at armory, Danielson. Paul Whiteman's, Feb. 29, Military ball.—adv.

The anniversary of the American Boy Scout movement will be observed here today, February 8, in conformity with the scout regulations. The local troops will meet this (Friday) evening and carry out anniversary exercises and will join all other scouts in the country in standing at attention at 8.15 o'clock, salute and then will recite the scout oath, audibly or otherwise.

The messages from the mayors of Norwich, Willimantic and Manchester will be relayed by scouts to Governor Charles A. Templeton at the state capitol in Hartford Saturday morning. The start will be made from Norwich at seven o'clock the runners being required to cover a mile in 12 minutes by alternating a fifty pace walk with a fifty pace dog trot. At this rate, the message from the chief executive from the Rose of New England should be delivered in Willimantic shortly after ten a. m. Local scouts, comprising members of troops from the Congregational, Episcopal and St. Joseph's parishes will receive a message from Mayor Hormisdas Dion and relay this in half miles to Andover where the Manchester scouts will take the messages. About 4:30 o'clock the three missives will be placed in the hands of Governor Templeton. Rev. F. C. Williams, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church is making arrangements for the local relay team and is being assisted by the several scoutmasters.

Miss Margaret Monahan, of West Park street, was pleasantly surprised the other afternoon when a number of little friends called on her in celebration of her tenth birthday. The party took the form of a valentine social and games, recitations, dancing, vocal and instrumental music were provided, after which the children sat down to a tempting luncheon. Valentine hearts were at each plate. The little guests then returned to the parlor where the opening of gifts took place, Miss Monahan being well remembered. Those present were: Lillian Sullivan, Helen Grimley, Marie Connelly, Josephine Valone, Helen Chartier, Katherine Dennehey, Evelyn Cloutier, Helena Brennan, Viola Soroka and Katherine, Mary and Dorothy Monahan. Mrs. John B. Edgarton and Irene White assisted Mrs. Monahan in serving the luncheon.

The activities of the local K. of C. council are at their height. Preparations are being made for a big carnival, the third degree will be conferred on a class of thirty-two candidates, in the town hall, District Deputy T. Frank Cunningham in charge. Visitors are expected from several of the surrounding towns.

Mrs. Maud Deming was installed as chaplain of Francis S. Long Woman's Relief Corps, No. 28, at its last meeting. Forty-one members were in attendance. The President Mrs. Margaret McArthur was in charge. According to reports the membership of the Woman's Relief Corps is on the increase throughout the country. The local corps is one of the largest of the forty-five in the state. Memorial tributes were read to several deceased members. Mabel Dimock, Wardy Hoxy and Addie Cole were appointed to the thrift committee. $157 has been collected by the corps delegates for the visiting nurses' association. The session was followed by a valentine social and games. Refreshments were served. Hattie Ladd was musician for the evening. The next meeting will be a Washington tea, when Colonial dresses will be worn.

With only one defeat this season, Tourtellotte High basketeers who play hosts to Windham High at North Grosvenordale today (Friday) are considered formidable opponents by Coach T. A. Gallagher of the local quintet. The Windham mentor will hurl the strongest material he possesses into the fray. Harold Simonds will preside in the center of the pan, Captain Arnold Storrs and Tommy Meikle will play on the forward edge and Dud Burr, the flashy but temperamental forward, will probably be inserted in the pastime. Tourtellotte's and Windham's only defeat this season were at the hands of Killingly High. The Tourtelotte-Killingly game was played in Danielson, where most anything is liable to happen.

The girls' team under Coach Marjorie Harvey will stack up against the South Manchester High lassies this (Friday) evening. The following will make the trip: A. Liberty, E. Case, Captain R. Belanger, A. Wallen, V. Thompkins, O. French, M. Lux, E. Murphy and M. Curran.

An innovation in Windham High school football relations has been inaugurated by Manager Benton of the 1924 eleven. According to the schedule which is practically completed, the Crimson and Blue will play only one game with each institution. The schedule calls for eight games. The final date, No 22 is open but the management desires to arrange a game with any big high school in the state on the home field. Arrangements have not yet been completed for the Norwich Free Academy classic. The date October 25, in Norwich is pending. The schedule: September 27, Stonington; October 3, Westerly; 11, Killingly in Danielson; 12, Middletown; 25, Norwich in Norwich (pending); November 1, Bristol in Bristol; 8, New London in New London; 15, Manchester; November 22, open.

Willimantic court of the Foresters of America installed officers for the ensuing year at a recent meeting. The district deputy was in charge of the work. Among the honored guests were: Supreme Lecturer Henry Congdon of Norwich and Chief Ranger Smith of Taftville. Other visitors from Norwich, Taftville and Baltic and surrounding towns were present.

The officers installed are: Chief Ranger, Louis C. Mrs. Joseph F. Gaudreau returned Thursday after a visit in Webster and Worcester.

Mrs. Carl Koss of Ashford walked into the barn a few days ago and stopped in amazement when she looked at her horse's tail and found it closely shaven. She at first believed that part of this important feature of her animal had been cut off and she sat down and wrote a note to Sergeant Russell I. Harmon of the state police barracks at Stafford Springs informing him that some fiend in human form had bereft her horse of part of his fly-swatter. Officer Henry Heinold also of the Five H barracks was assigned to the case. When the officer gave the horse the once-over he found practically every vestige of hair shorn from the tail. Mrs. Koss asked that the investigation be conducted in absolute secrecy as she feared that it was the work of a family enemy and there was danger that she would receive personal violence if it became known that she had entered a complaint. Officer Heinold was mystified for a few minutes. He sat on a barrel and began to whistle the latest popular song hit, "Hoss, Hold Up Your Tail". In a few minutes a mischevious calf from an adjourning stall made his appearance and approaching the rear section of the horse began to nibble at what hair remained on the tail. The mystery was solved. The calf had had his favorite dish. Mrs. Koss was more at ease and the officer went on his way.

Officer Henry Heinold, of Stafford Springs has a problem in locating a truck driver who struck and damaged a small building in Willington. About a week ago, in the early hours of the morning a small wooden building which enclosed a water tank or 50,000 gal. capacity belonging to Gardiner Hall & Son Co., at West Willington was smashed in and partly moved from its foundation. The tank was damaged. Wheel marks showed that an auto truck had been turned around in the road and backed into the building which stands about fifteen feet from the highway. The state motor vehicle department has not yet received any report of the accident from any motorist and the state police have been unable to secure a clue to the identity of the driver. The damage to the building is reported as being about $300.

		DOUBLE-FACED Number	List Price
Romance (Rubinstein) Violin Solo / Souvenir Poétique (Fibich-Schulhoff) Violin Solo — Mischa Elman / Mischa Elman		974	$1.50

Rubinstein never wrote a more haunting melody than this Romance. With it is paired Fibich's Souvenir Poétique.

Fleurette, I Shall Never Forget (Weatherly-Wood) / That is Why! (O'Hara-Kreisler) — Orville Harrold / Orville Harrold		980	1.50

A love song from an English source, and one from the Western world, sung in bell-like ringing tenor. Thrilling to hear, fascinating to compare.

Sheep and Lambs (Hisbaw-Homer) / The Auld Scotch Sangs (Rev. Dr. Bethune-Lorne) — Louise Homer / Louise Homer		979	1.50

A pleasant pastoral ballad by Mme. Homer's husband, distinguished composer, who accompanies her at the piano; then a familiar old number with the orchestra.

Light Vocal Selections

Hold Thou My Hand (Eden) / Grass and Roses (Clark-Bartlett) — Merle Alcock / Merle Alcock		45377	1.00

Merle Alcock, now singing in the Metropolitan Opera Company, has two contralto numbers of quiet and friendly type.

Oh, Baby! / Sweet Alice — Frank Crumit / Frank Crumit		19236	.75

First Victor record by this clever Follies star. "Oh, Baby!" has Phil Ohman at the piano. "Sweet Alice" is not Ben Bolt's, but Frank's, new featured in vaudeville.

Chili Bom Bom (with The Virginians) / Happy and Go-Lucky in My Old Kentucky Home (with The Virginians) — Murray and Smalle / Murray and Smalle		19240	.75

Two amusing jazz songs in fox trot time for these vesily happy-go-lucky singers. The records dance gloriously.

Melodious Instrumental

Scherzo (Mendelssohn) Piano Solo / Prelude (Mendelssohn) Piano Solo — Master Shura Cherkassky / Master Shura Cherkassky		45378	1.00

First Victor record by this amazing Russian boy-pianist, a mature genius at 11, who is one of the discoveries of the time.

Dance Records

Blue Grass Blues—Fox Trot / Honolulu Blues—Fox Trot — David H. Silverman and His Orchestra / Jack Chapman and His Drake Hotel Orchestra		19237	.75

"Blue Grass Blues" is joyous and grotesque, with snappy passages. "Honolulu Blues" is soft, shimmering, tremulous, with a vocal refrain and pleasing harmonies.

My Sweetie's Sweeter Than That—Fox Trot / Wow!—Shimmy Fox Trot — Benson Orchestra of Chicago / Benson Orchestra of Chicago		19239	.75

A fox trot in the standard "hay-foot-hay, straw-foot-straw" rhythm and tempo, and a brisk dance with a lot of cornet "wows!"

She Wouldn't Do What I Asked Her To—Fox Trot / Hurdy-Gurdy Blues—Fox Trot — The Virginians / The Virginians		19241	.75

Jazz triumphant in the first number. The other has wonderful saxaphone-coloratura, the slow, easy rhythm of the dance being arabesqued with speedy and difficult passages.

Why do you eat Bran?

TO FIGHT CONSTIPATION—the most dangerous condition your system can become chained to—to get free from bleary biliousness, dull headaches, nausea—etc., etc.!!!

Rid yourself of this dangerous condition—or start "slipping" and become a prey to any one of the most dreaded human ailments which have their beginning with constipation and toxic poisoning!

Fight constipation as you would fight fire! Fight it with bran—Kellogg's Bran—BECAUSE IT IS ALL BRAN! Don't temporize! Don't waste time and health by going half-way! You need ALL BRAN; you need the bulk, the "roughage" of ALL BRAN, because it sweeps, cleanses and purifies!

REALIZE THIS—foods with a part bran content can only relieve constipation in proportion to the amount of bran they contain! If they are 25 or 50 per cent bran—you may get 25 or 50 per cent relief!

REMEMBER THIS—Kellogg's Bran is ALL BRAN and is guaranteed to give you positive and permanent relief if you will eat two tablespoonfuls daily, or as much with each meal as chronic cases!

Don't delay; don't fuss with half-way measures! You have too much at stake! All grocers sell—

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Quickly following the announcement that the Connecticut Mills, Inc., paid five back quarterly dividends on its issue of first preferred stock this week has come encouraging news relative to the finances of another of Killingly's industries—the Goodyear Mills, Inc., a subsidiary of the giant Goodyear Tire and Rubber company.

The report of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company for the year 1923 contains much that will enthuse the people of Killingly, especially those that have stock holdings.

Comment on this report as of Thursday is as follows:

Recovery in the tire and rubber industry was reflected in the report of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company for the year ended Dec. 31, when its net sales (exclusive of subsidiary companies) were $106,026,109 in 1923, as against $102,904,177 in 1922.

These sales exclude sales by the Goodyear Tire and Rubber company of California in territory west of the Rocky Mountains and sales by The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company of Canada, Ltd., in Canada. The total combined Goodyear sales of the Akron, California and Canadian companies and foreign branches were $127,880,082 in 1923 and $120,450,800 in 1922.

Earnings of the Akron company, before interest and other charges, were $12,720,127, as against $10,938,747 in 1922. After deduction of interest and other charges the net balance carried to surplus was $6,507,245 as against $4,388,499 in 1922. After payment of dividends on prior preference stock of $2,729,652, remaining surplus at Dec. 31, 1923, was $11,786,136, as against $8,008,542 Dec. 31, 1922.

Cash, call loans and marketable securities were $17,004,111. The ratio of current assets to current liabilities was 7.4 to 1. The company and its subsidiaries operated during 1923 without bank borrowings and had none on Dec. 31, 1923.

During 1923 the company acquired by purchase $14,902,500 par value of its prior preference stock, reducing the outstanding amount of that issue in the hands of the public to $15,000,000. There were also redeemed and cancelled $1,500,000 of its first mortgage bonds, and $2,500,000 of its debenture bonds. Provision has been made for retirement of an additional $1,500,000 of debenture bonds March 15 next. Between March 1, 1921, and March 15, 1924, the aggregate of first mortgage bonds, debenture bonds and prior preference stock outstanding in the hands of the public will have been reduced by a total of $22,652,500.

Today (Friday) George A. LeClair and Henry P. Dubuc, residents here and representatives of a life insurance company in surrounding territories, will be guests of the company at a banquet at the City club in Boston. Messrs LeClair and Dubuc are among the agents of their company who have qualified during the past year as members of the company's $100,000 club—by selling policies totaling that amount or more. In recognition of this service they, with other agents of equal proficiency, will be banquet guests in Boston and in addition will receive a $100,000 club button.

This (Friday) evening brings one of the principal social events of the year at Killingly High school—the annual junior class promenade. A new arrangement for distribution of tickets for this function is in force this year. Members of the junior and senior classes are each entitled to two tickets, under certain specifications. There will be no ticket sale at the door.

Manufacturers of moonshine who have not already stopped making the stuff, and those who are engaged in selling it, will do well to cease before they are caught in the net that officers are gathering in, day by day, throughout eastern Windham county. The officers have a fund of information and no one handling the stuff need feel any security against being raided.

Further errors discovered in going over the records of uncollected taxes of the town of Killingly—these records covering a period of several years—now amount to in excess of $400, and covered insofar as taxpayers are concerned by receipted bills.

The time when the Windham county jail at Brooklyn can be dispensed with—as was seriously talked about with the advent of prohibition—seems farther and farther away. On a recent day there were 71 prisoners confined at the institution, the largest number there since the "dry" era was inaugurated. This approximates the attendance in winter periods of years when the country was wringing wet. As in those days, most of those at the jail are there for drinking. Others are there for illegal dealing in liquors. Liquor figures in one way or another in the cases of the great majority of those at the jail. They at least, may harbor the impression that they are back in what some are pleased to call "the good old days," when the charges were less for the results now attainable only at high cost.

Will all the communities of the Quinebaug valley between the Massachusetts-Connecticut line on the north and Taftville on the south, lose the trolley service the Connecticut company is now rendering them, because of a drive against the elimination of this service by powerful city interests in Connecticut that are declared to be about ready to assert that the people of their communities no longer will willingly submit to being assessed higher rates of fare in order that Connecticut company lines, that are losing more, "eat in the sticks" be kept going?

Here is a real question and it is propounded this morning because there are rumors in quarters usually possessed of reliable first hand information in such matters that powerful interests in Hartford, aligned with interests from other populous centers of the state, are about ready to put this proposition squarely up to the public utilities commission of Connecticut.

Getting down to the meat of the proposition, there can be no denying on the part of well informed people who live in the Grosvenordales, in Putnam, at points the trolley line serves in the towns of Killingly and Plainfield and further south that the line serving them and running south from the southern boundary of the town of Thompson to Central Village and then on over the iron of the N. Y., N. H. & H. from Central Village to Taftville is no bonanza as a money-maker. That section of the road between Central Village and the Grosvenordales has never been known to pay a dividend since the line was opened approximately a quarter of a century ago. As a link in the system of the Connecticut company covering the state it has not been a producer of sufficient revenue to be rated among the real assets of the big corporation. But it has been kept going, and since the busses were driven out of competition with it, two or three years ago, has regularly rendered a dependable hourly service at all times of the year and is really a boon to those who do use the service.

Dancing every Friday at armory, Danielson. Paul Whiteman's, Feb. 29, Military ball—adv.

An advance in trolley fares becomes effective on lines of the Connecticut company throughout the state next Sunday, February 10. Tokens—in use on the lines—will be sold on and after that date at the rate of 8 1-3 cents each instead of at the present charge of 7 1-2 cents. The advance isn't heavy, and the company declares that it is essential because of advances in wages granted to its operatives and reduced revenue since a voluntary reduction in fare was granted by the company last spring. But announcement of the advance appears to have been seized upon as a ground for representing to the public utilities commission that cities like Hartford, where the Connecticut company's lines show a profit, as they do in other large cities, should not be called upon to pay more money for rides because the Connecticut company has lines in the state that are an alleged burden and do not pay their way. In plain language, it is said that it will be claimed that patrons of the trolley company in Hartford, Bridgeport, New Haven, Waterbury and other large and paying centers for the trolley company are being asked, through the increased fare, to pay at least a part of the cost of giving trolley service to this section of Eastern Connecticut—and other unprofitable localities in the state.

From a cold-blooded business viewpoint, there is some justice in this claim, it appear. The Connecticut company views its operations in the state as a whole. But the same line of reasoning likely would smash every trunk line railroad system in the United States if put into practice. Applied to the trunk line highway system of Connecticut it would mean asphalt and concrete in the state capital and other large centers and mud and muck over the larger areas of the commonwealth. Why should an automobile owner in Hartford be assessed any additional registration or other taxing costs because a section of a trunk line highway runs through Eastford or Brooklyn or Plainfield, Putnam or Killingly? No reason at all excepting that all the territory inside the borders is a part of that state, subject to its laws and jurisdiction, and, in turn, entitled to that fair consideration that modern civilization at least recognizes as for the greater good of all.

The same reasoning may apply to a public service corporation having practically exclusive rights in the state. What about the Southern New England Telephone company—alone in its field in Connecticut? Should one in Hartford pay a lesser charge for talking from that city to someone in Putnam—because Putnam is smaller—than a Putnam person should pay to talk to someone in Hartford because it happens to be a larger city, and because the subscribers in the Putnam division pay in less revenue each year than the company collects in Hartford? The same equipment is used for both conversations—the operation of handling the connections is the same. Yet the telephone company's earnings in the Hartford division are far and away above what they are in this division—or any other in this part of the state.

The fact is however, that there is a chance to make a little political capital out of razzing the Connecticut company on its earnings on the line through this city. Out in Hartford a few politicians that want something appear about to seize upon the fact to start an argument, hopeful that it may develop to their personal advantage.

Communities along the Putnam lines showed plainly at a hearing held before the public utilities commission in the superior court here, when the 'bus question was up, that they prefer trolleys to 'buses. There is no outward evidence that sentiment has changed since that hearing, which resulted in the removal of the buses from competition with the trolleys along the Putnam lines. The public utilities commission, following that hearing, eliminated the buses from competition with the trolleys. One may well wonder now whether that same commission will listen to any political proposal in Hartford that would take away the trolley service that may not be very profitable to the company furnishing it—but a service that the Connecticut company insisted through its representatives that it was desirous of maintaining when the hearing referred to was held in this city.

Friends here received cards Thursday from Judge M. H. Geissler, who is visiting at Tampa, Fla. The judge leaned to pictures of orange groves in selecting cards to send home, and commented on one that it is a great disappointment to him that he is unable to ship home a number of boxes of the fruit to friends, as he had intended, because he has been advised that even forwarding them by express, they are very apt to be frozen on arrival in the north at this time of year.

Ralph French of Eastford, who is on the United States steamer Tacoma, which went on the rocks off the coast of Mexico, has written the following letter to his mother, Mrs. Geo. French, describing briefly his experiences:

We left Galveston, Texas, Sunday morning, Jan. 13th, to go to Vera Cruz, Mexico. We got there all right but with bad luck. As we were coming in the U. S. S. Tacoma went on the rocks about five in the morning. We had a bad storm and that made it worse. We couldn't get off so we had to stay aboard for thirty hours with life or death in the fact of us.

After the storm was over a Mexican gunboat came out and took us off and brought all ashore. We stayed in a dance hall with spiders all around the overhead and wall looking at us as big as a quart measure.

We were there three days and one morning we sighted the U. S. S. Richmond. She was coming to our rescue. We went aboard that afternoon and the next morning we got under way for Tampico, Mexico.

I lost my hammock and nearly all my bag of clothes. We are now waiting for a transport to come and take us to some receiving ship.

The old Tacoma is piled high on the rock at Vera Cruz. She was a home and no other ship can beat her in my opinion.

STANZAS FOR MUSIC

There's not a joy the world can give like that it takes away,
When the glow of early thought declines in feeling's dull decay;
'Tis not on youth's smooth cheek the blush alone, which fades so fast,
But the tender bloom of heart is gone, ere youth itself be past.

Then the few whose spirits float above the wreck of happiness
Are driven o'er the shoals of guilt or ocean of excess;
The magnet of their course is gone, or only points in vain
The shore to which their shivered sail shall never stretch again

Then the mortal coldness of the soul like death itself comes down;
It can not feel for others' woes, it dare not dream its own;
That heavy chill has frozen o'er the fountain of our tears,
And though the eye may sparkle still, 'tis where the ice appears.

Though wit may flash from fluent lips, and mirth distract the breast,
Through midnight hours that yield no more their former hope of rest;
'Tis but as ivy leaves around the ruined turret wreathe,
All green and wildly fresh without, but worn and gray beneath.

Oh, could I feel as I have felt—or be what I have been,
Or weep as I could once have wept o'er many a vanished scene;
As springs in deserts found seem sweet, all brackish though they be,
So, midst the withered waste of life, those tears would flow to me.

VERY BAD JUDGMENT.

However it may look upon it now, there is reason for believing that Germany will regret the attitude which it has taken, or which its representative in this country has taken, relative to joining the other nations in half masting its flag at the death of Woodrow Wilson. Even though it based its attitude on the claim that he was regarded as a private citizen, it was a conspicuous position in view of the action of other embassies.

There may be nothing that can be officially done concerning the matter, but it is clear that it was a mistake and will reflect adversely upon Germany. It is impossible to regard it otherwise than reflecting very poor judgment, a bad diplomatic break that will react. The German New Yorker Harald declares "it was a lack of tact that the flag was not at once displayed at half mast. . . Without asking for whom the honor was intended it was the ambassador's duty to have outward signs of mourning displayed. The incident is very regrettable, especially because whatever injures friendly relations between America and Germany pains us deeply, and provides much joy to those people who wish Germany ill."

That is by no means an exaggerated view. The German ambassador went out of his way to increase the feeling against Germany, and at a time when extensive efforts are being made throughout the country for the purpose of raising large sums for the relief of conditions in Germany, in which movement the deceased former president was much interested.

Perhaps there should be no thought of such an incident in connection with distress conditions for which relief is being sought, but there is no reason to believe but what it will be encountered many times in connection with any undertaking in which Germany is concerned. If it represents the attitude of a blundering ambassador there is a means of preventing any repetition, but if it reflects the government of Germany it is less easily remedied.

RESUMING THE PROBE.

With the resumption today of the inquiry into the oil scandal there are possibilities of much interesting testimony being presented. It is evident that having gone into the matter to the extent which it has the committee has no intention of withdrawing now even though the president has put counsel to work with a view to prosecutions or the termination of the leases.

The committee has uncovered some facts that it did not contemplate. It has no idea how many more it can lig up and bring to light. It is certainly not ready to rest on its laurels, and there are those who insist that inasmuch as they have been brought into the mess that their side of it be heard. That is of course only fair, and through just such evidence there is no telling what other conditions and secrets may be revealed.

While former Secretary Fall succeeded in forcing the committee to get the authority which he insisted it did his testimony has apparently been reserved for another time and other inquirers, before whom it remains to be seen whether he will still insist upon refusing to give evidence on the ground that he might incriminate himself. There of course can be no toleration of any effort to cover up anything that actually exists. On the other hand those involved should be anxious to clear themselves and put their conduct and acts before the country in their own words.

The committee is doing its best to get at all the facts and it is unquestionably aware that only by approaching them from all possible angles is it going to succeed. It worked a long time before it struck a gusher, but now it remains to be seen whether it can maintain the pressure that will bring about a quick drawing out of all the facts or whether it must be restricted to slow and persistent pumping. There can be no thought, however, of doing otherwise than make a good job of the undertaking.

IT CAN BE DONE.

Safety isn't entirely an ideal. It is decidedly practical, and the great regret is that it isn't so recognized and the slight effort made that is needed to obtain its benefits.

Safety movements were begun years ago and it is periodically pointed out what might have been prevented had there been the exercise of a little care. It makes little difference whether it is in the factory or on the highway. It is impossible to ignore the presence of danger and expect to avoid accidents and injuries. It is a grave mistake to think protection is going to be obtained without some personal effort in behalf of self and others.

The records which have been made public of two railroad shops in New York state emphasize once again what can be done when the effort is made to avoid accidents. At Colonie, N. Y., railroad repairs show whereas 1904 men were employed 200,000 hours during January there was not an accident, and an equally good record was established at the Oneonta, N. Y., plant where 600 men have eliminated accidents for a period of two months.

These may be no different than records which other employes can show. But they are such that the railroad considers them worth setting up as examples to other shops. They indicate a realization on the part of those employes of their responsibilities to themselves and their fellow workmen, and if that same spirit was displayed in more instances, in shop or in the street, there would be that big reduction in injuries and fatalities for which there is such great need.

Safety first as a slogan should not be allowed to disappear. Its psychological effect is more and more needed each day. It is not an unreachable goal, but one that is repeatedly attained and one that should be striven for by a much larger number. Perhaps all accidents cannot be eliminated but it is certain that they can be greatly reduced in number and severity.

MARK THE ROADS.

The legislature of Massachusetts has been asked to give its attention to a bill which would call for the designation of certain country highways as semi-private roads on which the driver would venture at his own risk.

That such legislation will be regarded as favoring the automobilist and operating against the driver of a horse, if the roads are not to get any more attention than the designation might indicate, seems probable.

There is no escaping the fact, however, that the chief attention these days is being devoted to the main arteries of travel, and it would no doubt be of much benefit to the traveler to have some sign erected that will indicate the character of the road. But what seems to be quite important when such a matter is being discussed is the need of having all such highways marked. Everyone doesn't live on the cement road. Many are anxious to go to some point on the country cross road for any number of reasons, but they find in going through the country, and this applies almost as often to the improved roads as to the so-called country roads, that there are no signs telling where the roads lead to.

There may have been signboards back in the early days but they have gone or the markings have been obliterated. Some never had any and some roads would not be much used even if they were marked, but for the convenience of those seeking one road or trying to avoid another a system of marking should be adopted and maintained on which the character of the road might easily be indicated. Properly marked roads would be of great assistance to the present day army of road users.

OPPOSING GUN TOTERS.

"This business of carrying concealed weapons must stop," is the statement attributed to Judge Guillaume at Woonsocket after two men had been convicted before him for having revolvers in their possession without a permit. One had been shooting for practice in a lot, after having served time about five years ago for toting a gun, while the other was drinking in a saloon where he was displaying a loaded pistol. Fines of $100 and $200 with costs were imposed.

That the judge takes the proper view when he insists that gun toting must be stopped cannot be seriously questioned, and if as much vigilance is displayed in apprehending those who are carrying weapons as was done in these cases the proper discouraging influence will be exerted.

Those who feel the need of a gun in order to protect their home or themselves can obtain a permit by making the proper application, but more than the judge are aware of the fact that too many who want them for no good purpose are the possessors of such firearms. There can be no thought of denying the public a chance to protect itself while the gunmen and crooks are equipped with guns to carry on their business, but the many instances of shootings as the result of brawls, holdups or accidents make it clear that those who are found to be carrying firearms without a permit must be expected to pay the penalty. When court action makes this thoroughly understood it can be certain that there will be fewer instances of it. The court is by no means the only agency for enforcement, but it is relied upon to do its part, and Judge Guillaume has served notice that he intends to do it.

WHEN FRIENDSHIP FAILS

"I begin to think my father is right," sighed the girl with the bobbed hair.

"Fathers are, sometimes," admitted the young man who had come in with the girl.

"I hope he isn't, though," the girl went on, "because it's a terrible thing to think that one must go through life without friends! Father says, you know, that friends aren't of any use; they never get you anywhere."

"That's rather rough on the friends," remarked the young man, carefully removing the slumbering gray cat from the seat beside the girl.

"Well, I never exactly believed father, but I do now. I've come to the conclusion that all people want of you is to further their own selfish ends. My idea of a friend is some one who will be interested in me in return for my interest in him."

"I am," rejoined the young man.

"I didn't mean just you," said the girl, the suspicion of a smile breaking into the gloom."

"But you said 'him,' and that's me."

"Good gracious, man! Don't you know anything about grammar? Or poetic license, or anything?"

The young man looked bewildered and the girl proceeded.

"You see, I've been Annabelle's friend for so long, and we have always told each other our secrets and borrowed each other's clothes, and all that, and then to have her turn and play me such a trick!"

"What did she do?" asked the caller, stroking the gray cat.

"I can't tell you, because that wouldn't be fair to Annabelle, and if I am going to call myself her friend I must act like one, even if she fails to. I just wanted to show you how absurd it is to think that a friend will stick through thick and thin."

"Poor little girl!" murmured the young man, pushing the cat away, much to its surprise, "I'm awfully sorry, but just because one friend has proved false is no reason for believe in that all of us will. So cheer up; you still have me."

"Now you are laughing at me! That shows you are no friend!" the girl cried, with glowing cheeks.

"I am not laughing at you," he denied. "I am extremely sincere when I say you have me. However, I don't exactly mean that I want to be your friend for life."

"Wh-what" gasped the girl, the red roses in her cheeks giving way to white ones. "But that just proves what father says! Friends don't stay long! I didn't think that you would desert so soon, though."

"Now, see here! Don't fly all to pieces like that! I've only just begun to talk! You don't give a fellow a fair chance. I—well—I just wanted to make you understand that I—don't want to be just a friend, you know. Friends are all right, but they are terribly handicapped. It wouldn't suit me at all to be just your friend, because I'd have to be so polite and—"

"Well, I must say that you have funny notions! I thought you were always polite! That's one reason why I liked to have you come here! Now you go to work and say it's a nuisance to have to be polite all the time and so you want to quit being my friend."

"You are," said the young man in deliberate accents, "quite the most exasperating person I know! I never said a word of all that. What I started to say was that I am not satisfied with just friendship; 'just friends' would mean that I'd have no more right to you than anybody else would, and that doesn't suit me."

"Oh, I see," cried the girl, whose red roses had returned. "You are selfish and—"

"You bet I am!" the young fellow assured her. "I'm so selfish that I'm not going to stand for any other fellow hanging around you. I'm going to be the whole thing! Friends! I agree with father—friends are a nuisance. I—why, dear, I love you! You don't suppose I can be just a friend, do you?"

"No, indeed!" sighed the girl, snuggling. "I'll tell the whole wide world you can't."—Chicago News.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

William P. G. Harding, who probably will be asked to become receiver general for Hungary under the League of Nations for the rehabilitation of that country, is an eminent financier who served for some years as governor of the Federal Reserve Board, and at the present time is at the head of the Boston Federal Reserve Bank. A southerner by birth and training, Mr. Harding made a mark in college history during his undergraduate years, and still holds the honor of having been at 17 the youngest full graduate in the history of the University of Alabama. After leaving the university he began his career as a bank clerk at Tuscaloosa, and in 1886 accepted a similar position in Birmingham. Ten years later he had become vice-president of the First National Bank of Birmingham, and in 1902 became its president, a position he continued to hold for 14 years, until appointed a member of the Federal Reserve Board.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

MELBOURNE

Is there something in a city's Karma, as the Hindu would put it, that causes it to live over again its characteristic experiences—that makes city history "repeat itself?"

At least Melbourne, Australia, fourth overseas city of the British Empire, which, like Boston, recently was threatened by a mob when its police struck, faced an experience strangely like an occurence during its pioneer days.

"Melbourne first found itself suddenly policeless in the early 'fifties," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society; "when the discovery of gold at famous Ballarat turned the infant city upside down. Policemen literally dropped their night sticks on their beats and rushed to the near-by gold fields along with the butchers and bakers, the merchants and lawyers, and most of the other men of the community. Soon Melbourne was a town of women and children except for the horde of adventurers who were pouring through to "the diggings."

"Even the mesh of the ships that touched at Melbourne promptly deserted, sometimes making a clean sweep from master to cabin boy; and at one time 59 crewless vessels lay in the harbor. This situation presented grave social dangers. British marines were rushed to the city, and quickly, like their American fellow service men had the situation in hand.' A further parallel in Melbourne's history is that during the recent police strike, British Blue Jackets from the harbor came to the rescue, and helped keep order until the civilian police force could be organized anew.

"Melbourne had been in existence only a few years when the gold discoveries were made. Like San Francisco, which was begun about the same time, it was born with a gold spoon in its mouth, and became a city of wealth almost from the start. Victoria, of which province the city is the capital, was the most rapidly settled division of Australia; and Melbourne, growing with it, soon passed the boom-town stage and came to be pridefully referred to as 'Marvelous Melbourne.'

"It lives up to the cognomen to-day. It is built on generous lines, is slumless, is rich in beautiful parks and broad tree-lined streets and avenues; and its provincial and federal government buildings constitute one of the handsomest collections of such structures to be found on any continent. With its population close to the 800,000 mark it is mid-way between St. Louis and Cleveland in size, yet numerous old-timers are alive who remember when the site of the great city of today was just 'bush,' as Australians call their back country wilderness.

"It has a great roomy harbor with the outer portals of its bay some forty miles or more from the city's quays. Attractive residential suburbs, connected by paved boulevards, sweep along the edge of the bay for 15 miles from the business center, while other home districts cluster about the city in every direction. Only 25 miles to the east is a picturesque range of low mountains among which many Melbourne residents have their summer homes. There is just one fly in Melbourne's charming social ointment: democracy and wealth diffusion are so strongly marked that the ever-present servant problem seems unsolvable. And so the city, like its civic sisters in America, is becoming more and more a community of apartment houses and 'flats'.

"Melbourne is the capital of Australia—temporarily. When the Australian Commonwealth was created in 1900 both Melbourne and Sydney had ambitions to become the federal seat of government. Neither would give way, so the problem was solved by setting up a new federal district, like the District of Columbia in the United States. This was carved from New South Wales and it was decreed that Melbourne should be the capital pending the building of the new made-to-order capital, Canberra. It was thought that the permanent capital would be ready in a short time, but for 33 years Melbourne has served as the legislative and administrative center of the Commonwealth and it probably cannot be superseded for several years to come.

"Horse-racing is a passion with the Melbourners of today and each season huge pools and purses are made up on the outcome of contests between famous horses. Perhaps the 'prize complex' of the modern Melbourner is another case of history repeating itself, for Melbourne is literally a 'prize town.' Gold was first discovered in parts of Australia outside Melbourne's 'trade territory.' The citizens met in a sort of pioneer Boosters' club and decided that the city needed only a home-talent gold mine to make it a 'Bigger and Better Melbourne.' Thereupon a 'Gold Discovery Committee' was formed and a prize of about $1,000 offered to the first person to find the yellow metal within 200 miles of the city. Prospecting was stimulated and before long nuggets by the sackful were being carted to Melbourne from Ballaarat only 75 miles distant.

"On one other occasion Melbourne's penchant for prizes was demonstrated historically. A Melbourne merchant offered a purse of $5,000 to stimulate exploration beyond the coastal fringe that then constituted known Australia. The expedition which this prize encouraged was the beginning of a series of explorations that before long placed the details of a new continent on world maps. The flow of products from the back country that this prize offer helped to open up has brought many a dollar to the building up of 'Marvelous Melbourne.'"

Stories That Recall Others

The Surprise Melted

"A surprise" planned by a little chap for his mother while she was temporarily away from home, developed a real surprise for all members of the family.

Harry picked up in the yard following a recent freeze what he called a "snow cake" and this was to be mother's surprise. He carefully wrapped the "snow cake" in a newspaper took it into the house and put it in the top drawer of the chiffonier.

When mother returned he invited her to "see the surprise in the top drawer." One peep and ther was no doubt about a surprise—"the snow cake" had melted and spread over the freshly ironed linens and apparel and in the bottom drawer was about a quart or more of water.

Little Harry now will not have to be informed at school that snow will not always be a snow cake when taken into a warm room.

STATE HEALTH OFFICIAL ADDRESSED LION CLUB

With President George A. Finn in the chair the regular weekly luncheon of the Lions Club was held Thursday noon at the Wauregan house. The meeting opened with singing of America followed by a tribute to the memory of Woodrow Wilson, former president of the United States, the members standing in silent prayer for a minute.

The song leader was Max Hanover and the song programme opened with a selection by the guests of the meeting: Dr. Howard A. Lamphere of the state board of health, Hartford; Edward Rich, treasurer of the Norwich gas and electric office; Frank Neal of New York; James Johnson of New York; William Hedges of Hartford.

Reports were given on the recent benefit recital for the Newington Home for Crippled Children and all who cooperated in any manner to the success of the affair were given a rising vote of thanks. Lion Tyler Stanton was heard in a pleasing solo, Just a Kiss. Dr. Howard A.Lamphere gave a very interesting talk on Diphtheria and the Shick Test.

Senator Herman J. Gibbs spoke briefly on the virtues of the Republican party. The meeting came to a close about 1.30 with the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

A blizzard paralyzed the street car service in Three Rivers, Que., and halted the operation of a ferry across the St. Lawrence.

You probably know that Cod Liver Oil is the greatest flesh producer in the world.

Because it contains more Vitamines than any food you can get.

You'll be glad to know that Cod Liver Oil comes in sugar-coated tablets now, so if you really want to put 10 or 20 pounds of real healthy flesh on your bones and feel well and strong ask Lee & Osgood Co. or any druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets.

Only 60 cents for 60 tablets and if you don't gain five pounds in 30 days your druggist will hand you back the money you paid for them.

It isn't anything unusual for a person to gain 10 pounds in 30 days.

GIFTS MADE AT RECEPTION TO CHRIST CHURCH ORGANIST

ERNEST M. IBBOTSON

Thursday evening a small informal reception was given for Ernest M. Ibbotson, A. A. G. O., at the home of Mrs. Frank A. Robinson, 59 Sachem street, by the choir camp committee of Christ church.

During the evening a very handsome traveling bag and dressing case were presented him from his friends who regret very much his leaving but who wish him success in his new work.

Mr. Ibbotson leaves very soon for Detroit where he will be organist and choirmaster at the Church of the Messiah, one of the largest Episcopal churches in that city.

He was born in Meriden and his first work as organist and choirmaster was in his home town.

In 1916 he took charge of the music of Trinity Church, Bristol.

In the fall of 1918 he went to Hartford where he took up his studies with Arthur Priest, F. A. G. O., Mus B., organist and choirmaster at Christ church cathedral. He became assistant to Mr. Priest and later in addition to this work he took charge of the music at Trinity Church, Wethersfield, which position he held until he came to Christ Church, Norwich just four years ago as organist and choirmaster. He has done most faithful and efficient work in building up the music and morale of the choir and has won the love and respect of all who have come into close contact with him.

Since Mr. Ibbetson has been in Norwich he has continued his studies with Mr. Priest in Hartford, with the late Prof. Coerne at Connecticut College and With Prof. F. L. Farrell of this city. During last July and August he attended the summer session at Columbia University where he specialized in musical studies.

In 1921 he passed examinations in New York where he received his degree of associate of the American Guild of Organists.

He has composed a number of songs anthems, piano, organ and instrumental pieces, among them being two string quartet numbers and an organ piece which have been played at the Norwich Music Association, and a short communion service which he has dedicated to the choir of Christ church.

MASONIC ASSESSMENT TO BUILD NEW HOSPITAL

By a unanimous vote, the Grand Lodge of Connecticut, F. & A. M., in the closing session, Thursday, in Hartford, of its one hundred and thirty-sixth annual communication, voted to lay an assessment of $5 per capita on its membership, which is more than 41,000. The $205,000 fund so raised is to be used for the erection of a hospital unit at the Masonic home at Wallingford.

One-half of the assessment must be paid by the lodge before July 1, 1924, and the other half before July 1, 1925. The building will be four stories in height and join the dining room and dormitory unit which will be raised another story.

The Grand chapter of the Eastern Star voted a week ago to provide $200,000 for the equipment of the new hospital.

The Grand lodge voted Thursday morning that each lodge pay to the Grand lodge before January 1, 1925, $2.50 for members, other than thirty-year Masons, on its roll January 1, 1924. Of this $2.50, $1.35 will go to the support of the Masonic home and 35 cents for the expenses of the Grand lodge.

The new officers were installed by Retiring Grand Master Arthur M. Brown of Jewett City. Past Grand Master Frank L. Wilder of Bridgeport was grand marshal.

The session closed at 12.15.

The appointments by the new grand master, included the following: grand senior steward, Elbert C. Darbie, Danielson; district deputies — seventh, George Griswold, Old Lyme; eighth, David H. Seamon, Groton; ninth, Anders Jacobson, Stafford Springs; associate grand chaplains, eighth district, Rev. Chester H. Howe, New London; ninth, Rev. Walter B. Williams, Danielson; Herman Steimer of this city was appointed on the committee on printing, Fred G. Prothero on the committee on grand master's address, 1925, and Colin S. Buell of New London, custodian of the work for five years.

Albert S. Comstock of Norwich, D. Fairchild Wheeler of Bridgeport and Norman C. Stevens of Hartford were elected grand trustees Wednesday afternoon. The first two are reelections. Mr. Stevens fills the vacancy made by the death of Isaiah Baker, Jr., of Hartford, who was a grand trustee more than thirty years.

MANCHESTER GIVES PRAISE TO LORETTA HIGGINS CONCERT

Of the recital given in Manchester this week by Miss Loretta Higgins of this city, the Manchester Herald said: The advance notices of the remarkable ability of the youthful singer were not in the least overestimated. She came fully up to expectations in her splendid and varied programme.

In an editorial the Herald said: "Miss Loretta Higgins sings because she must. That was the impression we took away last night from the school hall where this highly talented Connecticut soprano delighted a thoroughly appreciative audience. She is but a girl, a delightful girl whose joyous exurberance of spirit finds its best expression in lilting, carefree balladry.

"Her choice of composers attests to her real versatility as an artist. The subtlety of Debussey is contrasted with the delicate simplicity of Leyade, centuries old Arne competes with our own Cadman in repertoire that arouses many a diverse memories. The poignant beauty of Bizet is matched by the totally different but equally human pathos of Malashkin.

"But Miss Higgins has the exceptional gift of making vivid to her audience the essential brightness of life, the undying hope and natural devotion to innocent joyousness that is inherent in the varied and different songs she selects. In her lighter songs she is the veritable spirit of merriment.

"And in such a melodious expression of sadness and mirth as the inimitable Kerry Dancing, with which she concluded a remarkably fine programme she succeeds in conveying to her hearers a realization of all the joy and mirth, the gray days and the lonely ones, the high hopes of youth, the glories, the defeats, disappointments and the memories that remain —the things that make life what it is, a checkered pattern of sorrow and song.

"At her early age Miss Higgins does astonish with her easy mastery of chosen art. She never falters over a large range and her voice maintains its natural melody throughout its most difficult pieces. And as a delightful crown to her musical control she is imbued with the veritable spirit of springtime which adds very much to the enjoyment of her songs."

Will Attend Short-Ship Meeting

A party of about twenty Norwich horsemen is to go to Boston next Wednesday to attend the annual meeting of the short-ship circuit.

TEAPOT DOME EXPOSURE IS PIT FOR DEMOCRATS

Hartford, Feb. 7—Pointing to "tentacles of the oil octopus extending into the cabinet of the last democratic administration, reaching many of them with its slimy touch," Congressman William Johnson Graham, of Illinois, speaking tonight at the twenty-first annual banquet of the McKinley Association of Connecticut, declared that "democratic politicians who were attempting to make political capital" of the Teapot Dome exposure "have found that they have succeeded in digging for themselves a pit to fall into."

Lieutenant Governor Hiram Bingham, was elected president of the association for the ensuing year, and New Haven, was selected as the place of next year's banquet. Other officers elected are: Treasurer, Captain Ridgely Larkin, New Haven; permanent secretary, Clarence G. Willard, New Haven; executive committee: Hartford county, William H. Putnam, Hartford, and Mae Stone, New Britain; New Haven county, Omar A. Platt, Milford, and Mrs. Albert Chamberlain, Meriden; New London county, George Bradford, Montville, and Mrs. W. Ellery Allyn, Waterford; Windham county, Raymond F. Gates, Willimantic, and Miss Katherine S. Byrne, Putnam; Middlesex county, Howard Lincoln, Middletown, and Mrs. Ernest Jennings, Deep River; Tolland county, Representative C. Dennison Talcott, Vernon, and Mrs. Annie E. Vinton, Mansfield; Fairfield county, Daniel F. B. Hickey, Stamford, and Mrs. Helen E. Lewis, Stratford; Litchfield county H. Roger Jones, New Hartford, and Miss Ella Considine, of North Canaan.

In addition to Congressman Graham, Rev. Archibald F. Campbell, senate chaplain, was a speaker. He extolled the virtues of McKinley and brought the banqueters to their feet with a cheer by praising President Coolidge. Nearly 400 were present, including many women.

FOUR WOMEN KEPT SECRET OF $100,000 PEACE PRIZE

A correspondent writes: The winner of the $100,000 Bok Peace Prize, Charles H. Levermore, was born in Mansfield, Tolland County, while his father, Rev. A. R. Levermore, was the pastor of the church at Storrs. Mr. Levermore's pastorate extended from 1843 to 1858 and it was during this time that the church edifice was erected and dedicated. The family resided at Mansfield Four Corners in the house now occupied by M. H. Parker.

Five persons kept the secret of the identity of the prize-winner, and four of them were women. The man was Dr. Charles Herbert Levermore himself.

Dr. Levermore said in New York this week that December 28 Miss Esther Everett Lape, secretary of the American Peace award, informed him of his success in the $100,000 contest. One of Miss Lape's office associates also knew he had won, he said. Then he told his wife and his stenographer. The latter had typed the plan anyway, he explained, and would have recognized it in the newspapers. He pledged her to secrecy.

It took only about three weeks to write the peace plan which brought him the prize. Mr. Levermore said but it represented nearly 40 years of thinking and studying. The big thought behind the plan, he stated was the use of moral force, as against economic or military force.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS GET STONINGTON APPEAL

An appeal from the finding of Tree Warden Joseph A. Vargas of Stonington, announced at a hearing in Borough hall, Thursday evening, Jan. 31, in which nine trees on Water street were ordered removed, has been filed with the county commissioners by Attorney B. H. Hewitt, in behalf of the Rev. F. R. Sanford, Miss May Burtch, F. D. Burtch and Mrs. Malvina B. Cutler. This appeal revoked the action of Stonington town tree warden and goes to the commissioners for decision.

NIANTIC PRIEST SENT TO SUCCEED MURDERED PASTOR

Rev. Joseph P. Rewinkle of St. Agnes' parish, Niantic, associate supervisor of parochial schools of the Hartford diocese, left Niantic early this week for Bridgeport, where he will assume temporary charge of St. Joseph's parish. The pastor of St. Joseph's, Rev. Hubert Daume, was murdered Monday night by an unknown assassin.

PLACED UNDER ARREST FOR NEW YORK POLICE

At the request of the New York police authorities, the Norwich police Thursday night arrested Gaetano Carlone, a musician, of 79 North street, who is charged with abandonment of his minor children in New York city. He was found in a Franklin street store by a squad of policemen who had been sent to look for him at his home. Sergt. Casey, Officers Farrel, P. Driscoll and P. Murphy made the arrest.

Carlone told the police that his wife, the mother of the children in New York, is dead and that he is now married to a Norwich woman. Officers from New York are expected to come here to take him there to answer to the charge.

Stubborn Coughs

STOP QUICK WITH HOME MADE COUGH MIXTURE

Not until you make your own cough mixture—a half pint of it for a small sum—will you know how easy it is to stop any bad persistent cough as if by magic.

It's pleasant-tasting, but that don't stop it from knocking out a cough quicker than anything else in the world. Children love it.

Get from any druggist one ounce of Parmint (double strength) — to this add a little granulated sugar and enough water to make one half pint—that's all there is to it.

This loosens the phlegm, stops the irritation, allays the inflammation, cleans out clogged nostrils, makes breathing easier, and causes sore throat and hoarseness to disappear.

With speed almost beyond belief this home made cough mixture stops the toughest hang-on cough, and all because in it there is a substance (too costly for ordinary cough syrups) that immediately covers the membrane like a soothing, healing poultice and blessed relief comes at once.

And it is always worth while to bear in mind that any remedy that overcomes catarrh, partially or wholly, is bound to be of benefit to those who are troubled with head noises and catarrhal deafness.

Get Parmint and get better.

WOMAN CONFESSES TO HAVING FIVE HUSBANDS

Esther Wisnewski, wife of Anthony Wisnewski of Preston, who was arrested last week on a bigamy charge on the ground that she had a husband in Shreveport, La., and had been released in the custody of her attorney pending a hearing in her case next Wednesday, was re-arrested Thursday by Constable Michael Nolan and was placed in jail.

It is understood, according to the authorities, that she has confessed to having five husbands

ASKING FOR VOLUNTEERS FOR JURY DUTY IN BOSTON

Boston, Feb. 7.—Federal court officers changed their hunting grounds for jurors today. Usually when the courts are short of jurors the panels are filled up by impressing men who happened to be in the corridors of the federal building. Today when it was found necessary to obtain more jurors the officers were sent into banks, lunchrooms and other buildings nearby where they asked for volunteers for jury duty. It was explained that the previous method had not been wholly satisfactory for the reason that often some of the men brought in were found to be on urgent business.

A Mississippi Valley Earthquake

Recent reports from various points in the Mississippi Valley telling of slight earthquake shocks are unusual: but they seem extraordinary, like extremes of temperature and other out-of-the-way weather phenomena only because man's memory is short, says a bulletin from the Washington D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"One of the world's greatest earthquakes, and certainly the most severe in America since the days of Columbus, occurred in the heart of the Mississippi Valley in 1811 and 1812," continues the bulletin. "Fortunately there were few towns and no bridges and dams and railroads to be destroyed in those days, for the pioneers had just begun the westward push that was likely to spread population and development all the way to the Pacific.

"The center of the disturbances was almost exactly in the bed of the Mississippi river, about 50 miles south of the mouth of the Ohio. The little town of Caruthersville, in what is now the southeast corner of Missouri, lay where the quakes were greatest. It was totally destroyed, though its inhabitants escaped both falling timbers and river waves and found refuge on a nearby hill. New Madrid, on the river a few miles to the north, suffered almost as much.

This region has practically no hard rocks, but consists of beds of clay and several thousand feet deep. It is in such formations that earthquakes cause greatest damage since relatively loose ground is easily moved, great earth billows roll, and cracks form.

"The bed of the Mississippi, which has lain so quietly, to the knowledge of the past two generations, was momentarily obstructed near New Madrid. Its waters flowed violently upstream and sloshed from side to side, destroying numerous boats at that river emporium. Great fissures opened in the surrounding country and jets of sand spouted out as they did in another disastrous American earthquake were actually felt as far north as the Canadian border and as far south as New Orleans. A hundred miles to the east boulders were shaken from mountain cliffs.

"The earthquake of 1811-1812 is not merely a dim memory. It left its marks deep in the countryside. Reelfoot Lake, 14 miles long and four or more wide, in the northwest corner of Tennessee, was its greatest geographic contribution. A heavily forested section sank to form this new body of water, and the giant stumps of trees killed by the rising waters still stand in the lake. Other changes in the topography of the region were made by the quakes, and the parts of the lake tell the story to this day. The land about the lake retains the forms of the huge billows into which it was thrown, and which become apparent when the section is viewed from an airplane.

"Numerous smaller lakes were formed by the earthquake west of the Mississippi, in what is now Missouri and Arkansas. Careful geological examination still discloses traces of deep fissures that were opened up in 1811, and which time, weather and vegetation have not been able to hide."

DWARFING NIAGARA

Five times the height of Niagara Falls! As far as British Guiana, Raleigh's "Golden Province," there exists the wonder of a waterfall warranting this comparison, although practically unknown to most of us.

"How many visitors," asks Mr. T. H. Macdermot in the United Empire Magazine, will even know in any real vidid way that such a sight lies there behind the low levels of the sea front, beyond the multitude of foot hills far back, hidden by the dark curtain of primeval forests, and by savannahs crossed by fine but still almost unpaved waterways.

"The discovery of the Kaleteur Falls was made only 49 years ago.

"Five times the height of Niagara is 822 feet, and that is the height of Kaleteur. The first part of the mighty leap of the river from the lip of the towering precipice till again the flood strikes the rock and, rebounding, swims over in a sloping cataract for another plunge, is 740 feet. Then the descent is finished on another lap of 82 feet.

Naturally the tremendous majesty of the falls it gathers a beauty and a solemnity and might of impression hard, indeed, to put into words."

Harry Lauder is just Scotchman enough to refuse to give any shows on Sunday. On his second American tour he was contracted for Sunday work without his knowledge. He has never been caught that way since. For seventeen years he has had but one manager, a Jew, William Morris, who is said to be one of the squarest men in the business.

"Y" SWIMMING TEAM MAKING RAPID PROGRESS UNDER COACH WILLIAMS

Although the local Y. M. C. A. has had its new swimming pool a short time as compared with other towns in the vicinity, some very good swimmers are being developed. The swimming team has won two out of three meets and expect to come through with another win over Willimantic in the near future. Most of the team is composed of N. F. A. high school boys under the age of 18. Some of the mainstays from the N. F. A. are John Fellows, Phil McNamara, John Sayles, Grove Ely and Jack Hendricks. Three of these boys, Fellows, McNamara and Sayles are on the relay team which has yet to meet defeat, easily winning their first races. McNamara and Fellows also show very good work in diving. Howard (Buddy) Soule, high school diving champion of New Jersey, is to have Fellows under his wing this coming summer. John has placed first in one meet and second in another in fancy diving for the Y. M. C. A., and his friends look forward to his making the Brown freshman team next year.

Grove Ely has no trouble in plunging the length of the pool and the Y. M. C. A. expects him to keep that part of the meet all his own way. The rest of the men on the team are Ruegg, Mossestian and Teddy Kundig. Teddy has done a great deal of swimming before coming to this country and is high man in points for the Y. M. C. A. He also holds the records for back and breast strokes in the pool. The team is being coached by Fred Williams.

SKATING STARS ENTERED FOR SARANAC EVENTS

New York, Feb. 7.—Three skating stars from the northwest have entered the national and international outdoor speed skating championships at Saranac Lake and Lake Placid, respectfully, according to an announcement today by Joseph K. Savage, president of the International Skating union.

They are Erling Olson, a Norwegian and a participant in the Norwegian national and international championships in 1921 and 1922; Daniel Graham, champion of the northwest at distances of 220 yards to one mile, and Thomas Pemuluna, 14 year old youth who will compete in the junior events. They will skate under the colors of the Butte, Mont., Skating association.

LEBANON MANAGER TELLS HIS SIDE OF STORY

Morris E. Burgess, manager of the Lebanon basketball team, writes to The Bulletin regarding the refusal of the Lebanon team to play Battery B on Wednesday evening at Lebanon. His letter is as follows:

Sports Editor: In justice to the Lebanon basketball team it is only fair to correct some of the impressions made by the article printed in this morning's issue in regard to the visit of the Battery B team. Berberick, the manager, as he called himself, was told over the phone by both the manager and the captain of the Lebanon team that no game could be arranged on Wednesday night, owing to the fact that the hall had been engaged for a game between Lyman High Memorial and Bacon academy of Colchester, said game was in progress when Battery B arrived and they tried to have the visiting team put in substitutes and give them a game, which of course, was refused.

Battery B's team was fully informed that no game would be played but they persisted in coming, which, of course, they had a right to do, but is not sportsman-like to let their temper get the best of their good sense. The manager is a man of his word and is well known as such, for the Lebanon team has played for two years with some fine teams that bring the finest type of manhood and sportsmanship when they come to play a game, and also the Lebanon team is well received and royally treated wherever they go.

Respectfully,
MORRIS E. BURGESS.

REPORT THAT MRS. MALLORY WILL REPRESENT NORWAY

New York, Feb. 7.—Mrs. Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, who will be unable to represent this country at tennis in the Olympic games because of a ruling by the International Olympic committee, has decided, according to the world, to accept an invitation to play as a representative of Norway, her native country.

Under the committee's ruling, an athlete who has once represented one country in the Olympics can never play in the colors of another. Mrs. Mallory, an American citizen through her marriage, represented Norway in the Olympic games in 1912.

Mrs. Mallory, since coming to the United States, has won the women's national tennis championship seven times.

WORLD'S RECORDS AGAIN LOWERED AT MIAMI

Miami, Fla., Feb. 7.—Gertrude Ederle and Sybil Bauer kept up their record breaking today, each cutting down her time in short swims for new world's records in the third day of the women's association swimming meet in the Roman pools of the Miami Beach casino.

Miss Ederle, starting from scratch, out-swam Adelaide Lambert and Virginia Whitenack in the 75 yard free style event, time, 46 3-5 seconds. Her former world record was 47 2-5 seconds. Sybil Bauer, Illinois A. C., made her second world's record when she swam 50 yards, back stroke, in 33 3-5 seconds. Her former world's record was 34 2-5 seconds, made yesterday.

Agnes Geraghty of New York, failed by two seconds to lower her 220 yard breast stroke mark, her time being 3:29 2-5. Ethel McGarry won a length of the pool free style dash in 36 seconds.

TROOP A, OF PROVIDENCE, AT PLAINFIELD TONIGHT

Troop A of Providence, will clash with the Plainfield quintet at the Community house tonight. The Troop team, who are considered one of the best semi-pro teams in Providence, have won the Armory league championship for two consecutive seasons and at the present time are leading the league with 8 victories and no defeats.

The above aggregation is made up of Kenney at left forward, who is leading the league in the number of points scored; Whipple at right forward, Sullivan center, Genbault and Slater playing the guard positions.

Plainfield will use the same team that defeated the Recs last week.

In the preliminary game the Buddies will line up against the Army and Navy Seconds of Taftville.

TWO WORLD'S RECORDS SMASHED AT CHICAGO

Chicago, Feb. 7.—Two new world's records and one American record splashed into existence tonight at the Central A. A. U. swimming championships under the auspices of the Illinois Athletic club. John Faricy, I. A. C., bettered his own world's record for the men's open 200 meter breast stroke event in a sixty-foot tank by 4 1-5 seconds, making the distance in 2:55 3-5. Johnny Weissmuller clipped 2 4-5 and Thomas Pemuluna, 14 year old youth who will compete in the junior events. They will skate under the colors of the Butte, Mont., Skating association.

RECEPTION PLANNED FOR OLYMPIC SPEED SKATERS

New York, Feb. 7.—Plans for a public reception to America's Olympic speed skaters were announced today by Joseph K. Savage, president of the International Skating union. A committee representing Mayor Hylan will officially welcome the skaters upon their arrival on the Berengaria February 12, he said.

Present plans call for a tug with a band and the welcoming party aboard to meet the liner down the bay and escort it to the pier. Providing sufficient time elapses between the arrival and departure of the skaters for Saranac Lake, where they will compete in the national speed skating championships, a public welcome will be staged.

President Savage today despatched a wireless message to the Berengaria asking whether Clas Thunberg, the sensational Finnish speed marvel was aboard, but as yet no answer had been received.

The skaters are scheduled to depart for Saranac Lake late on the day of their arrival.

WERNER MEETS WILLIAMS IN MAIN BOUT AT CASINO

With the opening of the new Casino at Danielson, Promoter Frank Barber has secured a pretty good looking "main" bout for this first attraction. Mr. Barber went to New York recently and booked Bobby Williams, a very sturdy little Englishman, with a good foreign reputation, who will meet George Werner of New York. Possibly not many know either boy, therefore, in fairness to Mr. Barber, the public must be told. George Werner was two years ago known to nearly every New Englander as Johnny Gray. However, the New York Boxing commission came along and made Gray take his right name. It was on this account that he is known as Werner.

Werner, or Gray, has boxed all the best boys in New England, including Nate Segal, Paul Doyle, Jimmy Gibbons, Charlie Parker, Jimmy Sacco, Jimmy Fruzzetti, Georgie Ward, Phil Bloom and Soldier Bartfield, and hundreds of others.

A real good slugging bout, this main event will be, and should attract many to Mr. Barber's new Casino club room next Wednesday evening.

TROPHY OFFERED FOR MURCHISON-HUSSEY RACE

New York, Feb. 7.—A silver trophy for a special match race at the Wilco A. A. indoor games on February 16, between Loren Murchison, of the Newark A. C., national 100 and 220 yard champion, and Francis Hussey, sensational Stuyvesant High school sprinter, was offered today by a member of the American Olympic committee, whose identity was not disclosed.

Murchison is ready to accept the issue but Wilco officials have not yet obtained a reply to their invitation to Hussey, who was credited last summer with a mark of 9 3-5 seconds for 100 yards in capturing the Metropolitan interscholastic championship. This time, equalling the world's record, was not officially recognized, however, because of a slight wind that aided the young sprinter.

Paris, Feb. 7.—The American Olympic hockey team arrived in Paris today from Switzerland. The team will play the Canadian Olympic team an exhibition match at the Ice Palace here on Saturday. In the contest the Americans will be without the services of Clarence J. Abel, who sailed for the United States on board the steamer Berengaria.

Long Signs With Dodgers.

Clearwater, Fla., Feb. 7.—Charles H. Ebbetts, president of the Brooklyn Nationals, today announced receipt of the signed contract of T. F. Long, pitcher drafted from the Mobile club of the Southern association.

HOLLOCHER MUST SIGN WITH CUBS OR GET OUT OF ORGANIZED BASEBALL

Chicago, Feb. 7.—President Veeck of the Chicago Cubs tonight served notice on Charles Hollocher, hold-out shortstop, that he must either accept the terms offered him for signing the 1924 contract, or remain outside the ranks of organized baseball. No trade or deal involving the player would be considered, President Veeck said.

The secret of Hollocher's demand against the Chicago club in refusing to sign until "the financial differences" between him and the Cubs had been adjusted, was revealed today when Hollocher said "that accruing amount of back salary" would have to be paid him before he would affix his signature to a contract. The sum involved is believed to be between $4,000 and $6,000.

Hollocher insists that the club pay him for salary alleged to be due him after he left the club early last August on a plea of illness. When he appealed to Commissioner Landis for permission to voluntarily retire from the game, his salary, President Veeck said, automatically ceased.

President Veeck said the club was willing to grant his demands, but insists upon splitting the payment, half of it at the end of the 1924 season and the balance at the end of the 1925 season. The reason President Veeck desires to spread the payment of two years is to assure the club of the services of the shortstop for that period. As Hollocher found no fault with the terms offered him on a new contract it is believed he will apply for reinstatement and accept the terms of back salary offered him.

William L. Veech, president of the Chicago Cubs, issued the following statement today:

"Hollocher in his telegram indicates that the club is in arrears in the payment of his salary, which is a charge of dishonesty.

"On or about August 1, I called Hollocher into my office and in the presence of Dr. John Davis, club physician, made the player the following proposition, which was accepted: The player was to visit an x-ray specialist. Three pictures were to be made and taken to any stomach specialist in Chicago, selected by the player. If the opinion of the specialist was that the player was suffering an illness sufficient to keep him from playing baseball, then the club was to pay all of the expenses caused by reason of the illness. But if the plates showed nothing wrong then the player was to get in and play shortstop.

"The player had one of the three pictures made and then went to St. Louis without notifying anyone connected with the club.

"He appealed to Commissioner Landis for voluntary retirement and this was granted. The pay of Hollocher ceased on August 2nd. It ceased for the reason that he left the ball club without permission and for the additional reason that he sought and obtained voluntary retirement. Voluntary retirement naturally means retirement of his own seeking."

ARMY-NAVY CLUB READY TO PLAY PLAINFIELD

In a letter to The Bulletin on Thursday evening, Manager Murphy of the Army-Navy club tells how he feels towards Plainfield's claiming the Eastern Connecticut basketball title. His letter is as follows:

Sports Editor: There appeared in your paper recently an article which seemed to reflect of the ability of the Army-Navy five by inferring that the Tartville team feared to play the Plainfield quintet. It is perfectly obvious that the writer of that article has manifested his ignorance of the basketball doings of this season by stating that I "spurned all inducements" for a game. It should be recalled that my team met and defeated the Plainfield club on two occasions. If Mr. Salisbury is the author of the article it is evident that either he is purposely ignoring the two-fold defeat of his club or he thinks the subsequent defeat of South Manchester team eradicates all previous defeats; which conclusion is very illogical, to say the least.

However, so that no alibis can be offered in the future, I am willing to overlook the inconsistencies in Mr. Salisbury's argument and wish to arrange a series with the Plainfield club. I fully realize the strength of my team and am anxious to demonstrate it to any team in the state. It is now only natural to expect that the next move should come from Mr. Salisbury to make good his claim for the title.

JOHN H. MURPHY,
Manager Army-Navy Five.

Sandow Matched With Lynch.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Feb. 7. — Sammy Sandow, local bantamweight, today was matched to meet Champion Joe Lynch of New York, in Cincinnati early in March. The match will be for ten rounds.

KNOCKOUT KING SIGNS FOR BOUT WITH PAT WALSH

New York, Feb. 7.—Paul Berlenbach, New York's middleweight knockout sensation, signed today for a 12-round match with Pat Walsh of St. Paul, at Madison Square Garden, February 15. Berlenbach has scored 23 consecutive knockouts.

Rowland Goes South With Yanks.

New York, Feb. 7.—The New York Yankees announced today that Clarence Rowland, American league umpire, had been appointed by President Johnson to umpire all games in which the Yankees participate on their southern training trip.

Cornell Matmen Win.

Ithaca, Feb. 7.—Cornell opened her wrestling season today by defeating Springfield Training school, 24 to 0.

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

Dave Robertson, former National League outfielder and last year manager of the Richmond team of the Virginia League, makes it positive he will not accept a transfer to Atlanta, in exchange for Joe Guyon, as the Richmond Club had willed. Dave quit playing ball and devoted his attention to running his sporting goods store in Norfolk, just as he said he would do.

At the meeting of the Mississippi Valley League held in Burlington on January 24, the cities of Burlington and Moline were awarded franchises, but was considered too far out of the way. Mike Sexton was re-elected president over his protest that he had no time for the job, and a schedule of 126 games was adopted.

Bobby Wallace, who is spending the winter in Los Angeles looking over the budding talent in various winter leagues for the Chicago Cubs, has signed a young pitcher named Burke: who will make good, if Bobby's word for it can be taken. He is a right-hander and besides being quite a pitcher, also is a pugilist and has appeared in the ring in Los Angeles, with credit to himself.

Commissioner Landis' secretary last week announced the reinstatement of a number of players who had been retired, suspended or ineligible. Among them were Del Gainer, Chick Shorten, George Cutshaw, Godfrey Brogan, Lee Taylor and Dave Hickman, all of whom had for one reason or another been listed on the inactive list. The presumption that all of them plan to get back into the game.

President John D. Norton, announcing his umpires for the season of 1924, nominated two new ones. They are Maunce Pigue of Nashville and Dick Campbell of Knoxville. The latter was in the Piedmont League. Pigue has had no previous experience as an umpire. Veterans held over are Bill Brennan, Dan Pfenninger, Harry Johnson, Hadley Williams, Bill McGowan, Louis Jorda and Tim Donahan.

The Pittsburg Club last week announced the sale of Roy Leavitt, an outfielder, to the Williamsport Club of the New York-Pennsylvania League. Leavitt is the former player of Brown University, who came to Pittsburg with much reputation. He made the trip to the training camp in 1923, showed lack of major class and was sent to Williamsport on option. Now that club gets him outright and welcome. Thus passes another collegian.

While they are worrying about the pitching John McGraw is going to get in the coming campaign it might be noted that he has accumulated seven flingers from the minors who come near to being the pick of the lesser circuits. They are, as a matter of record, Gearin, Dean, Malone and Bradshaw from the Association, Webb from the Southern, Baldwin from the International, Maun from the Western. And it hasn't cost McGraw a million dollars to acquire them either.

They are boasting in New York that Frank Frisch, with his new contract from the Giants calling for $18,000 a year, will be the highest paid ball player in the National League. But then they may never have had a glimpse at Rogers Hornsby's contract. President Sam Breadon of the Cardinals refuses to give out figures, but is quoted as saying he would be willing to wager that the Cardinals' payroll is heavier than that of the Giants, despite all the talk of John McGraw's liberality.

Baseball scribes looking for a story might make one out of the rivalry that's due when Maurice Archdeacon and Joe Rabbitt contend for an outfield berth with the Chicago White Sox. Here are two youngsters much alike in style and size and appearance. They have both shown speed records—probably are the fastest pair in baseball. And both are out for a chance to win a berth as outfielder under Frank Chance. The odds favor Archdeacon, for he cost the Chicago Club five times what was paid for Rabbitt.

Decision of Dick Hobitzel to resign his job as manager of the Charlotte team and return to Reading, there to play first base with certain hinted inducements, left Charlotte without a manager. The gap has been filled by the employment of Harry Dammau, veteran of many leagues and last year with Springfield in the Eastern. Dammau played third and first for Springfield last season. He might do that there but he will have some time of it filling Hobitzel's shoes in Charlotte both as manager and first baseman.

The acceptance by the American Association of the "modified" draft brings Outfielder Chick Shorten back to the game. Last year the Cincinnati Club wished to send Shorten to St. Paul, but found the rules prevented. Then it was proposed to send Shorten to a club in the Southern, but he objected and "retired." Now, that he can be sent to a Class AA league, the Cincinnati Club reinstates him and ships him to Minneapolis, now managed by the same Mike Kelly who wanted Shorten for the Saints last year.

To set the maples in the coming tournament of the American Bowling Congress at Chicago will require the services of fifty-six pin boys.

Ed Geers is today the marvel of the trotting world, after having been a driver for more than half a century. It is the judgement of horsemen that despite his 78 years, there is no better handler of harness horses, and a trotter with "Pop" up, has a better chance to win than with the reins in almost any other hands.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Meeting at New Haven

The Connecticut Special Education Association will meet at the New Haven High school, February 9, at 11.30 a. m. Miss Eleanor Johnson of The Hartford School of Religion will speak on "The Delinquent Child."

Mrs. Leslie Carter

Conservative playgoers realize the importance of a well balanced cast: that has been the one redeeming feature of most of the late New York successes. The Selwyns thinking of the public, also realized that point and in consequence the selecting of the cast to support Mrs. Carter was given more than a passing thought, for her engagement in the dramatisation of Olive Higgins Prouty's novel "Stella Dallas", tonight at Broadway. The adaptation is by Gertrude Purcell and Harry Wagstaff Gribble and those of you who have read the story will well know how close Miss Prouty's novel has been followed. In support of Mrs. Carter will be found Margaret Hawkins, Beatrice Moreland, Almeda Fowler, Julia Cobb, Ruth Darby, Anne Morrison, George W. Howard, Edward G. Robinson, May Harrison, Albert March, Mathilde Baring, Guy Milham and others.

AT THE STRAND

The vaudeville at the Strand the last half of the week as presented last night may well be classed as out of the ordinary. Not a weak act on the bill.

Dan Sherman, Mabel DeForest and Co. in The Jazz Circus is to vaudeville what Shakespear's The Dromios is to the legitimate stage, viz: the funniest comedy ever presented. For years Dan Sherman has shown his Jazz Circus until every vaudeville patron is more or less familiar with the doings of himself and his twin, and what more, all are anxious to see again the funny situations and hear the funniest dialogue ever presented.

Joe Sully and Cliff Hall present a skit called The Great Lovers. As lovers they are absolutely and entirely sans romance and sentiment. Their idea is the greater the lover the greater the laugh and so they have made The Great [illegible] great.

The Melody Maids in "Turn and Steps" are five young ladies that sure have got the tunes and steps and then some.

A rare treat for lovers of music will be found in Jean Schwiller who with his famous cello has played to the nobility of Europe.

Among some of the celebrities with whom he has appeared are the late Caruso, Tetrazzini, and John McCormack. Mr. Schwiller has appeared before the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Westminster, Lord Rothschild and quite a number of people of this kind as well as many thousands of others.

Malinda and Dade are indeed Royal Entertainers. They are colored folks and like most artists of their race, enjoy their work so thoroughly that others cannot help but enjoy it.

They sing and dance and have a bit of musical novelty. This consists of making music on a washboard.

The screen attraction The woman in Chains featuring Mrs. Rudolph Valentino, Martha Mansfield, William Tooker and many other stars tells the story of the ups and downs of life in an amazing way.

AT THE BREED

Viola Dana in her slippiest melodramatic comedy, In Search of a Thrill, a Metro production, is the treat in store for Breed theatre patrons today and Saturday.

Adapted from Kate Jordan's short story, The Spirit of the Road, and directed by Oscar Apfel, In Search of a Thrill promises to top in popularity all Miss Dana's previous productions, for it is a rare combination of comedy and thrills, done with the charming nerve and dash that is characteristic of the Peter Pan girl of the screen. Warner Baxter, Mabel Van Buren, Templar Saxe and Rosemary Theby head the supporting cast.

Miss Dana has the role of an American flapper in Paris, whose passion for continuous excitement leads her into breath-taking adventures. Fans will get all the action they want in In Search of a Thrill, for the story speeds from one adventure to another, culminating in a dramatic episode at a rendesvous of the Paris underworld.

Ann Clemance played by Viola Dana, occupies a villa near Paris with her aunt. In the French metropolis she meets Adrien Torrens (Warner Baxter), a young American author, to whom she was formerly engaged. They are attractive to each other again, but Adrien, a serious-minded chap, has no patience with Ann's reckless frivolities.

Feeling that she has lost his respect, and knowing his interest in the poorer unfortunate classes, Ann disguises herself as a crook and breaks into his apartment, hoping to win his sympathy. Instead of freeing her, Adrien compels her to accompany him on a tour of the slum district, where she realises for the first time the horrible conditions brought about by the indifferent attitude of a few of the wealthy aristocracy.

In a Montmartre dive, Ann is recognized through her disguise by a leading gangster, who was a witness of one of her aerier escapades. This thug plots with his Apache cohorts to kidnap the girl and hold her for ransom.

What follows is one of the most thrilling battles royal ever screened—that will make In Search of a Thrill a photoplay long to be remembered.

The cast includes Mabel Van Buren, Rosemary Theby, Robert Schable, Templar Saxe and Walter Wills.

Ruth Roland will also be seen in the last chapter of Her Dangerous Path and the Pathe news and a Sunshine comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

What Is Going On Tonight

Norwich automobile show at state armory.

Mrs. Leslie Carter in Stella Dallas at Broadway theatre.

Norwich Comm., lodge, No. 986, L. O. O. M., meets in Moose home.

Columbian Commandery, No. 4, K. T. meets in Masonic temple.

TODAY'S EVENTS

Twenty years ago today saw the beginning of hostilities in the Russo-Japanese war.

Patriotism will be the keynote of the 14th anniversary celebration of the Boy Scouts of America during the week beginning today.

Many Methodists plan to visit Mexico City and other places in that country for the ten-day celebration to be inaugurated today in honor of the semi-centennial of the founding of Methodist missions in Mexico.

This is the date fixed by the court in New York for passing sentence on William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, who was recently found guilty on a charge of third degree forgery.

Strenuous efforts are being made to obtain a commutation of sentence in the cases of Hughie Sing and Gee Jon, Chinese murderers, who are scheduled to be executed today at Carson City, Nev. They are the first to be sentenced to die under the new Nevada law providing for executions by lethal gas.

President Coolidge has tentatively accepted an invitation to address the Republican State Voters Association at a meeting in Washington tonight. Unless important business prevents his appearance, the President is expected on this occasion to sound the keynote of the campaign for his nomination for the presidency.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

PALACE THEATRE

The local premier of the widely heralded Universal production The Hunchback of Notre Dame will take place at the Palace Theatre Sunday night. Prior to the world premier at the Astor Theatre in New York city officials of corporation were reticent in discussing the plot changes made in the immortal Victor Hugo master piece, beyond stating that certain changes had been made to avoid offending any religious denomination. A careful reading of the New York criticisms, however, divulges that the changes were generally endorsed and simply deleted some of the grossomeness and switched the importance of some of the characters in order to make the ending more acceptable to theatre-goers. It is of interest to note that for the first time the critics approved changes in a masterpiece.

From all available sources of information Universal has reached the zenith with this production. Certainly no production was ever made with better ingredients of success. The producer had the story, one that is filled with action; he had the greatest of character stars; Lon Chaney; a capable director in Wallace Worsley and unlimited funds and studio facilities not excelled anywhere in the world. The fact that the total cost was just a trifle under a million and a half dollars gives some idea of the greatness of the production.

The noted cast in addition to Lon Chaney includes Ernest Torrance, Patsy Ruth Miller, Norman Kerry, Nigel de Brulier, Tully Marshall, Brandon Hurst, Gladys Brockwell and 67 other featured principals as well as some 3,500 extras. The Cathedral of Notre Dame was rebuilt in its entirety for the production, as well as eight squares of Parisian houses of the period of Louis XI.

AT THE PALACE

Featuring the bill at the Palace theatre for the last half of the week is one of the best brass instrument acts that has ever appeared on the local stage. This act features Mr. Stross, premier cornet soloist for Sousa's band for many years. Mr. Stross is nationally known for his ability as a cornetist and after Thursday's performances there was no doubt in the minds of those who heard him that his reputation was well merited. His triple tongue playing and remarkable clarity of tone marked him as a musician of extraordinary ability. His feature stunt in his playing is the length of time he holds one note, his record yesterday being one minute and 35 seconds. Another is that he reaches the highest note ever accomplished on th cornet. He is supported by four young women cornetists and a trombone player, all musicians of no mean ability.

The other feature act on the program is The McIntyres, two crack rifle shots. Mr. McIntyre does the larger part of the trick shoting while Miss McIntyre does the sensational stunt of acting as the human target. A .22 caliber rifle is used with extreme skill on both the still targets and on the swinging marks. The feature of the act is the extinguishing of the burning tapers with a rifle ball from the distance of nearly 100 Yeet.

Arthur and White have a comedy skit "The Doctor and the Maid" that is put across with good style.

Runyan and Trent have a comedy patter and singing act and Togo, the Oriental Daredevil his a clever rope sliding act.

The feature picture is "The Call of the Wild" a picturization of Jack London's book of the same name, featuring "Buck" the almost human dog. A comedy completes the bill.

BROADWAY

The Mail Man, Emery Johnsons super special will open at the Broadway Sunday for a four day run. Mrs. Emilie Johnson, congratulating her son, Emory Johnson, the producer, and Ralph Lewis, the star, for their brilliant work in The Mail Man, released by Film Booking Offices of America, Mrs. Emilie Johnson, author of the story and all the other Johnson successes including The Third Alarm, Westbound Limited and In the Name of the Law, asserts that the forthcoming attraction is by all odds her "greatest effort to date."

"I have written almost a hundred photoplays," Mrs. Johnson continued, "but none has been so intensely human, none has been so utterly thrilling to me as The Mail Man. I honestly regard it as my greatest story.

"To me the humble men are far more colorful and picturesque than most laymen realize. When we see them plodding along their routes throug the long hours of the day, they appear rather drab and uninteresting. Their gray uniforms often heightes this impression. But when we look into their hearts and their souls, when we know their lives as we show their lives in The Mailman, one readily sees in them a world of drama. To me therefore, The Mail Man is the best story that has ever come from my pen."

The Norwich Minstrel Follies composed of fifty local boys and girls are rehearsing their heads off and are tearing off harmony and dances that will make the Broadway principals that are to assist them green with envy. This big local attraction will open on Monday, matinee and night, see this local entertainment and be convinced that Norwich is in class A when it comes to real artists.

NEW LONDON ELKS INITIATE CLASS OF EIGHTY THURSDAY EVENING

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, Feb. 7—It is estimated that the cost of establishing a building line on Bank street, between Pearl and Golden streets and making owners of property come out with the front of their properties to that line will cost the city more than $100,000. It is the general opinion that the city will hesitate about incurring this expense. But there are other streets on which building lines might be established with good effect. The residential section should in particular receive attention. Other cities in the state long ago established such lines and they are being conformed to in the construction of buildings, with the result that the architectural beauty of the streets is preserved. There was a time when any sort of a shack might be erected in New London alongside of handsome residences and if the owners of the more pretentious property objected the shack was rented to as undesirable people as could be obtained to occupy it. Of course a sale followed to the owner of the elaborate home. That thing has been stopped and it will not be allowed to come to the front again. Evidently the city is making progress in that direction.

The funeral of John Rollo was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, the large gathering of mourners, including delegations from two Italian societies, of which orders Mr. Rollo had long been a member. The mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. John J. McGrath. Members of the two societies were bearers. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Master Franklin Martin, of Ledyard street, Michael Shea of Wauregan, Miss Alice Young of Blydenburg avenue and Mrs. Albert Babcock, of Montville, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged today.

The funeral of Mrs. Hattie Sawyer, widow of Charles Sawyer, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at Our Lady of Perpetual Help church, a mass of requiem being sung by Rev. John Rzemiewski, the pastor. The body was forwarded to West Roxbury, Mass., where the burial will take place tomorrow.

Funeral services for Minnie, wife of Patrick J. Foley, were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at her residence, 2 Denison court. Rev. George R. Atha, pastor of the Groton Heights Baptist church, officiated. Burial was in the Starr cemetery, Groton.

Tony Arionchuk, of this city, convicted at the last session of the superior court on the charge of violation of the liquor law, and who was fined $100 and costs of $119.19 and given 30 days in jail, obtained his liberty this afternoon, when he was liberated from the New London County jail by paying the amount of the fine and costs. Arionchuk was caught while in the act of bringing a quantity of liquor from Montville to New London.

Abraham Kanter and Louis Marcus of Hartford have sold a building lot at 58 Park avenue, Ocean Beach, to Henry J. Welson, also of Hartford.

James R. May has sold two dwellings and two small parcels of land on Goshen street to the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad.

One of the landmarks of New England, located at Center Groton and owned by Mrs. Lizzie Colver and her brother William Manier, was entirely destroyed by fire, shortly after 3 o'clock this morning, together with the entire contents of the large wooden structure.

The fire was discovered shortly before 3 o'clock when Manier and his sister were awakened by the strong odor of smoke. An investigation resulted in a fierce blaze being revealed in one of the living rooms and close to a chimney, built through the room. An endeavor was made to control the flames, but the fire gained rapid headway. A telephone message was sent to headquarters of the Pfeiffer hose company of Groton, requesting assistance. That company was despatched to the fire without delay, and although the company made a quick run, the house a mass of flames before the firemen arrived. The house was soon reduced to ashes and the firemen devoted their work to saving adjoining buildings. It is believed that the fire originated from a defective chimney.

Mrs. Emma M. Speirs, administratrix of the estate of James L. Speirs, today caused suit to be brought against the city of New London for $10,000 damages as a result of the death of her husband from injuries he sustained by falling on a slippery sidewalk. The action is returnable before the next term of the superior court.

Mr. Speirs was walking to his work on the morning of February 9, 1923, and when at the corner of Broad and Brainard streets, he stepped upon a stretch of ice that had formed by water flowing over the sidewalk from a building and freezing. Mr. Speirs was thrown to the sidewalk, his head striking the ice with great force and causing injuries which resulted in his death about a week following the accident.

Another suit has been instituted by Maria Urbani, who asks $2,000 from the same cause injuries sustained by falling upon an ice-covered sidewalk. The case is returnable before the next term of the superior court.

The police are seeking the whereabouts of Harold Slaughter, colored, of 9 Church street a tailor in the employ of Albert Moore of Main street, for the purpose of enabling the authorities to determine whether an attempt at murder was made at the Slaughter home Wednesday morning.

It developed today that about 5 o'clock yesterday Slaughter and his wife engaged in a violent quarrel, and in the wrangle Mrs. Slaughter is alleged to have taken a revolver from a shelf. In the struggle between the woman and the husband the revolver is alleged to have exploded. It is a fact that shot was fired and both Slaughter and the revolver are missing. Following the row Mrs. Slaughter went to the police station and asked that her husband be arrested, but when the police went to the house Slaughter had disappeared. The house showed unmistakable signs of the fierce fight that had occurred, for the kitchen was strewn with broken dishes and glassware.

In the superior court today the jury that listened to the damage suit of Robert Moore against the Gager-Crawford company, returned a verdict for the defendant after having deliberated on the testimony about an hour and a half. The case grew out of a collision some three years ago on Gardner avenue at Montauk avenue. Mr. Moore is a large owner of cotton plantations in the south and is a broker in cotton. His summer residence is one of the show places of this city. When the accident occurred he was riding with Mrs. Moore in a closed automobile with John Brown, a chauffeur who has been in the employ of Moore some twenty years, and who never before was involved in an accident. The automobile and the Gager & Crawford delivery automobile were in collision and Mr. Moore was thrown out and severely injured. He was brooked and declared that the responsibility for the accident rested wholly upon the driver of the delivery car. A jury in the superior court seems, on presentation of the evidence, not to have shared that opinion and returned a verdict against Mr. Moore. The Moore testimony was in the shape of affidavits for the parties then in the Moore automobile are now in the south. The case has been in the courts more than three years.

Joseph Viola is suing Joseph Foretta for damages of $10,000 in the superior court here, alleging that Foretta maliciously prosecuted and gave him a bad reputation last November. There was a fire in the Foretta house in Belden street then and it attracted a big crowd for it happened in the daytime. During the progress of the fire it was discovered there was a still in the house and that it was in use at the very time. Officers Hick and Philopena questioned everyone who might know anything about the premises and their occupants. They finally came upon Mrs. Foretta there and having questioned her as to the ownership of the still she is alleged to have declared that Viola was the owner and that she and her family were only tenants in the house and had no connection with the operation of the still. Foretta was prosecuted in the police court and was fined $200. Viola was arrested, but then the prosecutor learned that he had no evidence to convict Viola and asked for and obtained a nolle. Since then Viola has been threatening to bring this suit and finally carried out his purpose. The case will be finished tomorrow. Court officials and police officers were the principal witnesses today.

Mrs. Charles Hullivan has moved from Thames street to 138 Ocean avenue.

The 44th annual banquet and meeting of St. John's Literary society was held last night at the Hotel Mohican. The affair was a most enjoyable one, being attended by about 40 members of the organization. Conspicuous among the gathering was Owen Murtha, of West Colt street, one of two surviving charter members. The other charter member is William Denebey, a resident of Harrisburg, Penn., who was unable to attend. He sent his regrets at not being able to be present in a letter written with a kindly feeling toward the members and with best wishes for the success of the society. Among the speakers were Rev. Thomas H. Tiernan, a former curate at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, now pastor of the church at Unionville and Rev. John J. McGrath. Within a short time the rooms so long occupied by the society in the Cronin building will be vacated and accommodations sought elsewhere. The officers of the society have been appointed to secure a suitable meeting room and to report back to the society. The election of officers resulted in the following choice: President, Julian D. Moran; vice president, John J. Kelley; secretary, David Moran; treasurer, John M. Callahan.

During the evening Councilor William C. Fox, John J. Kelly, John C. Geary, Joseph P. McGarry and Edward S. Neilan spoke briefly in a reminiscent way.

St. John's Literary association is one of the oldest organizations of its kind in this end of the state and has trained many men who have become prominent in the public life of the city during its activity of over half a century.

Samuel Cherkasky, located in California, who arrived in New London several months ago because of the death of his father, Benjamin Cherkasky, formerly of Summer street, has returned to his business in the west.

Announcement is made of the wedding, Jan. 27, at Champagne, Ill., of Harold T. Lawson, formerly of New London and Miss Dorothy Huntington, daughter of Mrs. Charles Hill of Urbana, Ill. Mr. Larson is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence T. Larson of 187 Shaw street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father John Mitchell Page, assisted by the Rev. Father Wallace in the chapel of St. John the Divine.

Mr. Larson is a graduate of Nathan Hale Grammar school, this city, and the University of Illinois. At present he is employed as a building inspector for the Illinois Central Railroad Co.

Miss Elizabeth Larson of this city, a sister of the bridegroom, was bridesmaid. Miss Larson is a graduat of W. M. I.

Mr. Larson and his bride will reside at 404 South Birch street, Urbana, after a honeymoon spent in Indianapolis.

Charles Ashcraft, a teamster, residing in Chesterfield, was taken into custody late this afternoon by State Policeman B. W. Kenerson charged with breach of the peace. He was later liberated in the custody of his counsel, G. Curtis Morgan.

The largest class of candidates ever to receive the intiatory degree in New London lodge of Elks was that admitted this evening. Eighty candidates received the degree and because of the great number the exercises and entertainment which followed, were held in the state armory, as the lodge room is not sufficiently large to accommodate such a gathering as assembled to witness the initiatory work and enjoy the social hours that came later. The degree was worked by past exalted rulers. The night also brought about the annual roll call. At the conclusion of the business session an elaborate feast was served and several acts of vaudeville provided entertainment.

Private funeral services were held at 4.30 o'clock this afternoon for Mrs. Anna Hahn, widow of Joseph Hahn, at her home, 320 Huntington street. Rabbi Sidney Fidlschi of New Haven officiated. The body was forwarded to Brooklyn for burial tomorrow in Union Field, where the Hahn burial plot is located.

Mrs. Nathan Harris of 325 Ocean avenue left this evening for Los Angeles, Cal., where she will remain until Easter as the guest of her brothers. Mrs. Harris is making the western trip in the anticipation that her health will be materially benefitted.

New Cough and Cold Remedy

IN LOZENGE FORM—ACTS QUICKLY—FOLKS EVERYWHERE USING THEM.

Old folks, middle aged people and children are now using a wonderful new form of Cough and Cold Remedy in pleasant lozenge form. The quick effects produced are said to be due, not only to the rare potency of the ingredients, but to the fact that the lozenges dissolve slowly in the mouth, thus carrying constantly soothing, healing medicament to the inflamed membranes of the throat and congested parts.

The very first lozenge loosens a dry, tight cough, and soon the phlegm will thin out. A day's use will usually break up an ordinary throat or chest cold. This remarkable new form of cough and cold remedy is sold by most druggists under the name of Hyneph'n Honey and Tar Cough Lozenges. For sale at Lee & Osgood Co.

WILLINGTON

The funeral of Mrs. Mary J. Clark was held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Hull, at Norwich last week Friday afternoon. Burial was in Willington cemetery in the family lot, beside her husband, Lucien Clerk. There were services at the grave at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Clark had many friends here who expressed sorrow on learning of her death.

The funeral of Charles Eldredge was largely attended. Rev. Earl W. Darrow of Holyoke, a former pastor, officiated. The bearers were Edward Eldredge, Clinton Eldredge, George P. Bugbee and Samuel Pourtrey. Burial was in the family plot in the old cemetery. There were beautiful floral pieces.

TO REPORT REVENUE BILL IN THE HOUSE MONDAY

Washington, Feb. 7.—The first step in the revision of federal taxes was completed today when the house ways and means committee, after two months' consideration, agreed to report the new revenue bill to the house. Shortly after the House opened debate on another feature of the taxation program, the constitutional amendment resolution to prohibit issuance of tax-exempt securities.

The committee revenue bill proposes reduction in income tax rates amounting to a loss in revenue of about $220,000,000 annually and cuts of about $174,000,000 annual revenue from the indirect or war excise taxes, many of which were repealed. In addition a 25 per cent reduction in 1923 income taxes payable this year was provided, saving taxpayers about $225,000,000 on these taxes.

Chairman Green will report the measure to the house next Monday with prospects of an extended fight on the floor against the income rates approved by the committee.

The revenue bill was voted out by the committee, 15 to 1. Eight of the eleven democrats voted "present," announcing they did not wish to delay a report of the measure but were opposed to the income rates fixed by the republicans in private and which conform strictly to the recommendations of Secretary Mellon.

The income rates provide for a reduction in the normal tax on the first $4,000 of net income from 4 to 3 per cent and from 8 to 6 per cent on the remainder of the net income. The maximum surtax rate is reduced from 50 per cent to 25 per cent, to be levied against net incomes of $100,000 and over. The graduating scale starting at one per cent is made to apply first at incomes of $10,000 instead of at $6,000.

The measures also provides for a reduction of 25 per cent in taxes on incomes which are earned, all incomes under $5,000 being classed as "earned" for purposes of this reduction. The amount of income which may be declared earned is limited to $30,000.

The indirect taxes were revised to include repeal of the tax on telephone and telegraph messages, soft drinks beverages, candy and several other articles. Taxes on all theatre admissions of fifty cents or under also were repealed.

COUNCIL ON COOPERATIVE MARKETING OF FARMERS

Washington, Feb. 7.—Endorsement of the co-operative marketing movement by President Coolidge and addresses on various angles of the question marked the opening session here today of a three-day conference of the National Council of Farmers' Co-operative Marketing Associations.

President Coolidge, in his message to the conference, declared there was need also of co-operative organization among urban consumers. He advocated "a close working relationship between the producer and consumer, perhaps on an ideal toward which the large co-operative movement of the country should aim."

Speakers at today's meeting, who urged further development along co-operative lines, included former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, Senator Capper, republican, of Kansas; and Robert W. Bingham, Louisville, Ky., publisher and chairman of the conference.

Frank W. Simmonds, deputy manager of the American Bankers association, told the conference that "it would, unfortunately for the farmer if he becomes imbued with the idea that co-operative marketing in itself is a panacea for all agricultural ills."

A tremendous problem awaits solution in crop mortgages and farm tenantry, Carl Williams, president of the American Cotton Growers' Exchange said, in urging appointment of a special group by the conference for a year's study of these questions. The threat of the money-lender to make the farmer sell his crop at harvest is keeping the majority of American farmers in virtual bondage."

Thomas E. Wright, general manager of the New York Canning Crops association, said that the grower must be taught that the co-operative organization is not formed on the basis of price, but rather on the basis of service. He advocated an educational campaign in the interest of the co-operative movement and declared standardization of products and sales, honesty with the public, based on the right type of management, were essential to its success.

VITAL FACTS FOR WOMEN

Sooner or later almost every woman is brought face to face with the fact that she is a victim of some weakness or ailment peculiar to her sex. It may be the young woman suffering from pain or irregularities, a mother who has brought on some weakness or displacement from overwork, or the middle aged woman passing through the most critical period of her life. For each of these trying periods Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has proved the greatest boon ever given to women, and there are women living in every town and city in the country who testify to its value.

DIED OF HEART FAILURE AFTER FALL OF WIFE

Meriden, Feb. 7.—Shortly after his wife, 76, fell on the rear steps of their home and broke her leg late this afternoon, Adolph Werking, 78, of South Main street, Southington, died almost instantly from an attack of heart failure.

Werking had been troubled by a chronic heart condition, the shock of his wife's accident being attributed as the cause of his sudden death. Due to Mrs. Werking's advanced years it is feared she will not long survive her husband.

David H. Pyle of the Allied Machinery Company, a subsidiary of the American International Corporation sails don the Paris to study trade conditions in European countries.

CHARGED WITH SWINDLING DETROIT COAL MERCHANT

Chicago, Feb. 7.—Joseph "Yellow Kid" Weil and Fred Buckminister, known to the police as two of the slickest confidence men in the country, and who told the world of their reformation when released from prison a year ago, were indicted here today, charged with swindling George W. Malcomson, wealth Detroit coal merchant, of $80,000 in a copper mine transaction last December.

PRODUCERS AND CONSUMERS SHOULD BE BROUGHT NEARER TOGETHER.

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Dwight B. La Du, who is state engineer and surveyor over in our neighboring state of New York gravely informs the legislature of that state in his latest annual report that "the best market for farm produce is in New York city and its environs."

This volunteer statement leads at least one old haywood to suspect that the engineer and surveyor of the Empire state never tried to engineer a sale of farm produce in New York city and never had occasion to survey the empty compartments of the deflated pocket-book with which he returned from that modern Gomorrah.

For his statement, as it stands, is exactly and entirely wrong. Instead of being "the best market" for farm produce, New York city is the very worst.

It is one which experienced producers of farm products shun as they would shun any other hold-up.

It represents to the farm producer just about what the spider's web represents to the fly,—a place to be caught and sucked dry in.

Its attitude towards the farm producer is strikingly like that of the cat towards the mouse between its paws, and its true sentiment is very much the same, i. e., "You're my meat!"

If Mr. La Du, who manifestly ought to confine himself hereafter to building dams and surveying new highways, had said that New York city was "the biggest market" for farm produce, he might have remained within shouting distance of the truth.

But there's a real difference between the biggest thing and the best thing. As much, sometimes, as between a ton of mud and a ten-carat diamond.

If other things were only equal it might be, in this matter of markets, that the biggest would therefore be the best. Just as, in that case of the mud and the diamond, if their composition was the same the ton would be worth more than the ten carats. But, you see, their composition is not the same. It is so manifestly unlike that the prudent man, who would hold up both hands to catch the diamond if he saw it coming his way, would with equal meal jump from cover if he noticed the ton of mud about to fall on him.

New York city, unquestionably eats or otherwise consumes a bigger quantity of farm products than any other city in the country. If it obtained them or tried to obtain them in a decent way, by a fair exchange of money for money's worth, it might become a desirable market.

That, however, is the one thing which it does not do, does not try to do, apparently, doesn't ever think of as a possibility.

Trade used to be considered as a sort of barter by which one man who had too much of a certain product on hand exchanged his surplus for something which he needed but didn't have with another man who had too much of that latter product. This kind of trade helped both sides and was profitable to both. It would be still,—if it were done any more.

For instance, the hungry city man who has money which he can't eat, but no turnips which he could eat if he had them, finds a farm producer who has more turnips than he can possibly get away with, but no money with which to buy winter boots. So they swap. The man who has money but is in danger of starving to death, exchanges it for turnips which will at least keep soul and body together. The farm producer, who wants boots to keep his toes from freezing, exchanges turnips which are small help in that direction for money wherewith to be shod. Both are better off for the transaction. Both have gained by it. Both have "made money," as the slang phrase has it.

But, as things are, when the farm producer attempts to exchange some of his surplus turnips or potatoes or cabbage or corn with New York city, for an equitable return in New York city's surplus money, then he discovers that things are not what they seem.

Instead of proposing or considering a fair exchange which is not and never has been robbery, New York by its buyers proposes and will consider only a confiscation and sequestration of from two-thirds to three-quarters of the product's fair value. The farm producer who tries to do business in that city might quite as well throw his surplus into the river and feed the rest to the crows. This would leave him about as well off in the end, and save considerable worry and some travel.

For years if not generations, the much bepuffed and self-praised business geniuses of that city have been developing a system of distribution which is so roundabout, so complicated, so inefficient, so wasteful and so costly to all who become entangled in it that it would be considered a miracle—if any exhibition of human greed and futility were longer regarded as unusual.

No one man is responsible for it. You can't lay your finger on any one as specially guilty. It has been a slow growth, the accumulation through generations of advantages won by organized greed over popular carelessness and thriftlessness. Until now it has reached such a point that the price the city will pay producers for their goods is seldom half—often not so much—of the price it charges just for passing them around, once they have arrived.

Why, it is a matter of record that an inquiring congressman lately found that the cost of getting a carload of flour from the New Jersey meadows, ten miles outside New York, to the retail stores was greater than the whole cost of moving that flour from Minneapolis to New York's back door.

Over and over again in the past few years it has happened that carloads of farm produce, reaching New York from rural producers, have netted those producers less than the cost of the bags or barrels used as containers, though that produce, when eventually been sold to the consumers for enough to pay the producer big profit, could be have got even the half of it.

For one example, the Florida grower who shipped ten thousand heads of fine lettuce which retailed at 20 cents a head—$2,000 for the lot—and who got $18.75 cents for it. The loss was taken up in city distributing costs and profits.

For another instance, the onion grower of western New York who shipped 360 bushels and got back a bill for something like $30 to make up the charges against the carload. Then, though subsequent investigation showed the onions had arrived in fine shape and had been sold, eventually, for prices running over $2 a bushel.

For another instance, the potato-grower who got a return of $1.41 for a carload of potatoes, though they sold, off the car, for over $500 and retailed to consumers for more than $800. In both these latter cases, the difference was deed up in distribution costs and excessive profit-taking.

Why, if a congress of morons had spent ten years muddling up a hodge-podge of irrationality they couldn't have worked out a bigger piece of imbecility than that represented by the distributing systems of New York and most other large cities.

When even a state engineer and surveyor gravely announces that such a city offers "the best market" for farm produce, it is enough to make a horse laugh.

There is no doubt that the jungle and chaos in whose inextricable complexity "big business" has buried the distributing system of the city affords innumerable opportunities for said "big business" to win much loot. Pickpockets and sneak-thieves like to work in crowds. The denser and more disorganized the mob the better their chances not only for making fat hauls but for getting away with them.

But why should that mob heat at the innocent bystander who gets caught in it, as if he were the cause of the pocket-picking? Why throw blame on the one whose pocket is pilfered, rather than on those who do the pilfering?

So far as the prices of farm-grown products are concerned, it is safe to say that nineteen-twentieths of the fault for their being so high to consumers lies, not with the farm producers, but with the city handlers; with the speculators and the storage men and the commission men and the wholesalers and the truckmen and the retailers and those other children of the horse-leech who stand thick on both sides of the road, forever crying "Give, give!"

Today the one outstanding and imperative economic problem is how to get consumers and producers within hand-shaking reach of each other so that they may exchange their surpluses direct, instead of having to waste from two-thirds to three-quarters of the value of each trade in graft.

It is a problem which ought to compel the immediate and whole-souled attention of statesmen;—which would compel it if there were such still in places of authority. Instead, congressmen are exciting themselves almost to fisticuffs over tempests in teapots—Tea-pot Domes, if you choose. They are all "hot up" over some picayune graft of a few hundred thousand dollars, while they absolutely ignore the wholesale graft of millions and millions which is being levied, every day, on the legitimate business of the country.

There's "politics" in one, and nothing more than common sense in the other. The choice they make shows their own calibre.

In the meantime, the consumers of New York city, if they were wise of brain and just of soul and, foresighted and forehanded, might, of themselves, and without waiting for the impossible from congresses or legislatures, transform that city into actually "the best market" on earth. They might do it just by cleaning their own house with their own brooms.

They could revolt against the plutocracy of graft which now lives and enriches itself off their needs. They could refuse to pay outrageous tribute to the coffers of the creaking juggernaut in order to buy immunity from its grinding wheels.

In other words, they could enforce their own economic freedom any time they were ready to take enough trouble and do enough work.

So long as they won't do either, but prefer to pay others for taking the trouble and doing the work so long they'll have to pay and pay grandly.

The same truth applies to other consumers in other cities. The average consumer is today paying twice as much as he ought to for his food, and the average producer is getting less than half as much as he ought to for that food, mainly because the consumers are too shiftless and easy-loving, too "slack" and too backbone-less to take the trouble and do the work and bear the temporary inconvenience necessary to achieve independence.

If our forefathers had been the same sort of clams, we should have been living under King George, yet!

THE FARMER

FORESTS ARE PRACTICAL QUESTION FOR STATE

Decreased farm production in Connecticut is directly akin to the devastation of its forests by lumber cutters, declares State Forester Austin F. Hawes.

Scarcity of farm labor is the cause of the steady decline of produce growing in this state in the last 40 years, but the basic reason for the change is that farms a generation ago provided labor six or seven months a year and the forests gave employment in the remaining months he says. With the forests cut down and not rehabilitated, farm labor has no outlet for its service in the winter except the cities.

He says that people in Connecticut are more inclined to think of the forests in a sentimental light than from a practical standpoint. They think of them as a place to fish and hunt in and few realize the amount we are dependent on forest products for our every day existence. Mr. Hawes said:

"Two-fifths of our lumber today," he continues, "comes from the Gulf states and two-fifths from the Pacific coast, while a generation ago, all our building materials were native grown or from nearby states."

"The freight from the Pacific coast is necessarily a heavy item of cost attached to lumber now used, but not all of the $40 difference between the $100 which western fir lumber costs us, and the $60 charge in Seattle is in carry charges. A good part of this is premium exacted for our total dependence on the western source of supply through not having native forests. With southern lumber soon to be a thing of the past, New England with its vast lumber needs will become more and more dependent on the west coast for timber and competition with the middle west manufacturing cities will become sharper through their closer proximity to the supply.

"The only answer is to raise more of our lumber in our own states. In Connecticut we have 1,500,000 acres of land which has very little value and can be bought for from $4 to $10 an acre. There is no reason why this land cannot be worth several hundred dollars an acre.

"The State Forestry department has a little piece of 30 acres at Cornwall, Conn., with fine growth hardwoods averaging three feet in diameter and 130 feet high and cutting from 2,000 to 3,000 board feet per tree. This land is worth $1,000 an acre. We could have had thousands of acres of this land if proper measures had been taken in the past."

The higher costs of lumber arising from lack of a local source of supply, has been a big factor in the increased costs of rent as 60 per cent. of the building cost is materials and the major part of that in a frame building is lumber, the state forester said. To the manufacturer lumber is a vital problem as vast quantities go into the product and its boxing.

"Of the $60,000,000 million feet of lumber used in Connecticut annually, 10 per cent. is raised in Connecticut and 30 per cent in all New England, with the remainder brought in from outside.

"Prosperity of the many small towns where population has decreased, 50 years ago depended on the woodlands to provide labor during the winter spell when nothing could be grown. Now our farms offer employment only six or seven months.

"Protection against forest fires is one of the most important items. In Massachusettes one per cent. of the total forest area is burned over each year, while two and one half per cent. is burned over in Connecticut, the biggest percentage of any New England state.

"As a measure of protection the State Forest department is forming protective associations of land owners. We have one started with 40 owners controlling 10,000 acres of timber up near Hartford. The state matches an assessment of four cents per owner, and fire patrol and other protective measures are made possible by the fund. Another such cooperative group of timber owners is being formed in Fairfield county with the Bridgeport Hydraulic company as the leader.

"City people often go into the woods and carelessly set fires but last year we obtained 45 convictions of people for fire law statute violations. This has tended to make people more careful.

"It has been the practice in Connecticut to cut timber when too young for cord wood. The brass companies of the Naugatuck Valley have stripped this region many times for this purpose."

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

By DAVID CORY

VISITING SHADY FOREST IN WINTER

Little Miss Cricket loves to sing
Out in the fields where the cowbells ring.
But when Mr. North wind puts on his socks,
She hides herself in the little wood-box.

Yes, sireebus, as Granddaddy Bull-frog would have said, had he not been asleep way down in the warm mud at the bottom of the Old Duck Pond That's where he went in the winter time. He didn't want to have his feet full of chilblains. On indeedy, Mr. Jack Frost.

As for the Three Little Grasshoppers, who all summer fiddled away in the field of wheat, they were wise enough to hop into Lady Love's little kitchen when the cold weather came. And all through the cold wintry months they fiddled pretty music to make things cheerful. The little bunny family were never in want of sweet music. If Miss Cricket wasn't singing, Lady Love was humming a tune as she ironed her bunny boy's pink pajamas. And when the song was finished and she hopped out to the pump for a pail of water, the tiny cuckoo popped out of her pretty clock-house on the wall and told the time of day. Yes, there was music in the little white bungalow in the dear Old Bramble Patch.

Of course, the little bunnies kept a sharp lookout for fear that Danny Fox or Old Man Weasel might slip in, but that was not likely as those old robbers would have found it no easy matter to squeeze through the brambles. The sharp thorns would catch and tear their fur overcoats. So they usually sneaked along the Old Rail Fence, looking here and there, hoping to catch a bunny unaware.

"Do be careful," said Lady Love, one morning, as her bunny boy buttoned up his little fur overcoat and hung his knapsack over his shoulder, "Do be careful not to linger on your way to the Post Office."

"I won't linger, I won't stray
From the little path away."

He answered, hopping out on the Sunny Meadow, which was covered with snow, for Mr. North Wind, the night before, had brought down from the Cold Country a snowstorm, and away went Little Jack Rabbit, hipperty hop, clipperty clip.

Pretty soon, not so very far, he came to the Shady Forest, and following the trail that wound in and out among the trees, around the rocks and the bushes, he came at last to the pond in which Busy Beaver lived. Of course the water was frosen tight, but deep down below the icy covering the little rabbit knew that his furry friend was safe in his little house, the top of which could be seen, just above the ice.

Then, away hopped the bunny boy, stopping for only a moment under the Tall Pine Tree, at the top of which Professor Jim Crow had built his nest. But the old black bird was nowhere to be seen.

"Maybe he has flown away to find a warmer place, said the bunny rabbit to himself, and again he hopped along right into the next story.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR

New York, Feb. 7—Reactionary price tendencies prevailed in today's irregular stock market which was called upon to absorb another large volume of realizing addition to the rather extensive offerings of bear operators.

Late selling was inspired by the announcement that President Coolidge had ordered an investigation of gasoline prices, and a heavy calling of loans by but of town banks, apparently in preparation for the repayment of treasury funds to the federal reserve bank.

States shares developed temporary strength in reflection of reports that January pig iron production had shown the first monthly increase since last June, and that mill operations were expanding, but the gains were reduced or cancelled before the close. U. S. Steel common touched 109 or within 5-8 of the high established in March of last year, but it sagged later to 107 7-8, off 3-8 on the day. Gulf States Steel crossed 89 and then slumped to 87 5-8, where it was up an 8-8; Bethlehem dropped from 62 to 60 7-8 and Crucible, from 70 3-4 to 70, off 3-8 and one, point respectively.

Selling of the oil shares was also influenced by the weekly report of the American Petroleum institute showing increases in both crude oil production and imports. Pacific Oil dropped 2 1-8 to 55, Standard Oil of California dropped 2 and losses of a point or more were recorded by Cosden, Huston, the Mexican Seaboard issues, Phillips, Producers and Refiners, Royal Dutch and Atlantic refining.

Temporary strength was shown by the motors and motor accessories on publication of a report that January production totalled 341,000 cars, an increase of forty per cent over January of last year, Studebaker closed 1-8 higher at 106 after having sold a point above that figure.

A run-in of the shorts in Davison Chemical sent that stock up to 55 3-8 a net gain of 4 5-8 on the day, and nearly 10 points above the recent low. Baldwin was lifted to a new top at 131 and then hammered down to 128 1-4, off about 2 points on the day. Brooklyn Edison broke 3 points to 112 1-2 on the announcement of an additional issue of common stock. National Enameling broke 3 points to forty on unconfirmed reports that the dividend was in danger, but it rallied later to 41. American Can was attacked by short interests but it offered good resistance to pressure and closed less than a point lower at 118 1-8.

Good recovery from recent heaviness was registered by the American Tobacco, and Commercial Solvents issues, Fisher Body, Nash Motors, and Lorillard. Tobacco, the last named climbing more than four points.

Call money opened at 4 1-4 and advanced, successfully to 4 1-2, and 5 and 5 1-2, where it closed. The time money market was dull with the rates 4 1-2 to 4 3-4, depending upon maturity. The bulk of prime commercial paper continued to move at 4 3-4.

Foreign exchanges rallied at the opening, following London's lead, but reacted in the later trading. Demand sterling fell from $4.33 to $4.31 7-8, where it was up about 1-2 cent. Other rates showed only nominal net changes, French francs selling around 4.63 cents.

BOND MARKET

New York, Feb. 7—Marked irregularity developed in today's bond market as the prospective flood of new financing, involving a possible total of $150,000,000 for the Japanese loan, and temporary stiffness of call money rates exercised a restraining effect on prices.

Going counter to the general trend, however, Mexican government bonds continued to rally, the 4s recording a 2 point gain. Reports that the government was making initial payments of 1924 bond interest, combined with the favorable turn in the domestic situation, aided the advance. Rumors also persisted that negotiations for a large loan to Mexico suspended upon the outbreak of the revolution, had been resumed.

High grade railroad bonds encountered selling today for the first time in recent sessions, and a number of leading issues, including Atchison General 4s, Canadian Pacific 4s, New York Central 6s and Northern Pacific 6s, yielded fractionally. Although prospective reorganization of Chicago & Alton railroad was said to be beneficial to bondholders, obligations of the road lost ground. Profit taking sent other low-prices rail issues lower, along with a number of sugar and copper issues which had made recent gains.

One of the earliest pieces of industrial financing, it was reported, would consist of $17,500,000 pure oil notes. Estimates of the size of the Japanese loan were revised upward to $270,000,000 on reports that Japan would take care of all her financial requirements in one operation. The issue of $150,000,000 which may be offered here is expected to yield as high as 6 or 7 per cent.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Feb. 7—All deliveries of corn today reached the top most prices yet this season, but profit-taking sales led afterward to something of a setback. The market closed unsettled, 1-8c to 1-4 a 3-8c net lower, May 81 1-2 a 5-8 to 81 5-8. Wheat, which even more than corn wa saffected by selling to realize profits, finished heavy 1-2 to 1c down, May 1.11 1-2 to 1.11 5-8 and July 1.11 1-8 to 1.11 1-4. Oats closed 1-8c to 1-8 a 1-4c off and provisions varying from 10c decline to 10c advance.

On the new upward sweep of the corn market, the May delivery rose to 82 1-4c, with July and September each at only 1-4c below that pinnacle. Throughout the remainder of the day, however, despite constant fresh buying, the volume of sales proved sufficient to hold values down to a little under yesterday's finish. There were some later reports that hauling of corn was being resumed in Iowa with considerable freedom on the other hand, advices from different sections points to unfavorable conditions for the crop movement, with cash demand here continuing on a basis of 1-4 to 1-3c premium for spot delivery as compared with future months.

Announcement that receipts of corn here today totaled a trifle above 400 carloads had some effect toward making holders inclined to take profits although country offerings to arrive were light, and were reported as firmly held. Oats followed corn, July oats touching a new top price for the season.

Wheat closed at the day lowest level, much of the wheat selling was ascribed to the circumstance that numerous traders were looking for some reaction from the recent continued advance here.

Provisions were governed a good deal by the action of corn.

CURB MARKET

New York, Feb. 7—Announcement of a federal investigation of gasoline prices brought about heavy selling of the oil shares in today's curb market, which turned re-actionary after an early period of moderate strength.

Prairie Oil & Gas broke from 257 1-2 to 252 1-2, off 4 on the day, and net losses of 1 to 3 points were registered by Standard Oils of Indiana, Kentucky, Nebraska and Ohio, Prairie Oil, Ohio Oil, Mountain Producers, Gulf of Pennsylvania, Humble, Imperial of Canada and several others.

Ford Motors of Canada broke 13 points to 465 on odd lot sales totalling less than 100 shares. Other motors also were heavy, Durant selling 1 1-4 below the previous sale. Ward baking issues showed independent strength, the 7 per cent. preferred advancing about a point to 84 7-8. Dubilier Radio touched a new top at 19 3-4 and then fell back to 19 1-4, unchanged on the day.

MONEY

New York, Feb. 7—Call money stronger; high 5 1-2; low 4 1-4; ruling rate 4 1-4; closing bid 5 1-2; offered at 5 3-4; last loan 5 1-2; call loans against acceptances 4; time loans steady, mixed collateral, 60-90 days 4 3-4; 4-6 months 4 3-4; prime commercial paper 4 3-4.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

HOW FARM ACCOUNTS HELP THE FARMER

For over 16 years experts of the Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs have been developing a simple yet complete system of farm accounts that would answer for any and all types of farming. The so-called Connecticut Farm Accounts book is the result, a combination day-book and accounting system in one, which is being distributed by the extension service of the state college and the farm bureaus in various counties.

All who have given this book a trial during the past few years agree that its use makes easy the supply of information regarding how much is made or lost on farm operations each year and how much the gain or loss amounts to for each crop or class of livestock so that an increase in profits may be obtained through an intelligent reorganization of the farm enterprise.

To those who have never kept accurate accounts the farm management experts advise (1) Keep accounts, (2) study the lessons your accounts teach and (3) make the changes necessary. As an illustration of the success of this method the following example is cited. A farmer running what was strictly a wholesale milk business was told that usually a farm producing milk alone does not pay and was advised to diversify his products. Farm accounts, the first year, had showed that for his own time and labor in maintaining his dairy that he had made only $1,400 on his farm enterprise. The bookkeeping showed up his weak point and he began to grow cash crops with the result that at the end of three years his income had jumped to $3,900. That might be considered a fairly satisfactory income for a man who had to support a household establishment and raise a family of five but this man is still keeping accounts in order to obtain returns that compensate for his 14 hours per day.

Are your farm profits leaking away? If so, why not patch up the holes? The New London county farm bureau, with headquarters in Norwich, is the local representative of the extension service of the Connecticut Agricultural college and the United States Department of Agriculture and is in a position to see that you get the benefits of the advice of experts who can help you out of your farm or home difficulties.

WHAT SPRAY RING IS DOING ABOUT NORWICH

The Norwich spray ring was organized early in 1923 and has, therefore, been in operation for two seasons. They have been successful years as is attested by the various members of the ring. The president, H. J. Larkham of Norwichtown reports an increased income of $400 per year from the 43 apple trees on his farm since joining the spray ring.

The Norwich spray ring consists of 23 men owning farm orchards which vary in size from one to 125 trees. The total number of trees sprayed this year was about 800 or an average of 35 trees per member.

The manager, who is hired by the board of directors, is paid at the rate of $2.25 per hour for himself, assistant and team. Each member pays for the actual cost of the labor and materials used in spraying his orchard plus 10 percent to cover time lost en route between orchards, skrinkage of spray materials, depreciation of sprayer, etc. The orchards are scattered about the town so that the sprayer has to cover 28 miles in making his rounds.

The membership fees were used to purchase an up-to-date power sprayer, having a four-horse power engine, 200 gallon tank and capable of delivering nine gallons of spray material per minute at a pressure of 250 pounds. A spray gun is used.

In order to better illustrate how the spray ring actually works the following figures are given for the farm of the president, H. J. Larkham. Mr. Larkham's farm consists of about 60 acres, of which 30 are tilled, 28 in woodlot and 12 in pasture. The chief sources of income are from poultry and dairying. The gross income from the farm during the past season has been about $2,350 from poultry, $1,800 from dairying, $635 from fruit and $150 from swine.

The fruit trees on Mr. Larkham's place are 43 in number and their age is approximately 60 years. Before becoming a member of the spray ring Mr. Larkham reports that his trees received little care and that his sales from fruit averaged about $100 per year, but that since becoming a member of the spray ring his sales have increased to about $500 per year. His record of the orchard for the past season shows that this is the case. His crop was approximately 800 bushels from the 43 trees.

Because of his connection with the spray ring, Mr. Larkham was able to plant corn and potatoes or to do his haying and have his trees sprayed at the same time. Seven sprays were thoroughly applied at the proper time by the manager of the spray ring. The total cost to Mr. Larkham was $92.06, an average of $13.15 per application. Mr. Larkham is quite enthusiastic over the results obtained by the spray ring and he states that this is also true of the other members.

There are three other spray rings in Connecticut that have been organized during the past two years and in which the results have been almost equally satisfactory. These are the Morris spray ring, the Lebanon spray ring and the Griswold spray ring, each named after the town in which it is located.

MANURE SHOULD BE USED FOR SHRUB BEDS

It is natural that the home owner who has spent considerable money for shrubs to decorate his property should be interested in caring for them so as to secure their best growth and floral display. This is the time of year when much can be done to help the appearance of the shrubs next summer. First, if they have received no additional plant food since being set out, it would help improve the color of the foliage and general appearance next summer if there could be spread a light dressing of manure about them at this time. After the frost has gone out of the ground it will be better to spade this manure in lightly, but even if it is simply left on top of the ground to leach into the soil by rains, it will serve a useful purpose and help the vigor considerably.

Pruning of shrubs should be given attention at this time of the year. Some shrubs as, for instance, Japanese barberry, which has a close branching habit, need little or no pruning. One of the most common shrubs used for hedges is the privet, of which there are several species. All of these have a decided tendency to grow a few long branches, but these can be made to divide and to subdivide, and so produce really thick hedges by frequent pruning. Where privet is grown as a hedge plant, the pruning at this time should remove one half to two thirds of last season's growth. Another pruning on these plants may well be given in midsummer. Heavy pruning in this way not only causes the plants to grow thick and bushy, but has the effect of keeping them small in stature for many years.

POULTRY NEED GRIT

Substances that have no food value, that is, containing practically no protein, carbohydrates or fat, are essential to the health of poultry many times as are the rich feeds.

One of these substances is grit, which takes the place of teeth in preparing the feed for further digestion. When grit is absent the food will pass through the fowl's system without being properly digested and thus all the possible good will not be taken out of the food by the bird.

Lime is another substance which is essential. Birds need this to form the shells of the eggs. Oyster shells are very good for this purpose and is also a cheap source to supply the lime.

To absorb the gasses and impurities that are often found in the bird's system, charcoal should be used.

In fact, these three substances should be kept available all the time before the birds to keep them in good condition.

SPRING SEEDING OF CLOVER AND ALFALTA

Regarding spring seeding of clover and alfalfa, a statement issued Wednesday from the office of the New London County Farm Bureau in this city says:

A small plant must have a constant supply of moisture. This fact gives us the secret of finding the time for sowing clover. Early spring is better than late spring, for in early spring the sun is not so hot or the days so long. Even freezing and thawing do not injure clover seeds and if the ground is prepared, seeding may well be done in March while there is still frost in the ground. The crumbling of the surface soil when the frost comes out will cover many of the seeds. This method of sowing is very commonly used where winter grains are grown.

Oats may be seeded as early in the spring as the soil can be cultivated. Fall and winter plowing materially aid in getting the fields prepared for early planting. Oats as well as the clover do better when sown early. Moisture is abundant in the early spring and crops sown early get a start before the weeds.

Early sowing of oats permits early harvesting and then the clover plants get a better growth for winter covering, or on fertile soil produce a crop of hay in the latter summer. A thin seeding of oats—four to six pecks per acre—will not reduce that crop and the clover will do much better.

The oat crop at best, under our conditions, is not very valuable. Many farmers wish to seed without using oats. If the soil is reasonably free from weeds which make an early spring growth, clover and grasses may well be sown alone early in the spring. This is not a common practice and will not likely increase much because at best there is only a small crop of hay returned for the year's use of the land and if the clover fails, there is no return. Annual white sweet clover (Hubam) has done well at the Storrs Experiment Station in limited trials. If this crop continues to do as well as it has in trials so far, it may well replace the oats as it produces a much better quality hay and is a legume. This crop is worth trying on a small scale. Your county agent will gladly give suggestions for its culture. Another method of seeding clover which is growing in popularity is that of sowing in the corn field before the last cultivation.

Alfalfa may well be sown early in the spring. Thorough preparation of the seed bed and freedom from weeds are important essentials. Very light seedings of oats, a half bushel per acre, are being used successfully by some farmers in this state. The thin stand of oats shades the small alfalfa plants but does not use all the moisture or exclude all the light. If weeds or oats grow too rank and fast they should be cut at once. Injury to the alfalfa will be reduced by setting the mower to cut as high as possible. Alfalfa may well be seeded along in the early spring providing the weeds can be kept from overshading the plants.

There are many prejudices about the seeding of clover, alfalfa and grasses. Spring sowing may be very successful for a number of years and then a failure occurs. One failure does not necessarily condemn the method. Some failures are unavoidable because of changing seasons. However, early seeding is certainly to be recommended. Likewise light seeding of nurse crop, keeping the soil free from weeds and thorough preparation of the seed bed. These factors can be controlled and they usually determine the success or failure of the seeding.

PLAINFIELD

Mrs. Winfred Gardner has received a letter from her brother, John L. Rathburn, living in Pantin, (Seine), France. He refers to the two recent disasters in France, the destruction of the dirigibe, the Dixmude, and the flooded districts of the Seine river, sending interesting pictures of both. Pictures were sent of the entire crew of the Dixmude, of the funeral ceremonies of the commander, showing his father, and other pictures were of the flooded regions. These views were cut from leading papers in France.

In several homes of Plainfield people having radio outfits, followed Wednesday afternoon, the impressive funeral service conducted in the chapel at Washington for Woodrow Wilson. Very distinct were the words of the service read in honor of the great man and the hymns were easily followed. Groups of listeners were gathered in the homes of Thomas Cooper, Charles E. Hopkins, Elmer E. Greene and Edward F. King.

The Buddies went to Centerville intending to win a game of basketball. They played a good game, but lost, 24 to 22. The boys had a good time and made the men on the home ground work hard for their victory.

At the Community House the February meeting of the association was held Wednesday evening, Louis Lamother presiding. Following the meeting, the executive board met to plan the details of the work and coming events.

Miss Arline Burdick of Norwich has been a guest of Miss Louise Jerome this week.

There was a good attendance at the cottage service held Wednesday evening at the home of Walter Kingsley. A solo sung by George Inglis was well received. The pianist of the evening was Earl E. Butler.

Mrs. Lillian Roode is in North Adams where she has two daughters living. Mrs. Roode is keeping house for one daughter who is in the hospital with a little infant daughter and whose husband is also in the hospital having met with a very bad accident nearly losing his arm.

NORWICH AUTOMOBILE SHOW PRONOUNCED BEST EVER

The automobile show which opened Wednesday at the armory drew several hundred visitors Thursday afternoon and evening. The show is the best ever held by the local auto dealers and many are the favorable comments heard on the handsome decorations and the attractive arrangements of the forty machines on exhibition. The machines shown range in price from $800 to the $4,000 class. Closed models predominate although there are a number of open cars shown. The closed models are attracting universal attention. Practically all the dealers and their assistants put in a busy afternoon and evening demonstrating the merits of the various makes of cars to interested crowds of automobile enthusiasts.

During the evening Herb Smith's orchestra gave another of their excellent concert programmes and as an added entertainment feature there were vocal selections by Warren Kane of this city.

One exhibit which was inadvertently omitted from the list of exhibitors published Thursday morning is that of the Lane Supply Co., Clinton Lane, proprietor. Mr. Lane is showing batteries and piston rings. The auto show will continue today and Saturday, the doors opening each afternoon at 2 o'clock and the show will continue until 10.30 o'clock each evening.

COMMISSIONER DONOHUE MAKES TWO FINDINGS IN COMPENSATION CLAIMS

Upon the application of Mrs. Catherine Hogan of 326 Prospect street and Francis Dayall, a minor aged 12 years, to have paid to them from the Eastern Connecticut Power Co., the balance of the workmen's compensation for the death of John H. Humphrey, son in law of Mrs. Hogan, Commissioner J. J. Donohue has found that both claimants are members of the family of the late John H. Humphrey, under definitions and rulings on this point, and he directs that the money be paid them. He also directs that a conservator be named to handle the money on account of the age and physical condition of Mrs. Hogan and the fact that Francis Dayall is a minor, and the commissioner appoints Harold Humphrey as such conservator. Under a previous ruling Commissioner Donohue had ruled that the Power Co should pay compensation to John H. Humphreys widow at $18 per week for 312 weeks because of Mr. Humphrey's death from an electric shock on Sept. 14, 1923, while he was at work as a foreman for the Power Co. Mrs. Humphrey died after payment for 19 weeks had been made to her and the balance of 293 weeks is to be paid to her mother, Mrs. Hogan, who was a dependent upon her and to Francis Dayall, a member of the family.

After a hearing upon the workmen's compensation claim of Moxie Hahn, 21 Garfield avenue, New London, an employ of the Mohican Co. in that city, where he was employed in a grocery store of the company and had as part of his duties the lifting of heavy barrels and other articles, Commissioner Donohue has disallowed and dismissed the claim Mr. Hahn claimed he had suffered a rupture in the course of his employment. The claim was disallowed on the ground that the claimant was unable to fix a definite date when his injury occurred to connect his condition in any positive way with his employment. It therefore cannot be found that he has suffered an injury arising out of and in the course of his employment.

SHOWERS GIVEN FOR MISS LAURA CHURCH

Members of the Loyalty class of the Trinity M. E. Sunday school were entertained by Mrs. William Crowe at her home on Boswell avenue Wednesday evening. After the regular business meeting an election of officers for the new year the meeting took the form of a miscellaneous shower for Miss Laura Church whose marriage to J. D. Lucy is to take place in New York later this month.

Miss Lena Haglund was also presented a picture from the class as a token of appreciation for her faithful services as secretary and treasurer of the class for the past four years.

A miscellaneous shower for Miss Church was given at the home of Mrs. John Young of River avenue Tuesday evening, and recently one was given at the home of Miss Nellie Rathbun by several friends employed by the Reid & Hughes company where Miss Church has served for several years as head trimmer of the millinery department.

Miss Amy Hatten of Waltham, Mass., has returned to her home after being here to attend the showers.

Roads Too Icy for Automobile

Dr. Howard A. Lanphere of the state board of health who was to have spoken here Wednesday before the noon luncheon of the Rotary club left Hartford by automobile in the morning with chains on all four wheels but couldn't make the first hill he came to on account of the icy condition of the roads. He had to give up trying to reach the Rotary meeting but reached here in time by train through Willimantic to address the teachers' meeting in the town hall in the afternoon.

Have You Piles?

Then You Have Something to Learn.

Thousands who have piles have not do the same for you.

learned that quick and permanent relief can only be accomplished with internal medicine. Neither cutting nor any amount of treatment with ointments and suppositories will remove the cause.

Bad circulation causes piles. There is a complete stagnation of blood in the lower bowel and a weakening of the parts. Dr. J. S. Leonhardt was first to find the remedy. His prescription is HEM-ROID, a tablet medicine, taken internally, that is now sold by druggists generally. Dr. Leonhardt tried it in 1,000 cases with the marvelous record of success in 98 per cent., and then decided it should be sold under a rigid money-back guarantee.

SETTLED $10,000 SUIT FOR AUTO ACCIDENT

The case of Morris Markoff of Norwich against Mr. and Mrs. J. P. T. Armstrong of New London, for $10,000 damages for personal injuries resulting from an automobile accident has been settled out of court. The case was assigned for trial before Judge Christopher L. Avery and a jury in the superior court in New London on Thursday.

The plaintiff claimed that while he was crossing Main street, at a point near Richards street, an automobile driven by Mrs. Armstrong struck him and he received severe bruises and lacerations of the head and face, contusions of the body and internal injuries.

J. J. Desmond of Norwich was the lawyer for the plaintiff and Geary, Davis and Keefe represented the defendants.

MASSASOIT MFG. CO. MILLS ON FULL TIME

The annual report of the Massasoit Manufacturing company of New Bedford for the year ended Dec. 1, 1923, shows the corporation to have a surplus of $124,265. During the past year the corporation has transferred its machinery from the Eddy mill to its Falls plant in New Bedford, selling the Eddy mill plant to the Elgin Silk company. The manufacture of mops and yarns is now concentrated at the Falls mill. The company has three mills in New Bedford and also operates a plant in Montville, Conn., for the bleaching and preparation of cotton for chemical purposes. All four plants are maintaining a full-time schedule.

EATON GIVES INSTRUCTIONS ON AMUSEMENT TAX

Because of the apparent misunderstanding which exists in this district with regard to the collection of war tax on admissions to entertainments by schools and other organizations, Collector of Internal Revenue Robert O. Eaton has issued a statement setting forth the numerous ways in which the law is violated, many times unintentionally, by schools, lodges, clubs and individuals producing entertainments.

The fact is emphasized that no school or other organization is excused from the collection of war tax on admission to any entertainment, regardless of the character of the beneficiary, unless sworn affidavit is filed with the internal revenue office and signed by a duly authorized agent or officer of the organization. Such affidavit must be made on a special form and sworn to before a competent officer. Furthermore, the mere filing of the affidavit is not enough, Collector Eaton declared, and permission for the printing of tickets for tax free entertainments is not granted until a certificate of exemption of the federal tax is issued by the collector.

Any school, organization or individual who fails to file the affidavit and receive the certificate of exemption becomes liable to the fines and penalties imposed by law for the failure to collect the tax. Principals of the schools and heads of organizations of the law in order to escape the imposition of penalties to or organizations must not assume that exemptions will be granted. Many societies are led to believe that it is not necessary to collect a tax on the admissions since the proceeds go to charity. Such societies are liable to the penalty of $1,000 each time a tax on admissions is not collected. Many organizations print tickets showing the price of admission either with no mention of tax or with the words "including tax." Either method is illegal, and will subject such societies to a penalty of $1,000 for failure to collect tax, or a penalty of $100 for each ticket sold which does not comply with the law, Collector Eaton stated.

ANDERSON SENTENCED ONE TO TWO YEARS IN STATE PRISON

Superintendant of New York Anti-Saloon League Betrayed No Emotion as Sentence was Pronounced for Third Degree Forgery—Counsel for Anderson Made an Impassioned Plea For Clemency—Did Not File Motion For Appeal—Judge Tompkins Declared That the Crime Was Deliberate and That the Convicted Man Had Committed Perjury—A Story of Execution of the Sentence Was Denied—Convicted Man Was Served With Papers in a $105,000 Libel Suit as He Left the Court.

New York, Feb. 8.—William H. Anderson must go to Sing Sing prison for one to two years for third degree forgery for falsifying the books of the Anti-Saloon League of which he is superintendent unless his conviction by a jury on January 29 is reversed on appeal.

In imposing sentence today Supreme Court Justice Tompkins said "this crime was deliberately committed" and aggravated "by some of his testimony which was obviously untrue."

The sentence followed an impassioned plea for clemency by Former Governor Charles S. Whitman, Anderson's chief counsel, and an appeal by Ferdinand Pecora, assistant district attorney, that the punishment "be such as to satisfy the public that justice has been done and that the law is no respector of persons."

Anderson was freed in $5,000 bail on a stay of execution to permit Mr. Whitman to seek a certificate of reasonable doubt which the trial court refused to grant. Arguments for a certificate will be heard by the court on February 15.

As he left the court room Anderson was served with papers in a $105,000 libel suit brought against the league of which he still is superintendent, by Francis Cortwright, of Corning, N. Y., who has alleged the league libelled him in literature distributed throughout the district in which he was a candidate for the state assembly in 1922.

Justice Tompkins recalled that Anderson was found guilty of forgery in the third degree on an indictment alleging he had falsified the books of the league by transferring the sum of $4,000 from the salary account of O. Bertsall Phillips, a fund collector, to Phillips' expense account. At the outset the court remarked that a suspended sentence was customary where a defendant had confessed and was sorry, and when boys committed crimes.

"But this is not such a case," declared the court, "this crime was deliberately committed. After the defendant's attention had been called to the fact that Phillips' salary account had been improperly charged some days elapsed before the alteration was made. He has not confessed and he did not plead guilty. He stood trial and was convicted. His case is further aggravated by some of his testimony which was obviously untrue.

"Some of his testimony could not have been true if the statements in his affidavit to the league were true. I refer to his stating that he raised the money (loaned to the league) by mortgaging his home in Baltimore. This is not a proper case for a fine because the law does not permit it. It is not a proper case for the reformatory because of the age of the defendant. It is not a case for the penitentiary because he might be detained there three years. The sentence is that you be confined in the state prison for not less than one year and not more than two."

Mr. Whitman first moved that the verdict be set aside and a new trial ordered, asserting the facts failed to establish Anderson's guilt.

Justice Tompkins replied that the facts virtually had been undisputed and that the question of intent was decided by the jury which he believed was amply supported in its verdict by the facts. The court said Anderson received a fair trial, was ably defended and had been given the benefit of every reasonable doubt.

Before arguments the court clerk took Mr. Anderson's pedigree. The defendant said he was 49, born in Illinois, resided in Yonkers, N. Y., was a lawyer, married, a Protestant, and never was convicted before, and that both his parents were living.

When Mr. Anderson said his occupation was that of a lawyer Mr. Whitman leaned over to the clerk's table and said "Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League." This was entered on the record.

Mr. Whitman said he based his petition on Anderson's past good reputation, "unblemished for forty years" and pointed out that Anderson "is head of a movement believed in by millions of our citizens."

"I also call the attention of the court to the fact that nothing has been established here to show he did anything that was of any harm to any cause or to any person," continued Mr. Whitman. "There was no injury to anyone. No loss, no fraud was committed through which anyone suffered, and I venture to go further and say that nothing was established by which anyone can suffer or be wronged."

Mr. Pecora said Anderson had been tried by a jury of his own choosing, that the court had been scrupulous in safeguarding the defendant's rights and that Anderson's position as head of the prohibition movement had nothing to do with his position before the court.

"I think the verdict must be accepted by this court as amply justified by the evidence," added the prosecutor. "I think it is also a fair inference from the evidence that this defendant committed grand larceny in the first degree by taking unlawfully $24,700 from the league. It must also be evident that perjury was committed by this defendant on his trial.

"I think the defendant should be treated just as every defendant in every other case where a crime has been committed. If the routine has been departed from thus far, it has been in favor of the defendant."

The argument for a certificate of reasonable doubt will be heard by Supreme Court Justice Wagner. If the motion is denied Anderson must go at once to Sing Sing prison and begin serving sentence. An appeal will not save him from a cell.

Nine months and twenty days is the minimum time behind prison walls that confronts Anderson, with full commutation for good behavior deducted. Under the sentence he also is a felon and his citizenship is forfeited. The four other indictments, for grand larceny and extortion, will be held in abeyance over him.

ANDERSON HAS RESIGNED AS SUPT. OF THE LEAGUE

New York, Feb. 8.—William H. Anderson, who was sentenced today to Sing Sing prison for forging the books of the Anti-Saloon league, has resigned as the state superintendent of that organization, it was reported reliably tonight.

Mr. Anderson could not be reached for comment. Former Governor Charles S. Whitman, his chief defense counsel, said he did not known whether Mr. Anderson had resigned.

Responsible officials of the league could not be reached for comment.

WOUNDED MAN CONFESSED HE WAS BENT ON BURGLARY

Newton, Mass., Feb. 8—Some of the matters which had puzzled the police with regard to the wounding of Lewis F. Curtis, wealthy sportsman, and an intruder in his home yesterday morning, were cleared up late today when the intruder made what is believed to be a death bed statement.

Gerald R. Craig, formerly of Charlottetown, P. E. I., who also had been known as Carl R. Craig and Roy G. Vance, confessed to the Boston police at a hospital in the Brighton district that he had intended to rob the Curtis home and that he had participated in a number of recent burglaries in this vicinity. He said that he was making the confession in order to clear his brother Lewis Craig, who had been arrested on suspicion of complicity in various burglaries.

Lewis Craig, who was taken to the hospital to see his brother, told the police that Gerald had been employed with him in a Boston restaurant but about a month ago gave up this work, saying that he was going into the bootlegging business under the protection of a former police officer. Gerald, in his confession said that he had used the bootlegging story as a cloak for his burglaries.

He said he entered the Curtis home through an unfastened window and lay down on a couch in the sun parlor because he was tired and wanted to rest before plunging the house. He did not awake, he added, until the next morning when Curtis shook him by the shoulder. He got up and tried to drop his hat in such a manner as to cover his revolver and flashlight that were beside him. He asserted that Curtis fired at him as soon as he got to his feet and that he then reached for his own weapon and shot Curtis.

The police seized a large number of articles found in the room occupied by the brothers in a lodging house in Boston and later said that many of them had been identified as stolen property.

Craig was in a critical condition late today and at the hospital it was said his recovery was no texpected. Curtis remained in a serious condition at the Newton hospital, where through his attorney he issued a statement saying that he had to shoot Craig to save his wife and family, and that he did not intend to inflict a mortal wound.

TRIAL OF DIAMOND FOR FIRST DEGREE MURDER

New York, Feb. 8.—In Philadelphia several days after the murder November 14 of two Brooklyn bank messengers who were robbed of $43,607, Morris Barlow Diamond, one of four men charged with having planned and executed the crime, admitted he had driven the slayers' car and deplored the fact that the messengers had been slain instead of blackjacked, William Fried testified today at Diamond's trial for first degree murder.

Fried, an employe of the Diamond Box company run by Morris, asserted he went to Philadelphia in answer to a telephone summons, from his employer.

There, he declared, Morris made the admission that he had driven the motor car and asked whether "they were still watching my house?"

When the brothers returned to New York, the prosecution witness asserted, he accompanied Morris to a bank where he was shown a "large bundle of money" in a safety deposit box and was told it was Morris' "share."

Nicholas G. Luciani, a friend of the Diamond brothers, declared the evening of the shooting he met the Diamonds and was asked by Morris Diamond "Did you read the papers? We had to kill them. We got $13 500 apiece."

The witness also quoted Diamond as having said "there are finger marks on the plates of the Cadillac we abandoned I am afraid."

28 INDICTMENTS FOR MAIL ORDER LIQUOR VIOLATIONS

Philadelphia, Feb. 8—Twenty-six indictments naming twenty-seven men, twenty two of them purchasers of liquor, were returned late today by the federal grand jury investigating mail order liquor violations, Isaac Bullifant, alleged head of the mail order scheme, was named in every indictment. The men indicted are from four states.

Joseph De Briecht, New York, alleged salesman in the scheme, and Charles DeWitt, Baltimore, were named in four general indictments charging conspiracy to illegally transport liquor.

Vote Protects Tax Exempt Securities

House Kills Proposed Constitutional Amendment by Vote of 247 to 133.

Washington, Feb. 8.—The house today defeated a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment to prohibit issuance of tax exempt securities.

The vote, which came after two days of debate, was 247 to 133 or 70 less than the required two-thirds.

Republicans with 17 exceptions, voted for the resolution as did 69 democrats. Before the final vote the house rejected, 208 to 167, a motion by Representative Steagall, democrat, Alabama, to recommit the measure for an amendment which would have deprived state of the right to tax bonds issued by the federal farm loan board.

The only amendment adopted was one by Representative Moore, democrat, Virginia to require ratification by states within seven years.

Although the amendment was asked by President Coolidge and Secretary Mellon, it was not taken into consideration in the tax revision program recommended by the treasury and its defeat will have no effect on the tax bill already reported by the ways and means committee. Mr. Mellon had estimated there was approximately $11,000,000 outstanding in tax-exempt securities.

The measure was attacked in debate by many republican leaders and supported by some democrats. Representative Bacharach, of New Jersey, a member of the ways and means committee, and Representatives Begg, of Ohio, and Graham of Pennsylvania, were among the republicans who spoke against the amendment. Representative Crisp, of Georgia, led the democratic support for the resolution.

Representative Longworth, of Ohio, republican floor leader, charged in the debate, however, that opposition to the amendment was political, pointing out it had passed the house last years by a substantial majority.

"Next week you democrats will be voting for a prohibitive surtax rate," Mr. Longworth declared, "but today you will vote to maintain a situation which offers escape to those who would have to pay those high rates."

ARRESTED IN NEWARK FOR MURDER IN BOSTON

Newark, N. J., Feb. 8—Tofils Le Tive said to be wanted in Boston for the murder on Christmas day of his cousin, Mrs. Recheda Yazbek, was arrested today. Le Tive wore an army uniform and the police said he had enlisted in January under the name of Joseph Mitchell and was attached to Fort Slocum, N. Y.

Mrs. Yezbek, it was understood, was the niece of a Syrian bishop located near Boston. She was 29 years old and Le Tive 32. According to the officers the man admitted that he had lived at the home of his cousin and left there at 7.30 a. m. Christmas. He had a revolver when arrested.

Mrs. Recheda Yazbek, in connection with whose death Tofils Le Tive was arreste dtoday at Newark, N. J., was found stabbed to death Christmas night at the home of her brother, Masood George, with whom she made her home. George found his sister's body when he returned from paying Christmas calls. A carving knife was the weapon used.

Mrs. Yazbek was separated from her husband and had resumed her maiden name of George. Police announced that they were searching for an unwelcome suitor who had been driven from the George home several times.

French Cabinet on Verge of Resigning

Following Debate in Chamber of Deputies on Economics and New Taxes

Paris, Feb. 8—(By the A. P.)—The partisan tendency of the debate in the chamber of deputies on economics and new taxes developed a crisis this afternoon in the course of which it was thought for a few minutes that Poincare would resign. Indeed, the premier and the entire cabinet withdrew from the chamber for a short time.

The discussion reached a very high tension soon after the opening of the afternoon session, when M. Klotz, a former minister of finance, endeavored to draw the premier out as to what economies he intended to make, striving especially for a declaration as to whether the government planned to slow up on the construction of submarines.

Several moderate and conservative deputies interrupted to say that M. Klotz had never before shown any particular interest in nation defense and that one of the cabinets to which he had belonged failed to supply France with heavy artillery, which he entirely lacked at the beginning of the war. This turned the debate into a duel of recriminations in which both sides endeavored to place on the other the responsibility for France lack of preparedness in 1914.

The premier showed plainly his annoyance at the turn the debate had taken and fidgeted restlessly in his seat until deputy Tapponnier of the bloc national made a personal allusion to the late Camille Pelletan, who was involved in the naval scandal of 1909. Then M. Poincare arose and voiced his indignation at the introduction of personalities into the debate as well as the obstruction tactics of the opposition and appealed to the chamber to return to the subject in order.

M. Tapponnier descended at once from the speaker's stand, the president of the chamber at the same moment suspended the session and the premier, followed by the other ministers, left the chamber.

The entire chamber, confusing the sequence of events, was for a few minutes under the impression that the premier had left in disgust and would resign. However, he and the other ministers returned 20 minutes later and received a long ovation from the majority.

BEQUESTS IN WILL OF MRS. HENRIETTA W. HUBBARD

New Haven, Feb. 8—Dartmouth college is given $10,000 in trust for a memorial to Oliver P. SINCLAIR $1,000,000 OFFER FEATURES OIL LEASE PROBE

Frederick G. Bonfils Testified That Sinclair Had Entered Into A Contract to Pay Him and His Associate $1,000,000 in Settlement of Claims Growing Out of Rights in the Teapot Dome Naval Reserve—New Trend of Testimony Made It Necessary for the Committee to Postpone Hearing of McAdoo Until Monday—Resolution in House Calling for Investigation of Income Returns of Sinclair and Doheny.

Washington, Feb. 8—A new turn was taken today in the senate oil investigation with the testimony of Frederick G. Bonfils publisher of the Denver (Colorado) Post, that Harry F. Sinclair and entered into a contract to pay him and his associates $1,000,000 in settlement of claims growing out of rights asserted in the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve. Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana has told the senate that every vestige of these rights had been denied by the federal government.

According to Mr. Bonfils testimony, the contract was entered into in Kansas City after he had sent a reporter of his paper to the home of Albert B. Fall in New Mexico to investigate rumors regarding the leasing of Teapot Dome to Mr. Sinclair by Mr. Fall as secretary of the interior and after the publication of one article in the Denver Post which attack the lease by "analysist and theory". The contract was signed, he said, after two conferences between Mr. Sinclair and Mr. Bonfils his partner, H. H. Tammens, John Leo Stack, a Denver oil man, and H. H. Schwartz, their attorney.

The opening up of this unexpected line of investigation made it necessary for the committee to defer until next Monday the hearing of William G McAdoo, former secretary of the treasury, which Mr. McAdoo has requested in a letter sent to Chairman Lenroot last night and read into the committee record today. The committee first decided to hear him now but changed its decision when it was found that the examination of Mr. Bonfils could not be completed today.

The field of the oil investigation was further broadened today by the adoption by the senate of a resolution by Senator Lafollette, republican, Wisconsin, directing the oil committee to inquire into and report upon the claims of the Honolulu Consolidated Oil Company to oil lands situated within naval reserve number 2 in California.

Senator Dill, democrat, Washington a member of the oil committee, proposed that the senate go even furthereby inquiring into what part Mr. Fall had in efforts to obtain oil fields in Colombia, Mesopotamia, Palestino Persia and other foreign countries.

President Coolidge signed the Walsh oil lease amusment resolution, but he attached a memorandum in which he took exception to the language in the preamble which declares the lease were made in violation of the law and under circumstances indicating fraud and corruption.

The president also sent to the senate the nominations of Silas H. Strawn and Atlee Pomerens as special government counsel in the oil lease cases. They were referred to the oil committee where a fight on them was forecast.

The reference of the nominations was made at the conclusion of an all-day debate in the senate on the Denby resignation resolution, in which addresses were delivered by Senators Walsh, of Montana, and Heflin of Alabama, democrats, in support of the measure, and by Senator Borah, republican Idaho, in opposition to it.

Another of the many developments of the day was the issuing of subpoenas by the oil committee for a number of witnesses, including John C. Shaffer, of Chicago, publisher of newspapers in a number of cities; Robert McCague, of the Pioneer Oil Company, and Frank Kistler, president of the producers and refiners oil company of New York.

An echo of the oil inquiry was heard in the house where Representatives Jeffers, Alabama, and Browning, Tennessee, democrats, jointly introduced a resolution calling for an investigation of the income tax returns of Harry F. Sinclair, Edward L. Doheny and Edward L. Doheny, Jr., during the period from 1913 through 1923.

Appearing before the oil committee as a voluntary witness, Mr. Bonfils testified that Mr. Stack came to him after the Teapot Dome lease to Mr. Sinclair had been executed and asked assistance in efforts to enforce his rights under a contract he had with the Pioneer, Melge and other companies which had asserted claims in the coming field.

From Mr. Bonfils' testimony and exhibits read into the record, it appeared that Mr. Stack had had an agreement with E. L. Doheny under which the former was to undertake to obtain a lease on Teapot Dome from the government. Mr. Doheny later withdrew and Mr. Bonfils said it looked to him as though Mr. Doheny "had thrown Mr. Stack down," and that there "might have been an agreement between these two oil kings" by which one was to get Teapot Dome and the other the naval oil reserve number one in California.

Mr. Bonfils told the committee his lawyer had reported that the contracts were valid and that later suit against the Mid-West Oil Company, of which the Pioneer Company was a subsidiary, and other companies, had been entered. Meantime, he said, there had been rumors regarding the secrecy with which the Teapot Dome lease had been executed and he had sent D. F. Stackelback, a Post reporter, to Mr. Falls home to investigate.

Mr. Stackelback, he asserted, had brought back "a shocking and astounding statement", and had been directed to return to New Mexico to verify it. After his return, decision was made to publish one story attacking the Sinclair lease. Copies of this were sent to prominent members of congress, he said, and afterwards, Senator Lafollette introduced his resolution for the oil inquiry.

Add to the matter gathered by Mr. Stackelback, the publisher said decision was had after a conference with W. C. Sheppard, managing editor of the Post not to publish them because they were libelous unless they could be proved and that this would be difficult to establish because of the reluctance of the witnesses to be identified or known as having given the information.

Mr. Bonfils told of a visit of A. C. Zevely, personal attorney to Mr. Sinclair, Denver and of an invitation from him to Mr. Bonfils, Mr. Stack, Mr. Tammens and Mr. Schwartz to visit Mr. Sinclair in New York. This was accepted, but the witness said that upon their arrival Mr. Sinclair brusequely told them their suit was against the Mid-West and Allied companies and did not concern him.

Some time later they had a second conference with Mr. Sinclair at Kansas City, Mr. Bonfils continued, and there the contract was signed. Under its terms, Sinclair agreed to pay $250,000 in cash and hand over 320 acres in Teapot Dome which could be repurchased by next March 15 for $750,000.

Out of the proceeds, Mr. Bonfils testified, Stack was to get $50,000 in cash first, and after expenses had been deducted, Stack was to get 46 1-4 per cent. Bonfils, 23 1-4 per cent., Mr. Tammens, 23 1-4 per cent; and Attorney Schwartz the remaining 7 1-2 per cent.

JOHN T. KING LISTENED TO OIL PROBE TESTIMONY

(Special to the Bulletin)

Washington, Feb. 8—John T. King was not called on to testify at the oil hearing today as the time of committee adjournment arrived before the witness summoned earlier had completed his statement King sat on the side line of the committee room throughout the morning session an interested listener to the testimony of other witnesses. The time of taking King's testimony is not yet fixed in he meantime Mr. King said he had no comments to make.

HEFLIN URGES INQUIRY OF $3,000,000 DUMMY NOTE

Washington, Feb. 8—The senate oil committee was urged today by Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, to inquire into the financial transactions of William Boyce Thompson, of New York, who he said, was a Sinclair stockholder and a borrower from the Chase National bank.

"He is a Sinclair stockholder," the Alabama senator asserted, "and during the last presidential campaign he borrowed $3,000,000 on a dummy note from a member of the federal reserve system in New York. We should like to know what he did with the money."

MOTION PICTURE ACTRESS STRANGLED TO DEATH

New York, Feb. 8.—Miss Louise Lawson, former motion picture actress, was found strangled to death in her fashionable studio apartment on West 77th street, facing Central Park today and police have divided thier time in a search for two men who entered her rooms early this morning and in questioning those believed to have known details of the girl's life and her friends along Broadway.

The theory has been advanced by the police that the murderers were bootleggers who had visited the apartment before and had been attracted by jewels Miss Lawson wore. A quantity of liquor was found in the ice box of the apartment. Police have cast aside all motives other than robbery, for a platinum bracelet, said to be worth $8,000, and bther valuable jewels were gone. All jewel boxes were open nad the entire department was in disorder, indicating that the girl had fought hard to save her life and her valuables.

In their probe of Miss Lawson's life, police learned she was the daughter of a prominent merchant of Walnut Springs, Texas, and that she had played small parts in motion pictures, but for two years or more had been unemployed, living in her luxurious apartment which still was filled with the fragrance of fresh cut flowers when her body was found.

They learned she had been a member of the gay party that ended in the death of Angier B. Duke, wealthy tobacco manufacturers, at Greenwich, Conn., last September. Pictures of an army lieutenant and of a middle aged man were on her dressing table. The middle aged man, it was learned, was Gerhard M. Dahl, chairman of the executive board of the Brooklyn-Manhattan Transit company, vice president of the Chase National bank, and a member of the brokerage firm of Hayden Stone and Co. On the back of the photograph was inscribed "Gerry Doll."

Mr. Dahl was communicated with by telephone and he arranged a conference with the police.

TO INQUIRE INTO CAUSES OF HIGHER GASOLINE PRICES

Washington, Feb. 8—Notice of an immediate investigation by the federal trade commission of the causes for increasing gasoline prices in South Dakota was transmitted to President Coolidge today by the commission.

Huston Thompson, chairman of the commission, sent this letter to the president:

"Your letter of February 7th transmitting wire of February sixth from the governor of South Dakota, and asking that the commission make an immediate investigation of the gasoline situation was received this morning and presented to the commission.

"In reply I have been requested to say that the commission will make an immediate investigation of the conditions described by Governor McMaster."

Mr. Coolidge also directed the department of Justice to inuire into the charges of Governor McMaster that interests allied with the Standard Oil company had cornered the oil supply and thereby were increasing prices without justification.

Ezra P. Angell, 62, took his life Thursday night at the Eagleville boarding house, swallowing bi-chloride of mercury with suicidal intent. Angell took the dose about 7 o'clock. Dr. William L. Higgins, of South Coventry, who is also medical examiner, was called and administered antidotes but they failed to save the life of the aged man. Death came about three hours later. Mr. Angell had conducted the boarding house in Eagleville for some three years. For some time past he had not been in good health and he was constantly brooding and morose. It is believed that the suspension of operations at the cotton mill, which caused a number of his roomers and boarders to leave, caused the despondent man to take his life. Members of his family had felt the premonition that sooner or later he might suicide. Mr. Angell was born in Anthony, R. I., May 1, 1861, a son of Albert O. and Sarah Harrington Angell. He is survived by his wife; three sons, Albert Angell of Willimantic, Ezra P. Angell, Jr., of Providence, R. I., and Earl C. Angell of Eagleville; and by five sisters, Mrs. Jane Jordan of Anthony, Mrs. Mary Doughton of Providence, Mrs. Isabelle Wood of Centerville, R. I., and Mrs. Susan Gradnell of Indiana and Mrs. Edna Studley of Providence. He was a member of Anthony Lodge, No. 11, I. O. O. F., and Narragansett Tribe No. 9 of Natick, R. I., Red Men.

Mr. and Mrs. Aime J. Martineau were given a surprise party at their home, 216 Pleasant street, on a recent evening when twenty-four friends gathered there for a house-warming party. Somewhat over 25,000 tons of ice will be stored in the four ice plants of Willimantic, if the figures of the local dealers are correct. This will be the largest supply harvested and stored in the history of this section. Brown Brothers, who occupy the old Bates farm on Ash street, in the town of Mansfield, just over the city line, will harvest 14,000 tons for its ice on the pond remains intact. They already have 9,000 tons put away in the houses, which have a capacity of 12,000 tons. If conditions permit they plan to also stack 2,000 tons.

Contractor L. A. Girouard is pushing the work of filling the three houses at the municipal plant, in Mansfield. Nearly six thousand tons have already been harvested an dif weather conditions hold good the houses will be filled in another week.

Louis W. Ives, who has had the contract to sell the city ice for several years, has started work at his own plant on the Willimantic river and plans to house several thousand tons. The ice on the Willimantic River cove adjacent to the Ayer ice houses, has not yet been cut, but work there will probably start next week. The houses hold from five to six thousand tons and the product is handled by Pierre J. Roy and L. A. Girouard.

One of the most enjoyable dinners of the season was given at St. Joseph's hall Thursday evening by Rev. John E. Clark to the members of the church choir, the ushers and the altar boys. Forty guests sat about the table which was lighted with pink candles, in the color scheme of pink and white which was carried out. The menu included creamed tomato soup with croutons, roast turkey with dressing and giblet gravy, mashed potatoes, mashed turnips, creamed onions, celery, cranberry sauce, rolls, ice cream, wafers and coffee. The affair was in charge of the Catholic Daughters of America, with Mrs. Walter J. Costello, chairman. Face Disfigured With Large Pimples
Cuticura Healed
"My trouble first started with small, hard, red pimples that broke out all over my face. They festered causing me to scratch and irritate the skin, and I lost many a night's sleep on account of the irritation. My face was disfigured and the trouble lasted about ten months. I found an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and purchased some, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." Very Rev. Michael McCabe Council, K. of C., held a largely attended whist and dance Thursday evening in Rieux Hall, thirty two tables being occupied.

Following were the winners: Ladies' first prize, Miss Vivian McLaughlin, second prize, Miss Margaret Driscoll, consolation award, Mrs. Louis Morey. Gentlemen, first prize, Joseph Gilbert, second prize John Eichelberg, consolation, George Lefevre.

After the whist music was furnished by Moreys orchestra and dancing was enjoyed.

The Voluntown rifle team defeated the local team Wednesday night by a narrow margin of 3 points. The scores were: Jewett City, William Marshall 149, Otto Gilbert 168, A. Stebbins 183, Dona Ballou 193, Total 693; Voluntown J. Kaufman 184, G. Sheldon 188, A. Gaudette 164, J. Herbert 169, Total 700.

J. Herbert, the Voluntown premier, made a shot after to make as good a score as could be expected from such a redoubtable marksman. Mr. Herbert blames this to the fact of his never having shot on the local range before which is somewhat different than his home town range. However, Mr. Herbert promises that he will give an exhibition of shooting, fancy and trick in the near future, which will make up for his lack of success in the above match.

Mrs. E. H. Hiscox has been the guest of Mrs. T. B. Keen in Norwich.

WESTMINSTER

The pastor's text last Sunday morning was Grew in Grace.—II Peter, 3:18.

Next Sunday morning will be observed at Lincoln day, at Westminster church, when the news of the death of ex-President Wilson was received Monday morning the school flag and a number of private flags were placed at half-mast.

A teachers' meeting was held at Frost schoolhouse last Thursday afternoon by Acting Supervisor L. T. Garrison, regional director of district schools, all the teachers being in attendance.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Walter Marcotte of Willimantic and infant daughter, Gertrude are spending a fortnight at the home of Salve Olsen, Mrs. Marcotte's father. Mr. Marcotte is gradually recuperating from his serious injury by electric shock, received while at work shortly after the holidays, as a railroad employe.

Clarence L. Bengtson of Silver Lane, Conn., also a son-in-law if Mr. Olsen, was a visitor at Longview on Sunday.

Mrs. Bertha Moses and infant son of New York are at Mrs. Allen Moody's.

A number of the members of Buell union, Canterbury W. C. T. U., attended the funeral of Mrs. Gregory on Monday and of Mrs. Gregory on Thursday. The former was for years a member of Buell union, and had planned a W. C. T. U. chicken dinner at her home, the week of her first shock. The latter had been a helpless invalid for many months, having the tenderest care of her sister and her family, including a niece who is a registered nurse.

William Davies last week received word of the death of his brother Gomer in New York, after a long illness. William and Benjamin Davies and Mrs. William Johnson of this place are brothers and sister. Mrs. Louis Lachapelle is recovering slowly from a severe grip cold.

The rain and ice storm of Tuesday night and Wednesday has made the roads nearly impassable, both for man and beast.

For the first time this winter Westminster Hill received no mail Wednesday, and was also shut off from telephonic and telegraphic communication with the outer world.

The Bible command, "Let him that thinketh he standeth take heed lest he fall," needs to be observed literally, under present conditions.

COLUMBIA

Friends in Columbia of Mrs. Robert D. Barnes of Muncie, Indiana, are pleased to learn that she and Mr. Barnes are taking a rest at Colorado Springs, Col. They have been visiting the falls and canyons in that locality, word having been received from them at Seven Falls, Cheyenne Canyon.

While the ice storm has made very beautiful winter scenery, it has damaged and in some cases ruined many handsome trees and shrubs. Broken branches, large and small, were strewn over the roads, and the limbs of trees were so weighted down with ice that where they were by the roadside, travel was blocked, necessitating their removal, or a detour on the adjoining land. Telephone wires have been broken by the weight of ice upon them, or by falling branches, and in this section, no attempt has yet been made to repair them much to the inconvenience of some persons.

A most efficient adjunct of the state highway department in this section is the snow plow, and when there is ice on the road, the sand car. Promptly Thursday after the ice storm, the plow made its appearance at the center, breaking up and chasing the roads of one wand loose ice. Previously when the roads had a coating of thin slippery ice, the department spread a coating of sand upon them which was much appreciated by the traveling public.

The high school pupils from Columbia remained at home Wednesday the day of the funeral of ex-President Woodrow Wilson, the school being closed as a mark of respect to his memory.

Mrs. Ruth H. Jacobs, who is taking an attendant nurse's course at the Household Nursing association, Boston, Mass., has returned, after ten days' vacation spent with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Isham. Mrs. Jacobs has completed her hospital training, and is now returning to finish her six months' field work.

The meeting of Columbia grange was held Wednesday evening, and notwithstanding unfavorable weather and the slippery condition of the roads, twenty-four members were present. The recently elected lecturer, Mrs. Howard A. Rice, had charge of the program, which included a roll call, to which every member present responded with either a song, story or brief talk. There was also a one-act humorous play, Carpet Rags, those taking part being Mrs. Ethel Blakeley, Mrs. H. A. Rice, Mrs. Edward La Bonte, Mrs. Raymond Lyman, Miss Myrtle Collins and Miss Marion Holmes.

CANTERBURY GREEN

Mrs. Harriet Kenyon was agreeably surprised at her home in South Canterbury Feb. 5, by a company of relatives who gathered to help celebrate her 70th birthday with a family reunion. Besides several gifts they brought everything for the building up of a bountiful dinner of which 17 partook and enjoyed to the utmost. Especially worthy of mention was a large birthday cake decorated with name and date and presented Mrs Kenyon by her daughter, Mrs. Babcock. An afternoon of sociability was spent by the party, which included all the children and grandchildren in this vicinity. Those present included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kenyon, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Babcock and children, Richard and Bessie and Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Phillips, all of Plainfield, Mr. and Mrs. George Allen and son Walter of East Killingly and Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Williams and daughters Myrtice, Althea and Hazel of Canterbury. One son, Clyde, is living in New Hampshire.

The body of Mrs. Regina Linke was brought to Canterbury Thursday for burial in the Carey cemetery. Her death occurred at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Myron Hicks, of Brooklyn, N. Y., where she had been during her illness with heart trouble. For the last few years her home has been in South Canterbury though at one time she lived near the Green and was well known here. She leaves three sons, William, Edward and Fred, and a daughter, Mrs. Rose Hicks. Mr. Linke died about two years ago.

George Goodrich died Saturday at the home of his son, Leroy Goodrich, of South Canterbury, where with Mrs. Goodrich he had been staying for several months. He had not been well for some time but death came suddenly. Funeral services were held at the house Monday, conducted by Rev. Ralph Knight and burial was at Mahwah, N. J. The home of the family is at Hoboken, N. J.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew T. J. Clarke of Hyde street have the sympathy of all in the loss of their daughter, Mrs. Edith Clark Stone of North Greenwich, who died Tuesday at the Day Kimball hospital, Putnam. The funeral was held Friday. Burial was in the Putnam cemetery.

The Christian Endeavor meeting on Sunday evening is to be held in the church. An attempt will be made to reorganize the society and put it upon a better working basis.

Five members of the Ladies' Aid society returned to meet Tuesday at Mrs. Hawes', in spite of the severe storm. The next meeting in two weeks will be at Mrs. Frank Nelson's.

Mrs. Elsie Linton spent the week-end with friends in Norwich.

James Appley and James Lathrop have been filling their icehouses the past week.

Milo Appley is at Hartford this week, in attendance at the Grand lodge as a delegate from the Masonic lodge at Moosup, Mr. Appley being one of the three superior officers who are delegates.

Levi Clark is confined to the house with a severe cold.

The grange meeting was held Wednesday evening. The radio demonstrator did not appear, owing presumably to the bad traveling. A social hour was enjoyed with roasted frankfurts and other good things.

William Dodge, of Plainfield spent Sunday with his sister, Mrs. James Towne.

In an item published two weeks ago the correspondent was misinformed as to the illness of Mr. Peck of Norwich, brother of Mrs. Waldo. Mrs. Peck was the sick one and as she improved Mrs. Waldo did not go to Norwich as stated.

FITCHVILLE

At his home in Fitchville Wednesday, February 6, Mr. Lewis Beard, one of the few remaining Civil war veterans, celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday. Mr. Brand is alert and active for one of his years and he is pleased to meet his friends and talk of old times, or to have a game of whist with them. Many friends called during the day to wish him many more happy birthdays.

The worst storm for a long time was that which began Tuesday. By night limbs which were heavily coated with ice began to break, making traveling on the roads hard, but the buses made their trips as usual.

A reception was held in Palmer Bros.' hall Thursday night in honor of Rev. and Mrs. Speerle, of the Baptist church.

Mrs. Willis Chappell and Ellsworth Ellen and Ethel Powers, spent the week-end in New London.

The young people are enjoying the fine skating on the pond after the school hours.

Miss Mary Lyons of Providence spent a few days recently with her nieces, Misses Margaret and Annie Fields.

Norwich Minstrel Follies
From all advance reports and notices the Norwich Minstrel Follies which will be shown at the Broadway theatre for one week starting Monday, Feb. 11, will eclipse all local shows that have ever been produced in Norwich.

To date there have been three rehearsals and anywhere from 75 to 100 boys and girls have applied. Mr. Lenten, the New York producer picked those that showed the most talent and with his experience in choosing amateur performers, the Norwich public can rest assured that the best talent in Norwich will be presented. There will be fifty boys and girls in the cast.

An idea of the capability of the cast chosen can be gleaned by the rehearsals that have been held at the T. A. B. hall, which has been rented for this occasion. The boys and girls were put through singing and dancing rehearsal with several specialties by several boys and girls. They all showed willingness and brightness in grasping some of the stage intricacies.

Norwich will be proud of their local boys and girls when they see the finished production on the Broadway stage next week. It will be a positive sensation. Including the local cast there will be a Broadway cast of principal players. A gorgeous costume display and scenic investure will set off this production like a gem.

The following boys and girls will participate:

Mildred Blake, 117 Franklin St.; Julia Ulrich, 30 Dunham St.; Anna Ulrich, 30 Dunham St.; Elizabeth Ridley, 319 Pantie St.; Stella Berry, 226 South Thames St.; Irene Stockdale, 8 Union St.; Julia Kozlowski, 336 Central Ave.; Nellie Petroski, 111 High St.; Stella Gordon, Taftville; Anna Stockdale, 8 Union St.; Sophie Morsky, Uncasville; Kathleen O'Hay, Sachem St.; Mary Komca, 663 No. Main St.; Rose Rafkowski, 469 North Main St.; Helen Brown, 7 Southwick Ave.; Anna Roberge, Carpenter Ave.; Stella Rinkie, 11 Third St.; Amelia Lopaca, 11 High St.; Josephine Petrowski, 111 High St.; Cecelia Larviere, 9 Hill St.

James Ustie, 52 Main St.; Herman Hoostoe, 38 Hodge Ave.; Albert Nelson, 2, 4th St.; Benny Butts, 38 Summit St.; Edward Lafrennie, Occum; Joseph Tomban, 47 Washington St.; Raymond Heebner, 146 Elizabeth St.; Raymond La Rochelle, 46 Meyer Ave.; Dave Wally, 86 Spring St.; Oscar Morrison, 79 Hamilton Ave.; John Benoit, 386 Farnklin St.; Dennis Ward, Backus hospital.

ANNOUNCEMENTS
PALACE THEATRE
"I see by the announcement that we are to have Universal's super-production of Hugo's masterpiece, The Hunchback of Notre Dame, at the Palace theatre for a limited engagement, beginning Sunday another definite step forward in the long talked of experiment of presenting the production picture on the same high plane and under the same conditions of fixings, trappings, and atmosphere, that usually mark first class traveling theatrical attractions offered in the theatres devoted to the spoken play has been taken.

"In other words, as I understand it, the same general methods of organization and the same care in the arrangement of details, including the assembly and training of a unit 'company,' special orchestra, stage hands operators, property men, transportation and business forces—have been exercised in preparing The Hunchback of Notre Dame, for the 'road' as though it were a great dramatic or musical production. Ten of these 'companies' it is said, have been organized, and they will travel intact from city to city, covering the greater part of the country, appearing only in first class theatres.

"This, it would appear, is somewhat in line with the talk we heard early last summer of the Shubert-Erlanger arrangement of including big feature pictures as part of their circuit attractions. It is undeniable there is a demand for the worth while screen production. There are thousands who can find more real enjoyment in an artistic, well-acted and finely presented screen offering than they can in many of the regular theatrical entertainments, and the booking of supercinema attractions, under conditions that are said to surround the showing of The Hunchback Of Notre Dame, in our popular playhouses as a general thing in the near future, may be a guess not far from the mark.

"The shrewd and far-seeing Shuberts appear to be the first of the big theatrical producers and managers to sense the growing demand of a certain class of picture lovers for an opportunity to indulge themselves in screen entertainment under what may be looked upon as more favorable conditions than usually apply at the regular cinema houses where continuous performances are more or less the rule and the obtaining of seats and the assurance of not being disturbed during the screening of the production involves doubt.

Next Week at United Congregational Church
The Solalitas meets in the Junior School rooms, at quarter of eight, on Monday evening, to continue work on valentine favors for the Tuberculosis Sanitarium.

Mid-Week worship, Thursday evening at 7:45, Mr. Abbott will review L. P. Jack's "A Living Universe".

The monthly meeting of the Missions Department will be held at the Community House, at three o'clock, on Friday afternoon. Members of the other Congregational churches have been invited to come in, at half past three, to enjoy the address by Miss Olive Pearson, associate field secretary, Sunday school extension society, and a simple dramatization.

The Campfire meets at the Community House, for Hand-Craft, at seven o'clock on Friday evening.

Song Recital at Slater Hall.
The Norwich Music association is announcing a song recital by Mildred Pearson, to be given in Slater hall on Monday evening, February 18th, at 8 p. m.

Miss Pearson is a Norwich girl, possessing a lyric soprano voice of a very lovely quality. She has evidently worked hard and faithfully to acquire mastery of her profession, and has succeeded in developing a voice of unusual range, purity of tone and certainty of control. It is one of those voices eminently designed for coloratura passages, and Miss Pearson does these numbers with a lightness, delicacy and surety that is quite delightful; while there is throughout a warmth and fulness to her tones which take away that coldness and chill so commonly present with the coloratura singer.

The association feels assured that the many friends who have heard Miss Pearson sing, and large numbers of Norwich people who have as yet missed that pleasure, will welcome this opportunity to hear her in Slater hall where the acoustics are so perfect for just that thing that Miss Pearson has to offer.

The price of admission will be $1.50, tax exempt. All seats are reserved. The chart for selection of reserved seats will be at Cranston's store on Wednesday, the 13th.

First Evangelical Lutheran Church
Next Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, meeting of the Ladies' Aid society in the basement of the church. Wednesday night, meeting of the confirmation class at the parsonage at 3.30.

Thursday night, meeting of the Young Peoples' society.

Friday night, choir rehearsal. Beginning at 7.30, Saturday morning the German school and religious instruction will be given. Beginning at 10 a. m., Saturday afternoon at 2 confirmation instruction in the basement of the church.

On Wednesday night February 20, the pastor, H. Hunsinger will hold a steroptican lecture on the mission fields of our Lutheran church in India. The title of the lecture will be, "A Half Hour in India". Most of the pictures are beautifully colored. A collection will be taken for the purpose. All friends are cordially invited. The even will take place under the auspices of the Young People's society.

Popular Feature Picture at Y. M. C. A. Sunday
Victor Hugo's impressive and beautiful story "Les Miserables" will be shown in parts the next few Sundays at the local Y. M. C. A. building. This is verily Hugo's masterpiece, and to see the story portrayed in moving pictures is indeed an opportunity. The first part will be shown on the coming Sunday, February 10th, and the other parts on succeeding Sundays until the whole story has been told in pictures. The meetings will be held at 4 p. m., and all men and boys 14 and over are cordially invited to attend. Hugh Kinder will officiate at the piano for the picture and also render vocal solos.

TODAY'S EVENTS

Today is also the 100th anniversary of the birth of Samuel Plimsoll, the English reformer whose agitation in favor of a load line on English ships has caused him to be known as "the sailor's friend."

ANNOUNCEMENTS
AT THE BROADWAY THEATRE
With the entire Pacific battle fleet in action; with the big guns belching fire and shells in the fury of a tremendous bombardment! with swift seaplanes dealing death in a torrent of lead from the skies; with the shore batteries pouring their fire from the sandy reaches of the coast, Emory Johnson's great production, The Mail Man, takes rank as one of the outstanding photoplays of the year. It will be shown for the first time at the Broadway theatre on Sunday—tomorrow night.

Emory Johnson has produced The Mail Man on a truly lavish and sumptuous scale, by far eclipsing even his great productions of The Third Alarm, in the Name of the Law and Westbound Limited. A young showman, with his sensitive fingers ever on the public, Johnson has theatregoing public, Johnson has that happy faculty of knowing what the public wants and doesn't fail to give it to them.

Together with his brilliant mother, Emilie Johnson, he has fashioned a photoplay of which they both may well be proud.

Giving The Mail Man, a timely twist in the development of the story, Mr. Johnson has supplied one of the most thrilling scenic punches ever devised for a photoplay. It is the pursuit of the rum-runners by the battle fleet. Not only do the battleships open fire on the marauders of the sea, who have already raided the mail boxes of a fleet liner, but the giant seaplanes are also called in action, spewing their torrent of lead down from the skies and shattering the fleeing cruiser of the rum-runners with well-aimed shots. These scenes were all filmed with the fullest co-operation of the United States Government, Mr. Johnson and his staff having been a guest for two weeks on board the U. S. S. New Mexico in Pacific waters.

AT THE BREED
Coming to the Breed theatre Sunday, Monday and Tuesday is The Man Life Passed By, a Metro picture, which was written and directed by Victor Schertsinger, the man responsible for the direction of Jackie Coogan's Long Live the King. For this production, which is said to contain many thrilling and unusual scenes, Mr. Schertzinger assembled a cast of favorites numbering Percy Marmont, Jane and Eva Novak, Cullen Landis, Hobart Bosworth, George Siegmann, and Lydia Knott.

It is the story of a man whose bitterness in heart against life is changed by a woman to love, and the woman is the daughter of his enemy. But this happens only after the girl's younger sister barely escapes the penalty of her father's wrong against the man whose invention he stole.

A peculiar coincidence is that the Novak sisters have the roles of sisters in the photoplay, Jane the elder, and Eva the younger. Mr. Marmont is "the man passed by life," and Hobart Bosworth is Iron "Man" Moore, the girl's father. Cullen Landis has the role of Moore's secretary, who is in love with the younger sister.

The Man Life Passed By is swift-moving drama, loaded with action, and with skilful comedy touches. Tear-moving and thrill-down. But of course the tangle is happily straightened in the end.

One of the most effective sequences in the picture is the Roman Revel given by the younger sister. The garden is decorated to resemble an arena, and the guests are all attired in the togas and draperies of the days of Nero and Titus. A chariot race is run around the "course" with the young men of the party acting as horses.

Victor Schertsinger surpassed his previous directorial achievements when he made The Man Life Passed By, written by him in collaboration with Winifred Dunn, who did the scenario. J. J. Hughes was art director and Chester A. Lyons photographed the production.

Topics of the Day and an Educational comedy make up the remainder of the bill.

Today's bill consists of Viola Dana in Search of a Thrill, Edna Murphy in Her Dangerous Path, the Pathe news and a Sunshine comedy. Continuous show today from 1.30 to 10.15.

Park Congregational Church

The Missions Department invite contributions toward a box to be sent to Rev. Frank Brown, Idaho. Mr. Brown is six feet tall, size 40. Mrs. Brown, and two older daughters, 16 and 17 years, who are in college, are of average height and size. There are two younger daughters, 15 and 11, and two sons, 13 and 7. Contributions may be sent to the Parish House any day this week except Monday.

The South Georgia conference of the Methodist church has named the new junior college for boys being established in Valdosta, Ga., the Woodrow Wilson college.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

Thirteen Danielson boys, fifteen Putnam boys and ten from Woodstock took an automobile trip to Hartford, to attend a Rally of the Hi-Y clubs of Hartford and Windham counties. Maurice F. Childs, principal of Woodstock Academy was in charge of the Woodstock delegation; William Wheton, Stanley Shaw, G. Harold Gilpatric and Dr. H. W. Thompson finished the automobiles for the Putnam boys; Mrs. A. L. Reed, Mrs. A. W. Logee took the Danielson boys.

A very fine program of speaking and discussion on Hi-Y club problems and programs was conducted. During the recreational period the boys had opportunity to bowl and take a swim in the Y pool. A very fine supper was served at the Y. M. C. A. followed by singing and a few inspirational talks.

Those attending were, From Woodstock: M. F. Childs, leader, Harold Esterbrook, Harold Johnson, Ezra Pike, Charles Nichols, William F. Clawson, Kenneth Andrews, Nils Sheming, Harry Ruteshauser, Stanford Johnson.

Danielson: Phil Armington, Jack Moody, Lyman Lyon, Henry Stoddard, Gordon Cunneen, Douglas Logee, Stanley Allen, John Crosby, Denton Gallup, Robert Fulton, Owen Fryling, Robert M. Tyrrill, Leader Curtis Pratt; Mrs. A. L. Reed, Mrs. A. W. Logee.

Putnam: Charles Carpenter, Sheldon Carpenter, George Gilpatric, Kenneth Bugbee, Franklin Perry, Paul Wheton, Elbert Woodis, William Alder, Sydney King, Leo Reeves, Walter Light, Leroy Thompson, Arthur Gardner, Minot Horne, Henry Bugbee Stanley Shaw, William Wheton, John H. Cormier.

Information made available Friday indicates that a hard and sharply contested battle for control of the Class A common stock of the Connecticut Mills, Inc., was fought out, before it passed into its present ownership, and that had the control been otherwise there was a possibility that Danielson would have lost the big industry.

It appears that a spirited and stormy legal tilt was staged at the law offices in New York where the contending interests gathered to watch the disposal of 21,490 shares of the Class A common stock of the mill company, this stock belonging to the estate of Tracy Lewis, former president of the company. This block of stock, carrying control, was ordered sold to the highest bidders—White, Weld and Company, and Blake Brothers, Boston brokerage houses.

A protest against the sale of the stock for $182,000, the highest sealed bid, was entered by Robert J. Caldwell of New York, his bid being $2,701.60 less than the figure at which the stock was sold. What action may follow this protest is not apparent, though it is alleged they were willing after the bids were opened to pay $200,000 for the block of shares from the Lewis estate.

However, it is stated that the Lewis stock is now definitely in the hands of the interests represented by the brokerage house mentioned and that several thousand additional shares of the Class A common has been entrusted, for voting purpose, with a voting trust that has been formed and which represents well over 30,000 shares of the Class A common stock giving a wide margin of control.

It was stated Friday that the company will now be in a position to develop its business and with an ordinary good year will be in a strong position. It has paid off an indebtedness of $8,000,000 and has no outstanding debts and has not been a borrower from banks for the past 15 months. Only this week the company paid five over-due quarterly dividends on its first preferred stock. The future prospects appear very encouraging. The concern will open a Providence office and its sales organization will be centered there.

Incident to the stock of the Connecticut Mills held by the Tracy S. Lewis estate and which has figured so prominently in the recent fight for control, it is stated that the stock was appraised at $3 a share (par value being $10) after Mr. Lewis' death in April, 1921. Since that time the mill company has paid off all of its heavy indebtedness and has returned to a sound financial basis.

For some time after Mr. Lewis' death the stock of the company was considered of doubtful value, but the executor of the Lewis estate while letting it be known generally that he desired to sell the stock belonging to Lewis estate never received an offer for it until on or about January 10 of this year, when R. J. Caldwell, an official of the Connecticut Mills company, offered to buy the entire block at $6 a share. Local stockholders recall that about the same time brokerage houses in New York were writing them letters in which the generous offer of $3.50 a share was made.

However, Mr. Caldwell's offer was not accepted, on advice of counsel for Mrs. Lewis. Since Mr. Lewis' death no dividends had been paid on his common stock and accumulated dividends on the first and second preferred stock which be held, with the stocks themselves, represented $387,-897.91.

In the meantime, the probate court in Naugatuck, where Mr. Lewis lived and where the estate is in course of settlement, issued an order that sealed bids would be received for the Lewis estate common stock, these bids to be opened at the office of the executor in New York at noon on January 30. On that date the bids were opened. The highest bid was $8.33 per share, Mr. Caldwell's bid was $8.26. The stock was immediately ordered sold to the highest bidder. Mr. Caldwell then offered an oral bid of $200,-000. It was rejected. The ruling was that all bids were to be presented sealed and before the noon hour, which was then past. Attorneys for Mr. Caldwell who were present made motions to reconsider and motions to reopen and motions to adjourn for further bidding, but all of these were denied. They were held not in conformity with the order of sale, as had bee nentered into by the executor, the heirs and all others interested.

The formally presented protest of Mr. Caldwell's attorneys in his behalf, this addressed to Judge Freeman of the probate court and Daniel Burke, executor of the estate, was as follows:

On behalf of my client, Robert J. Caldwell, I protest against the carrying out of the sale of 21,840 shares of the Class A common stock of the Connecticut Mills to White, Weld and Company and Blake Brothers and Co., pursuant to their sealed written bid, dated January 30, 1924, on the ground that Mr. Caldwell is willing to pay a higher sum and has submitted a written sealed bid to the executor making him an offer of $200,000 for said stock, and for the further reason that Mr. Caldwell's understanding was that the executor had the right to reject any and all sealed bids.

This bids was made at a meeting in Mr. Burke's office on January 30, 1924, and submitted at 12.20 p. m.

It is stated that the foregoing protest was received, but no judicial notice wa stake not it by the court.

Antonio Perry, one of the Goodyear parties raided a week ago today, has drawn the heaviest penalties yet imposed in a liquor case of recent years in the town court. Perry paid a total of $526 and was given a sentence of 30 days in jail by Judge W. Fenner Woodward, the execution of the jail sentence being suspended on condition that Perry leave the town and the state within 60 days.

Perry's fine was imposed on four counts—$50 on a reputation charge, $200 for eeping with intent to sell and $100 each on two counts charging actual sales. The balance being represented in costs. He had the money and paid and has agreed to get of Connecticut before the 60 day period of grace he has been allowed to escape a jail sentence expires.

A happy throng of Killingly high school students and their guests participated Friday evening in the assembly hall in the annual junior promenade, a feature of the social life of the school each year. Music was by a Providence orchestra.

Ice at Quinebaug lake, where a large portion of what the borough uses each year is obtained had reached 7 inches in thickness Friday and about held there during the day. Preparations will be made today for cutting. It is anticipated that the ice will be marked out for plowing so that actual cutting may begin early next week, unless warmer weather comes.

Behind a rough board screening, a splendid modern store front of art metal and leaded glass, with marble bases and tile entrances has been built at the Berris building between the Danielson Trust company block nd the Dowe building in Main street. The floor of the building also has been dropped down to the street level. Other improvements to be made include the installation of steel ceilings and sidewall coverings in the two stores in the building, which will have the most modern and attractive front of any business block in Danielson when the work is completed some time this month.

Ice that has encased trees and shrubbery here since Tuesday night was clinging fast at sunset Friday, though some of it had melted away during the day. Owners of fine shade trees that are carrying a heavy burden of ice are fearful of damage to them should a high wind develop.

A Valentine whist and social was given by the Catholic Woman's Welfare council Firday evening at its rooms. There was a large attendance.

Quinebaug Pomona grange members will be present February 23, for an all-day meeting as guests of the members of Killingly grange. Miss Helen Kelley of Dayville has charge of the arrangements.

Mrs. W. J. Craig will have the members of the W. C. T. U. at her home for a meeting Tuesday afternoon.

Colonel Edward Anderson camp, S. of V., has arranged a patriotic program for the observance of Lincoln's birthday. Members of McGregor, W. R. C., have accepted an invitation to attend.

Lyman C. Willis of Springfield was a visitor with friends in Danielson Friday.

PUTNAM

Servcel was completed Friday, by Deputy Sheriff Charles E. Ayer, of papers in a procedure that had its inception when E. J. Keegan of Wilsonville, a community of the town of Thompson, obtained a writ of injunction against the town of Thompson, this prohibiting payment of any further compensation by the town to County Commissioner E. H. Corttiss for his services as a member of the Thompson town school committee.

Payment of such sums as Mr. Corttis has received for services on the committee has been a matter of some controversy for several years, inasmuch as no other member of the committee is compensated for like services and in view of the fact that selectment have long since been given opinion of competent counsel that the proceeding was illegal.

Notwithstanding the alleged legality of the procedure the selectmen have continued to pay Mr. Corttis. They have done so, it was stated Friday, evan though a town meeting was warned that the procedure was illegal, though the meeting immediately thereafter voted without dissent to continue to pay.

It is understood that Mr. Keegan has instituted the procedure through which the writ of injunction has issued on his own initiative, and that it will niclude "an effort" to recover for [illegible] all money Mr. Corttis has received as compensation for his services in the capacity mentioned.

Though indications were that he had died almost instantly of heart failure the night before, the body of Nalbert Bizaillon, 60, was not found in a woodshed at his home in the northerly section of the city until Friday morning when his son went for wood for the kitchen fire. The body had frozen stiff during the night.

Mr. Bizaillon, it was stated later, had occasionally gone to the shed in the late afternoon to chop wood and thereafter would go to some neighborhood friend and stay until late at night or even all night, returning in the morning. While this was an unusual procedure, it was regarded as a phase of his illness, but did cause worry for members of his household. Thursday evening Mrs. Bizaillon went to the shed about 7 o'clock and called to her husband. There was no answer, though she had heard him chopping wood there more than an hour before as darkness was setting in. Not being able to see the interior of the shed Mrs. Bizaillon took for granted that her husband was not there, though the body must have been cold in death at that time. No further attention to Mr. Bizaillon's absence was paid during the evening, though apprehension grew as the night wore on.

Mr. Bizaillon was a mill worker during his active years. He was born in Canada, but had been a resident of this country since his early youth. He leaves his wife, two sons and four daughters.

Of interest to Putnam people is an action instituted in East Cambridge to have set aside a will in which W. J. K. Patron, whose home was in this city for years during his youth, is made sole heir to the estate of a widow with whom he is represented as having been on friendly terms. The effort is being made by relatives of the widow.

A Boston paper had the following about the matter:

When William J. Patron, Boston lawyer, was a candidate for district attorney of Suffolk county, in 1922, his automobile decked with advertising matter announcing the fact was frequently parked in front of the home of Mrs. Irene E. Conroy, 325 Broadway, Everett, it was testified this week, in the East Cambridge probate court.

Mrs. Irene E. Conroy, who died in February, 1923, made a will dated September 18, 1922, in which she left her entire estate to Patron, who befriended her on many occasions. She was the wife of Dr. Patrick J. Conroy, who died May 24, 1920, leaving his entire estate to Mrs. Conroy. He was a well known physician in Everett.

The will is being contested by Mrs. Conroy's sister, Mrs. Mary Langhams, and her niece, Miss Mildred Dunn, both of Everett. They allege undue influence, fraud, lack of capacity on the part of Mrs. Conroy to execute a will. The estate is large.

Miss Dunn testified that Mrs. Conroy was fond of Patron and told her that he in turn thought the world of her.

"Mrs. Conroy told me that whenever Mr. Patron called at the house he kissed her and called her sweetheart," said Miss Dunn.

"I saw his car decked with advertising matter announcing his candidacy for district attorney of Suffolk county, standing in front of her house on many occasions. I was present when the so-called kissing, to which my aunt referred, took place."

It was as Nevada Van Valkenburgh that Pomfret and Putnam knew the Duchess of Oporto, whose name again comes before the public through a bequest to her from the first of her series of husbands. About six years ago, in the Windham county superior court in this city, the present Duchess of Oporto was granted a divorce from Philip Van Kalkenburgh. It was recalled Friday that the duchess was strikingly beautiful at the time she appeared here and was wondrously gowned, a detail recalled being that she wore slippers with jeweled heels.

The most recent basis for publicity relative to her was set forth as follows in an issue of a New York paper Friday:

Although the Duchess of Oporto has had three husbands and has inherited a fortune since she divorced him in 1906 Lee Albert Agnew, inventor, apparently never forgot the attraction she had for him and in his will, filed for probate yesterday, directed that any income from his estate in excess of the needs of his son shall be paid to his former wife.

In the event the son, Lee Albert Agnew, Jr., should die without issue, the income from the entire trust estate is to go to the Duchess of Oporto during her life and on her death the principal is to be divided among his next of kin.

The will says his wife's maiden name was Nevada Stoody, "who after the dissolution of the marriage between her and myself became, by a subsequent marriage, the Duchess of Oporto."

Previous to the filing of the will referring to her as "Nevada Stoody," the published accounts of the Duchess of Oporto's life always referred to her as Nevada Hayes, born in Ohio in 1885 and noted since girlhood for her beauty and charm.

She married Agnew, then a Chicago inventor and engineer, about twenty-five years ago and divorced him June 25, 1906. The next day she married William Hayes Chapman, seventy-six, who died a year later, leaving her a fortune estimated at $10,000,000.

Mrs. Chapman, beautiful, wealthy and not yet thirty, went to Europe and became one of the most sought after young women in Europe. She became known as the $10,000,000 widow" and "the most proposed-to-widow in America." She returned to America in 1911 and married Philip Van Valkenburgh, fifty-five, a lawyer and reputed wealthy. After a few months residence at the Hotel St. Regis, she obtained a divorce from him in Connecticut on the grounds of desertion, and her attorney assured the court then that she had only $500,000 left of her second husband's fortune.

In 1917 Mrs. Van Valkenburgh married the Duke of Oporto, 55, brother of King Carlos of Portugal. The Duke of Oporto was banished from Portugal with his nephew King Manuel, and the rest of the royal family in the revolution which made Portugal a republic. He died in Naples in 1920.

The value of Agnew's estate is state in the petition to be over $10,-000 in real and over $10,000 in personal property."

The Webster public has just come into the knowledge of the fact that Miss Grace Minnie Hoyle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Hoyle, and Leslie Leroy Carpenter, son of Mr. and Mrs. Burt H. Carpenter, all Webster people were married in Putnam December 24. The information became public through the filing of the marriage return. The marriage was performed by Rev. N. B. Burton, pastor of the Methodist church here.

Mrs. Carpenter was a teacher in the Webster schools and only recently was granted a leave of absence. No intimation that she was married was made at the time the leave was applied for, it is stated.

President Louis A. Wolfe of the L. A. W. Acceptance corporation stated Friday morning that the directors of the concern voted to pay a quarterly dividend of $3.50 a share of the preferred stock, par value $100, this dividend to be as of March 15 and payable April 1. Mr. Wolfe states that the earning of the corporation during January were four times as great as during the corresponding month of last year.

Friday morning, the funeral of Miss Louise Rivard was held from the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rivard, with funeral services attended by relatives and a large number of friends at St. Mary's church. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery. There were beautiful floral pieces.

Albert F. Ralston, secretary of the Putnam chamber of commerce, was at Hartford Friday attending a conference odf the secretaries of chambers of commerce throughout the state.

Deputy Judge Archibald Macdonald presided at a session of the city court Friday morning when three men, charged with having been intoxicated, were ordered committed to Brooklyn jail.

Sunday will be observed as Lincoln Memorial Sunday at the Congregational church.

February 28 has been selected as the date of the church Home night at the Methodist church.

"How I Wooed and Won the $40,000,000 Rogers Heiress"

Count Salm's Own Story of His Whirlwind Courtship and Marriage

Count Ludwig Salm Von Hoogstraeten
Who won the hand of Millicent Rogers, heiress to a $40,000,000 fortune left by her grandfather, H. H. Rogers of Standard Oil fame.

Countess von Hoogstraeten, formerly Millicent Rogers, daughter of Colonel H. H. Rogers, and granddaughter of the late H. H. Rogers, oil magnate.

The late H. H. ROGERS, Standard Oil magnate, founder of the $40,000,000 fortune.

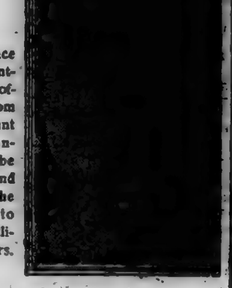
Von Hoogstraeten tells how titled Gold Diggers marry money. Gives amazing facts regarding heiresses who gave up all to marry titles.

Count Salm and Fern Andra, famous German movie star, an old flame of the Count. They are shown in a German movie in which the Count was the Sheik.



Mrs. Grace Sands Montgomery Coffin, to whom the Count was engaged to be married, and whom he jilted to wed Millicent Rogers.

Count Salm, known in Paris, London, Vienna and Continental Europe as the "Rodolph Valentino" of European movies, just before sailing from New York the other day on his honeymoon, completed the writing of the most thrilling real life romance ever offered for newspaper publication.

As picturesque as Don Juan, more widely known than Beau Brummel, this modern Romeo has written of heart affairs that have made the smart sets of four continents gasp and he makes public for the first time the true story of how he courted and won the charming (and immensely wealthy) Millicent Rogers, the richest matrimonial prize of 1924.

Don't miss a single chapter of this wonderful story; more fascinating than any romantic novel

THE TAX CUTTING BILL.

Because the house ways and means committee voted to report the Mellon tax reduction bill in nearly the form that it was submitted does not mean that it will not experience opposition. The committee agreed that it should be submitted to the house, but this was not done without assurance from the chairman that he will fight the plan to cut the surtaxes to the point where Secretary Mellon advises it will be necessary in order to get the desired results.

The tax reduction bill has made a strong appeal to the country. The benefits of such relief are greatly desired, and Secretary Mellon has presented a plan for meeting the situation in a sane manner. He has endeavored to meet the common need without trying to play politics. He has dealt with it as a business proposition, and it will be unfortunate if those who are desirous of serving the best interests of the country do not give him support.

Immediately the Mellon plan was put forth there was a democratic move to upset it. The aim was to destroy the political effect which a cut in taxes would be expected to have. Instead of joining in and giving the country to understand that it was a non-partison undertaking and that the democrats were desirous for a sound reduction of taxes new plans were devised to either block it or to turn the credit to the democrats by urging changes that were more radical than wise and resorted to solely for political purposes.

It is contributing to just such activities when Chairman Green announces his determination to fight the surtax provisions. He balks at a leadership in the handling of the financial affairs of the country for the past several years that has brought nation-wide praise.

Chairman Green's attitude is only one of the indications that there is no telling what is in store for the tax bill as it has been reported.

BOY SCOUTS' ANNIVERSARY.

Once more the Boy Scouts of America are observing anniversary week. It is an occasion for directing new attention to the work of this highly commendable organization that its benefits and accomplishments may be better appreciated outside of the organization, and that the objects may be more successfully carried out.

Chief Scout Executive West has recently stated in one of his letters, "We are highly favored by an unusual, widespread, general comprehension of Scouting on the part of men and women, well nigh universal, but I sometimes fear that much of this enthusiasm is based upon a superficial understanding, a lack, if you please, of appreciation of the fundamental purposes in Scouting. Because of the popular appeal of the many splendid features in our programme which are so apparent, and in themselves so worthwhile, such as hiking, camping nature study, first aid, the use of the uniform, the giving of boys an opportunity to have a good time, and the many practical values, and because of the knowledge of things boys are taught to do through our programme of activities, our major objective is easily lost sight of. These are but means to an end. Our concern is for character building and citizenship training."

The point which has been made by the chief scout executive is one that cannot fail to be recognized. The importance of character building and citizenship training among the boys is paramount. Naturally there must be means to an end and the method adopted of keeping the boys interested while they are being instructed and trained is impressive. They are given a most valuable perspective of their responsibilities and are prepared to assume them when the proper time comes. The work of preparing the citizens of tomorrow for their tasks through the medium of Scouting is one easily commendable but deserving of all possible support and encouragement. The making of pilgrimages during anniversary week to the graves or birthplaces of former presidents, members of the hall of fame, scout pioneers, to other historical places cannot fail to have its good effect in the good work of character building.

MINE HORRORS.

It was an unusual situation that existed in Crosby, Minn., where the bottom of a lake was so weakened in mining operations that it gave way and the water therefrom drowned two score or more of the miners who were caught like rats in a trap. Just what the situation was in that tunnel under the lake is not known, but it is apparent now that what were considered proper safeguards for the mine workers failed. It is not to be imagined that the mine engineers did not know that the tunnel went under the lake or that they were not fully informed as to the depth of the lake, but such provisions as were made to prevent the caving in of the mine roof were not adequate. It is one of those cases where the sacrifice of human life might have been avoided but inasmuch as there had been no warning of any impending break and the miners were about their usual employment unsuspicious of danger to themselves it will probably go down as an accident against which it was supposed proper provisions had been made.

Water in a mine does not necessarily mean that a cave-in or a deluge is about to take place. There are few mines which do not require extensive pumping outfits to keep the water from accumulating quite the same as in a well, but no equipment, even a double pumping outfit, would be sufficient to take care of the volume of water that entered the Minnesota mine.

It is one of those instances that gives emphasis to the danger that is involved in underground work. Probably the greater number of them occur in the coal mining region where the dangers from fire and gas are constant. In the past year there were 2462 coal miners who were killed as the result of mine accidents in spite of the provisions that had been made to prevent them. In the mining of ore different conditions exist but that doesn't mean that they are free from danger. Probably the sudden flooding of a mine is one of the most infrequent causes of mine horrors.

WILL DO A GOOD JOB.

General Butler as director of public safety in Philadelphia has been engaged in his work of cleaning up the Quaker city for a little over a month. He has had some interesting experiences, long hours and no little discouragement. He has encountered a balky department in certain instances and has felt free to express his views and intentions under such conditions.

He has demanded that the police must be loyal to the city and the director. They must eliminate all connection with bribers, bootleggers and others who seek protection while promoting vice. He has encountered those who have disregarded his warnings and he has made examples of them. For the first time in a long while there appears to be serious efforts to eliminate some of the rottenness in that city. None knows better than the director himself that he has not accomplished his task. He had not anticipated that a job that needed doing for so long could be accomplished in a twinkling. He has made good progress in spite of the opposition that he has encountered. He is doing his best to carry out the purpose of a department of public safety and has given a good demonstration of his sincere intention of having the law enforced.

Director Butler has been named for a period of a year. In view of the obstacles encountered he has been quoted as saying that he would be glad to be out of the office. That he has no idea of quitting, however, is accentuated by his statement to police officials of that city when he said that he would remain the entire four years of the present city administration if his services were needed. He knows he faces a stiff job but he has no intention of turning back in the face of opposition. He displays the typical marine spirit.

BAD PLAYTHINGS.

With a shot from an air rifle imbedded in his forehead, about which he said nothing for two weeks in order to shield the girl companion who did it, the Pittsfield, Mass., boy came near being one of those somewhere in the country whose eyesight is lost every day in the year because of the manner in which such playthings are used.

The air rifle is a much enjoyed plaything, but it is one that fails to get the proper respect for its dangers. The Pittsfield boy will probably suffer no harm from being the target in that particular case, but had the course of the shot been but a trifle lower he would probably have lost the sight of one eye, meaning a serious handicap for the rest of his life.

That it wasn't intentional alters the situation little. It only goes to show what the careless handling of an air rifle will do and what the effect is bound to be when an individual happens to be in front of the toy.

It is because of the lack of care that is displayed, the using of air rifles in the cities, the causing of injures and the damaging of property that some communities have adopted ordinances prohibiting their use. With a child being blinded every day in the year from such an instrument not much fault can be found in those communities where the proven menace has resulted in the elimination of such dangerous playthings. They are used with quite the same recklessness in many instances that certain elders make use of a gun. The air rifle suffers because of what it can do and because there are those who seem to insist that it must do its worst.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The man on the corner says: Nothing very severe about the first week of the groundhog's extended winter.

It is a disappointing winter for those who delight in shoveling snow, but no protest has been forwarded to the weather man.

It cost $9,183,333 to telephone in Connecticut during the past year, and no one would dare to claim that it wasn't cheap at that.

Hiram Johnson is quoted as denying that he will call off his candidacy. He ought to have been able to see the handwriting long ago.

It is intimated that Mr. Fall has much to say that hasn't been said. Possibly Mr. Doheny has more revelations awaiting a proper release date.

One cannot imagine one democratic candidate taking advantage of another just because his name has been mentioned in connection with petroleum.

The fact that each party fears the other will get the credit of tax reduction makes it clear that there's knowledge of what the taxpayers want.

The Esquimoes are said to put those past the productive age onto ice cakes and send them to sea. That would seem to indicate that they lack thin ice.

Considering Dr. Levermore's connection with peace efforts, the senate committee investigating the Fox plan will not be able to wind up until he has been called onto the carpet.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

According to newspaper reports, an aged clergyman in New Hampshire was found frozen to death, having been overcome with the cold while trying to build a fire. It also appears that he had little fuel, food or money. It must be admitted that at this distance the incident has a rather ugly appearance. It may be that the case has been exaggerated; this we certainly hope to be the fact. One can hardly understand what the denomination to which he belonged was thinking of. If he was destitute it was their business to find it out. One also feels perfectly justified in severely condemning the town authorities in allowing an old and respectful man to freeze to death because he was aged, hungry and weak. It would seem also that his housekeeper, ten years older than he, very nearly perished with the cold. It is bad enough for drunken men to die from exposure, but cases of this sort seem much worse.

Was it David Grayson who said: "Why is it that when small communities jump at conclusions they so often jump the wrong way?" It will not take more than two weeks' reflection to show that this is not far from the truth. But why should David Grayson or anybody else limit this fact to small communities? As a cold matter of fact all communities do something along the line of this jumping business. And if they don't see anything more tangible to jump at, they will make a plunge at conclusions, and they generally do it in the dark. That means, of course, that they are most likely to jump "the wrong way." But, bless your heart, big communities do just as much of this fool jumping business as little ones! That little wayside place sometimes called New York has been known to jump the wrong way when she was not after things so important as conclusions. As individuals and communities are put together they have got to jump anyway, and let us forgive them if sometimes they jump wrong.

It isn't so very strange that we poor mortals worry over things that never happen, but isn't it a bit strange, if man is "the paragon of animals," as that young lunatic, Hamlet, insisted upon, that he should worry over things that can't possibly happen? And that is just what we grestly overestimated "paragons" are doing right along. The little fellow slings his skates over his shoulders and goes whistling to the pond whose ice is known to be from nine to twelve inches thick. If he does not return at the expected hour the mother knows that he lies drowned in ten feet of water. The intensity of her emotion gives an unhealthy twist to her imagination. It conjures up something dreadful from the realm of the impossible. It is dread that makes us worry anyway, and it is very common for dread to overleap the bounds of reason.

We used to hear of a popular farce called, A Tempest in a Teapot. The farce is still with us but it has taken on a new name and appears in a new form. It is called The Teapot Dome. Those who have had anything to do with it will recognize the farce, and will not deny that it has stirred up something of a tempest. In its modern shape it would seem that tea has nothing to do with the situation. Oil has been substituted in its place. To bring the farce right up to date it ought to be called, A Tempest Over Oil Wells. And as far as the evidence thus far has been submitted it would seem that there is some ground for raising a tempest over the transactions. As the placing of these leases is hardly a missionary enterprise, the oil operators are not putting vast sums into it from a purely humanitarian motive. Of course Uncle Sam who pays the bills every time finds that it is no farce.

It is perfectly natural to celebrate the anniversary days of persons and things worth remembering. On February 9, 1889 the department of agriculture was created and made one of the portfolios of the president's cabinet. The reasons set forth at the time for the establishment were unanswerable. The internal development of this country after the Civil war was such that the secretary of the interior had his hands more than full. And as this was the era of the marvellous expansion of the west, brought about largely by the increase of agracian products, this new department was absolutely needed. There was little or no opposition to the proposal and it soon became a fact. Those acquainted with the natural growth of country will remember what stimulus this gave to the farmer's credit, particularly in the western states from the fact that the government was back of their great industry. Today is the 35th anniversary of the department.

Most, if not all, of our churches, have had their annual meetings. One could not listen to the large number of reports, covering such a wide and varied area of service, without feeling how much good work has been done patiently, loyally, lovingly and unselfishly. It is one of the easiest things in the world to throw mud at the church, and because it is so mentally cheap is the probable reason why so many do it. Let any one with a grain of reason and an unprejudiced mind attend one of these annual meetings and hear the dosen or more reports showing what the church stands for as translated in terms of service, and he will stop his carping about the institution as being "a non-taxable drug on the market", "a non-producer" and "a mausoleum of dead theologies."

It seems to me that these reports impress upon us this composite lesson: "How much can we do to create a spirit of neighborliness?" Do you know your neighbor? If not, why not? Would you not like to broadcast this feeling of friendliness? If this desire is very strong, there is abundant opportunity for expressing it. We need a new appraisment of our church activities. The real church is still the place where man worships God and gets his inspiration for service to his fellow men. The real church is still the place where the Bible is regarded as the authoritative word of God, interpreted in a scholarly, rational way. It is not the junk shop after the fundamentalist pattern, nor the balloon of thin air after the radical conception. The real church still sees in the Bible both the natural and the supernatural blended in mystery, miracle, hope, faith and love that commands our admiration if it baffles our understanding. All honor to the real church.

There is an old saying—and some people still believe that it is true—that on the second day of February the ground hog comes out of his winter quarters, and if he does not see his shadow, he gets back again post-haste for another long and delightful snooze; but if he does see his shadow he know that winter is nearly over and acts accordingly. (It is this way or visa versa—but that makes no difference.) There are, however, two or three questions that come to mind in regard to this saying: first, does this custom apply anymore to the ground hog than to the hog that is above the ground? Second, may it not be that the ground hog has defective eyesight, brought about by sleeping so long under ground? Thirdly, is it a scientific fact that the ground hog, or any other hog, was ever known to be very anxious about his shadow on any day of the year?

POOR ARE AIDED BY TAX CUT, SAYS MELLON.

Is Secretary Mellon trying to reduce the taxes of the rich at the expense of the poor?

That, at least, is the principal charge brought against the Mellon bill by its opponents. I went to the secretary of the treasury to ask him what answer he had to make to this accusation, writes Edward P. Roberts in the Washington Star.

Secretary Mellon is not a politician and has never taken any great pains to disguise that fact. When an argument tends to become personal it seems to Mr. Mellon to become also political and, therefore, something to be ignored.

The secretary of the treasury is one man in public life who never indulges in personalities. He would not discuss his appeal from any political or personal angle, but confined himself to saying simply:

"I have not framed any proposals out of consideration for either the rich man or the poor man, but solely in the interest of the American people as a whole."

"It is not true, however, Mr. Secretary," I said, "that on the surface, at all events, your proposals call for greater reductions in the taxes of the rich man than of the poor man?"

What Cash Pays

"I know that that claim is made," he said. "It is supported by pointing out that under my proposals a man with a million-dollar income would save about $250,000 in taxes, while 200 men with incomes of $5,000 apiece or a joint income of a million dollars, would save only about $8,000 among them. That may be a good political argument, but the only fair way is to figure what each man would actually have to pay in taxes under the revised schedule. If you will look at it from that point of view you will find out that the man with the million dollar-income is called upon to pay nearly $300,000 in taxes, while each of the $5,000 men are only asked to pay $34-25. In other words, under the administration bill one wealthy man would pay 40 times as much as 200 men whose combined income is the same as his.

"The big trouble," continued the secretary, "in getting people to see the facts in a case like this is that they do not understand the real effect of taxation. Excessive taxation stifles industry and progress and is one of the greatest of all factors in raising the cost of living. The effect of my proposals would mean far more to the poor man than a mere reduction in his taxes. They would materially reduce the cost of living and would mean lower rents, lower food costs, lower clothing costs and lower transportation costs. On the other hand, they will probably mean that the rich man will not pay less taxes, but more."

"How would that be brought about?"

"Very simply. We are levying surtaxes now which are so extreme that rich men avoid any taxable income. If these taxes were reduced to a moderate basis we would remove the temptation for men to invest their capital in tax-exempt securities or to adopt other lawful methods of avoiding taxation. The free flow of capital into productive industry would be restored and the effect would be immediately felt, not only in increased revenue to the government, but in lower living costs.

"Take the man who is paying $60 a month today for a house which he rented at $30 a month before the war. Heavy surtaxes are not the only factor in the trebling of his rent, but they are one of the most important factors.

"Real estate and building construction are ordinarily two of the most popular investments of rich men. But our present system of taxation has driven their capital out of these fields with the result that we have a great building shortage and enormous rents.

"Another most important item in living costs is railroad transportation. Railroad rates are high because the railroads have to pay so dearly for capital. Here again the surtax has frightened the investor away and dealt a heavy blow to prosperity and industrial progress. Surely it is obvious that no direct reduction in the taxes of the wage earner would mean as much to him as the reduction in his living costs, which would be brought about by bringing capital back into productive industry.

Evils of System.

"The evil of the existing system," went on Mr. Mellon, "is either that capital stays out of productive business, and those already in business can charge high prices, or capital goes in only where the opportunity to make an undue profit is present. In either case it is the consumer who pays.

"High taxes kill off incentive in business and destroy that spirit of progress which has made America what it is and on which our future so much depends. Other countries are learning the same lesson. Excessive taxation has practically halted progress in England."

"You referred just now to 'moderate taxes.' What do you mean by that phrase?"

"Well," replied the secretary, "before the war in 1916 we got practically as much revenue in surtaxes from incomes of $300,000 and over at a maximum of 10 per cent surtax of a maximum of 10 per cent in 1921 at a 65 per cent maximum tax. This 10 per cent may be the right figure. Certainly 31 per cent, being 8 per cent normal and 25 per cent surtax, is not too low.

"Whatever is done in the present situation it should be obvious that our existing system is wrong."

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

THE SIFTING PROCESS

Jesus intimated to Peter that Satan would be permitted to sift him as wheat. Peter thought he was all wheat. Satan soon showed him that he was not. But as a result of the sifting Peter's weakness was turned into power, not only for himself, but for many others also.

His failure made an eternally helpful thing to his brethren in all ages. His fall and rising again made the doctrine of divine forgiveness a vital energy in his sermons and letters. After this experience what a gospel he had to preach. He knew by experience the unforgetting, rescuing love of the Christ, the grace of God. Oh, what a reality it was to him. Pentecost rings yet with the eloquence of that once broken heart. Hope in Christ; oh, what a certainty it did have to him. His first letter is called the "epistle of hope." Jacob the Supplanter had been made Israel, Prince of God. And now Peter was sifted out of Simon—sifted out with an experience which made him a strengthener of men. Oh Simon! Are you being sifted? Tried by you wealth, tried by your poverty, tried by joys, tried by sorrows, stand up to God's purpose. There is Peter in you, and God is overruling everything that He may be brought out. Do not faithlessly resist devine purposes. Do not throw aside every possibility of your nobler self by declining the sifting processes of life. It is not a hopeless, but helpful process. "Simon, I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not." "Help my brethren," you say. Yes, but first you must be helped—like Peter turned again to Him.

Shall we resist being made strong and true by the sifting life? Not by God's help let me say, permit anything, God, any trial, any sifting, sift me out of my weakness, only bring the Peter out of Simeon, and then let me by my sorrows and my gifted power strengthen them my brethren.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Thomas W. Gregory, one of the two attorneys appointed by President Coolidge to prosecute the Teapot Dome cases, has had much experience in the preparation and prosecution of litigation growing out of investigations of large financial and business transactions. He is one of the few prosecutors who has forced a powerful trust to its knees and compelled it to pay a heavy penalty. Representing the state of Texas he not only drove the Waters-Pierce Oil Company beyond the confines of that state, but compelled it to pay as penalties for violation of the Texas laws the sum of $3,000,000. In 1918 he was called by the United States Government to become a special Assistant Attorney General in charge of the investigation and prosecution of several of the big railroads for violation of the Sherman act. The next year he entered the cabinet of President Wilson as Attorney General.

IN THE DAY'S NEWS

NAYARIT

Nayarit, mentioned as one of the Mexican west coast states in which there have been revolutionary disturbances, is the subject of a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society, based on a communication to the Society from Herbert Corey.

"The twentieth century has been a bit late in reaching this state of Nayarit, of which Tepic is the capital; but it seems convincing here at last," says a bulletin. "The railroad has come, so that one may ride in Pullman cars direct from the northern border, if one prefers the rails to the Old Spanish Road.

"Bolshevism has had its play in Nayarit. Mexico City intervened when a Bolshevist governor was elected, and ordered the seating of the Conservative candidate in his place.

"There is no richer state in raw materials in the world, perhaps than Nayarit. No one knows how rich it is. In its 10,000 square miles the 170,000 inhabitants can raise any crop desired.

"The farmer has but to vary the elevation to find the proper climate. Limes, lemons, oranges, wheat, corn, beans, bananas, palms, coconuts, cotton, tobacco—the list is endless. There are even two grapevines and one apple tree in Nayarit, which are eminently fruitful. No one seems to know why it has never occurred to any one to plant others.

"Nor is irrigation needed, so well balanced is the rainy season in the greater part of the state. In the mountains there are proved mines by the score. One hears of little workings here and there, where two or three men are chipping a way at a small vein and pulverizing the ore in an old-fashioned arrastra, in which mules drag heavy weights over a stone floor. Now and then the men come into town with a handful of gold bars.

"The trouble in Nayarit for years was that the state was in the grip of the great landed interests. There are almost no small land holdings and few of the larger ranches were properly worked.

"One great Spanish House and one German House—the word house is used as more truly descriptive of those organizations than the modern terms of company or firm—dominated the situation. They had the only money to land in Nayarit.

"They controlled the market. They ruled the state as a feudal principality. When the Southern Pacific built its lines into Tepic, in 1922, its labor gangs were searched twice a week by the majordomos of the great houses.

"'This man is ours,' the majordomos said. 'And this man, and that. What can this mean do? He is a carpenter? Very well; we will take him, too.'

"The railroad could not fight back. Its best men were sometimes taken in spite of every effort to protect them. Men to whom the road was glad to pay three pesos a day were returned to the houses for a wage of less than a peso. The men dared not resist. The whip has been used not so long ago on recalcitrant peons in Nayarit. The houses had their own way of bringing pressure on the courts.

"The houses have their justification, of course.

"'If we do not compel these Indians to work,' they say, 'they will not. Then no lands are tilled and no mines worked. Therefore we have made them obey.'

"Until they saw that they could no longer resist the pressure of modernity, the houses fought the coming of the railroad. Competition from outside was unwelcome to them. The nearer one got to the railroad, before it reached Tepic, the less one paid for the sugar made at Tepic and freighted out by mule.

"One understands that a ground fertile for the growth of any unhealthyism had been prepared. Even after the revolution came and peons were presumably free, they were held in bondage. They were compelled to pay a tribute to the houses—in eggs, or chickens, or work.

"It is true—one does not hear this from the peon—that they were always fed, even when free men went hungry, and that there were always roofs over their heads, and far better roofs than their friends owned. But they turned rebel against their masters when they had the chance.

"Some of the land was distributed among the peons and many songs of liberty were sung.

"When the Bolshevists were in control they played precisely the same sort of hob with the financial system that most of the other leaders have played since Diaz fell. It seemed so easy to get money merely by printing it. It was a popular tenet that white folks and bankers were alike enemies of Mexico.

"Between the revolutionistas and the bandidos and a few neighbors, almost all the live stock in the state was killed or stolen.

"The patient people lived on what they could raise in their fields and on what they could trade trinkets for. One could buy superb old gold and silver ornaments, magnificently worked by the artists of two centuries ago, for the price of the metal in a ragged paper currency. They attempted little else. What was the use of raising food for someone else to steal? That is still a living question in Mexico. The banks closed their doors.

"For months Tepic and Nayarit lived by a system of barter. Property values went down almost to nothing. The taxes were due and payable just as if the owners had been prosperous.

"When the owners could not pay, the state offered the properties for sale for cash. There being almost no cash in the country, the properties did not sell. Then they were offered at successive reductions, until the prices became absurd. These set the values for all the rest.

"Romanticists complain that with the coming of the railroad Tepic will be spoiled. Personally, I like my cities somewhat spoiled. I am more used to them that way."

Loosen Up That Cold With Musterole

Have Musterole handy when a cold starts. It has all of the advantages of grandmother's mustard plaster WITHOUT the blister. You just apply it with the fingers. First you feel a warm tingle as the healing ointment penetrates the pores, then comes a soothing, cooling sensation and quick relief.

Made of pure oil of mustard and other simple ingredients, Musterole is recommended by many nurses and doctors. Try Musterole for bronchitis, sore throat, stiff neck, pleurisy, rheumatism, lumbago, croup, asthma, neuralgia, congestion, pains and aches of the back or joints, sore muscles, sprains, bruises, chilblains, frosted feet, colds of the chest. It may prevent pneumonia and "flu."

To Mothers: Musterole is now made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Stories That Recall Others

Trouble on the Line.

Those who receive complaints regarding trouble on the line have to smile once in a while when they get a message like the following:

"Their line is all fell down. They are crossed into this line, so as whenever any one on their line it rings into our place. We can't stand this neuisance much longer."

Neither are Eggs, Shellfish

Three men walked into the restaurant and asked for clam chowder and broiled lobster. When the waiter suggested a vegetable, one of the young men said: "Sure, bring us shrimps."

Just Like a Woman

A five year old girl was being entertained by a family acquaintance with tales of the circus. The man poured forth stories of elephants, lions, tigers, kangaroos and bears until the maiden's eyes fairly popped from her head.

At last the excitement became so intense that the little girl leaped from his knee and ran across the room to a group of women.

"Say," she said breathlessly, "that man's telling me the truth, but I don't believe him!"

CHILD TRAINING

A QUESTION OF ENDURANCE.

By Ora A. Clement

"Yes, Janet is going to learn music," said Janet's mother, "even if it does worry me nearly to death to make her practice."

"Doesn't she like to practice?" asked the friendly neighbor, who was making a call.

"The first half of her hour she practices very well, but almost every day she begins crying after thirty minutes are over, and I frequently have to punish her to make her finish the hour.

"You don't mean to say that seven-year-old-baby practices for a steady hour each day?" The motherly eyes of the older woman were very bright as she asked the question.

"Indeed she does," the child's mother answered emphatically. "If there is one thing more than another that I cannot endure it is dilly-dallying about something. When a thing is begun, I want it finished before it is left."

The caller was silent for a moment and when she resumed the conversation it was to introduce another subject.

"Did you enjoy the lecture Prof Mozer gave before the club yesterday?" she queried.

"It was interesting, and he is a pleasing speaker, but I did wish he could have made his lecture shorter. After four o'clock, when I felt that I should be at home getting dinner started, I could not keep my attention on the lecture at all. My mind was somewhere else, and I could scarcely sit still."

"It was a long program, and I can imagine how you felt," the neighbor agreed. "It is very hard to force one's attention when the mind is busy elsewhere."

"Well, I simply can't do it." The younger woman was very positive. "When I have lost interest, I might just as well leave the meeting for all the good I get from what is said afterward. I don't remember a word of it."

The caller's brown eyes twinkled knowingly but kindly, as she said very gently, "I am sure that is more or less true of us all. Especially is it true of our little folks. Did you ever hear it said, Mrs. Martin, that a child of Janet's age cannot concentrate its attention for more than 20 minutes at one time? The average is less than that.

"It is not a child's fault that it cannot concentrate. It is Nature's way of insuring normal, all-round development. It is as natural as it is beautiful for children to go flitting happily from one thing to another like butterflies, and it is well to train the little ones to apply themselves to work and study by giving short tasks which can be finished within a half-hour. Longer tasks exhaust a child's power of concentration and use up nerve force. Furthermore, nothing is gained by continuing them after interest and attention are lost. But I was going to ask how you enjoyed Miss Love's solo."

So again the subject of discussion was shifted, and Janet and her lessons were not mentioned.

But the motherly neighbor was pleased the next day when, after a painstaking, if jerky, rendering, of Pixie Valse with some finger exercises as a finale, the Martin's piano practice quiet until Janet had had a long romp with the Jones twins, after cheerfully for thirty minutes more with no accompaniment of sobs.

"That is much better," she said to herself. "I only hope I did not offend Janet's mother."

Cranberries are the most profitable crop an acre in the United States. Farmers cultivating cranberries last year earned an average of $389 an acre.

LITTLE JACK RABBIT

DAVID CORY

Stopped By Mrs. Grouse.

Let me think a minute or three,
What Bobbie Redbreast told to me.
Oh yes, I remember now, he said
The bunny boy's nose was pinky-red.

Well, I guess it was, for Mr. North Wind had begun to blow again, just as Little Jack Rabbit hopped out of yesterday's story into this one, clip-party clip, on the way to the post office.

You see, Lady Love expected a letter from Cousin Cottontail, and was anxious to hear form that nice lady rabbit. Lady rabbits have much to do when, like the old woman who lived in a shoe, they have a house full of children. The little Cottontails wore shoes and stockings, dresses and trousers, just like you, little readers. And you know how busy it keeps mother mending holes.

Now, the post office was at least one thousand, five hundred and sixty-six hops from the dear Old Bramble Patch, and just as Little Jack Rabbit hopped off the nine hundredth, somebody shouted:

"Where are you going, you slippery boy,
Down to the village to buy a toy?"

"Who are you?" asked the little rabbit, stopping just like that to wiggle his pink nose. He thought he might find a scent in the wind, not a cent on the ground, you know, for little rabbits can tell who is who with their noses as well as with their eyes.

"Oh, don't be afraid," answered the voice. "I'm your friend," and there stood Mrs. Grouse high up on top of a snowdrift. Dear me, it's a wonder she didn't sink way in. She would have had it not been that her snowshoes kept her from breaking through the thin crust. Isn't it wonderful to think that kind Mother Nature had seen to it that a wide sort of fringe should grow out between her toes as the cold weather came on, giving her feet a wide, flat bottom, something like a duck's?

"Oh, I'm glad it's you and not a hungry fox," answered the bunny boy. "I'm on the way to the post office, and away he went and pretty soon he hopped up to the little window to ask the Pussy Cat post mistress for a letter.

"Yes, here's one for your mother," said the kind pussy post office lady, handing the bunny boy a pink envelope with a yellow stamp in the right hand corner. "Don't lose it."

"I'll be careful, never fear," he answered, and pushing it into his overcoat pocket, he hopped back to the dear Old Bramble Patch. And I'm glad to say nothing unpleasant happened on the way home, for I don't want pretty Lady Love to be worried. No indeed, not for a minute.

As soon as she had helped him off with his coat, she opened the letter and read:

"All the Cottontails are well,
And get up with the rising bell,
They dress themselves and never wait
To play until the clock strikes eight."

And in the next story you shall hear what happened after that.

SCOUT RUNNERS TO CARRY MESSAGE TO GOVERNOR

Twenty-four Norwich Boy Scouts, running half a mile each, will participate with Willimantic Scouts today (Saturday) in carrying a message from Mayor Waters of this city to Governor Templeton in Hartford as a part of the observance of Scout anniversary week. The run will start from the Norwich city hall at 7 o'clock in the morning and it is expected to conclude it in three or four hours. The Scout running rate is a mile in 12 minutes but they hope to better that.

The Norwich Scouts will carry the message as far as the Willimantic city hall from where it will be taken on its way by the Willimantic Scouts.

Samuel Sussman, No. 7, city hall to St. Patrick's church; Walter Haun, No. 20, to Backus hospital; John Dodge, No. 24, to Norwich Town Green; Franz Eyberse, No. 20, to Wightman's switch; Reginald Avery, No. 20, to the bend in the road near Yantic; Peter Manning, No. 20, to Yantic bridge; and Billy Tirrell, No. 13, J. Whalan, No. 1, Harold, Frink, No. 6, Arnaud LaPierre, No. 1, Harold Disco, No. 13, Harold Burke, No. 9, Charles Sargent, No. 6, Fred Fox, No. 1, Percy Browning, No. 9, Fred Benton, Jr., No. 13, Lloyd Jarvis, No. 6, and three Scouts from Troop 5 will continue the run.

CASE AGAINST CARIONE CONTINUED UNTIL MONDAY

In the city court Friday morning the case against Gaetano Carione, charged with deserting his children in New York, was continued until next Monday under bonds of $1,000 which were furnished. He is awaiting transfer to New York where his case will be heard. Carione was arrested in this city Thursday night. He claims the mother of the children, his first wife, is dead and that he is now married to a Norwich woman. He is a musician and has been living at No. 79 North street.

Harry W. Walton, Millbury, Mass., charged with breach of the peace, paid a fine of $10. E. Monahan, charged with intoxication was sent to the state farm for six months. A 62 year old Providence man who was before the court on an intoxication charge, was allowed to go on his promise to leave town.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

A number of informal valentine parties are being arranged for the coming week.

Mrs. Frank Corbin of Lincoln avenue spent several weeks in Windham recently, as the guest of Dr. and Mrs. F. E. Guild.

The Misses Lucas are to be hostesses at tea and will show English views, at their home, 94 Sachem street, this (Saturday) afternoon.

Mrs. John E. Vaughan of Bliss place has returned after passing a few days at the home of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Louis E. Stockwell, of Worcester.

GOSHEN

The news of the death of ex-President Wilson was received over the radio a little before noon Sunday. Over the wireless also was heard a sermon at the evening service at the Episcopal church in Pittsburgh, the subject was, Holiness Unto the Lord.

The ice storm did much damage here this week, breaking down the limbs of shade and fruit trees. The wires of the telephone line was wrecked. The worst damage done was on Goshen Hill the heavy ice made the small wires look like hawsers. The bright sun of Thursday and Friday made it seem like living in a world of crystals and diamonds.

The heavy coating of ice resulted in fine sledding across the fields.

MRS. LESLIE CARTER AT BROADWAY THEATER

Mrs. Leslie Carter, supported by a well chosen cast, appeared at the Broadway theater Friday evening in a dramatization of Olive Higgins Prouty's novel, Stella Dallas. Mrs Carter proved that she had lost none of her power as an emotional actress, deft and facile in every turn and intonation, and she was given curtain calls at every act and repeated curtain calls at the strong climax with which the play closed.

Margaret Hawkins as her daughter, Laurel, played the part with charm and sincerity, and Anne Morrison as Helen Morrison gave a pleasing interpretation of this character. Edward G. Morrison as Ed Munn, the dissipated friend of Stella, was very satisfactory while Guy Milham as the lover of Laurel and George W. Howard as the estranged husband of Stella was well cast.

The audience was small but made up for its lack in numbers by the favorable reception it gave to the well balanced company.

INDOOR PICNIC FOR BAPTIST WOMEN'S MEETING

An interesting meeting for the women and girls of the Central Baptist church was held Friday evening in the form of an indoor picnic at 5 o'clock with an attendance of over 150. Before the supper a pageant entitled Follow the Gleam was finely given by the World Wide Guild girls.

Miss Alif Stephens, president of the Women's League, presided and introduced the speaker of the evening, Miss Mary L. Howard, of Hartford, president of the Baptist women's organizations of the state, who gave an instructive address upon various lines of work.

A solo, I Know That My Redeemer Liveth, was given in fine voice by Mrs. Henry E. Church, with violin obligato by Miss Elizabeth Lane.

Those present included eleven from the First Baptist church, seven from the Greeneville church, six from Mt. Calvary and Grace churches, six from Jewett City and two from Preston City.

G. & E. COMMISSIONERS CONSIDERING EASTERN CONN. POWER CO. OFFER

A tentative proposition from the Eastern Connecticut Power Co., to sell electricity to the city of Norwich was under consideration at the meeting of the gas and electric commissioners on Friday evening at which James L. Case, president of the commission, presided.

It is the claim by the power company officials that several thousand dollars annually, possibly as much as $20,000, could be saved the city by buying electric power from the company and the details of the offer have been under discussion by General Manager Harold D. Larrabee of the Power Company and general manager C. W. Taggart of the city plant, whose statement was accepted by the commissioners Friday evening as a report of progress.

There are many complications involved in the proposition and new questions arose Friday night which are yet to be worked out so that both representatives of the interested parties agreed after the meeting that there was little definite that could be given out at the present time.

From the city's standpoint, one of the questions entering into any such arrangement would be what to do with the city electric plant in which an investment of $500,000 is represented. One of the questions under consideration is just how much this plant would need to be maintained for use in emergencies.

The whole proposition is still in a tentative form and is to be the subject of further investigation by the gas and electrical commissioners under whose instructions General Manager Taggart is to continue in consultation with general manager Larrabee.

Reports were made at the meeting of generally satisfactory conditions in the gas and electric service now being rendered by the city plant.

TELLS WHAT AMERICANS ARE DOING IN SYRIA

The February meeting of the missions department of the Woman's Federation of Park church was held in the parlors of the Osgood Memorial Parish House on Friday afternoon, at 5 o'clock. Mrs. F. W. Carey presided at a short business meeting at which the reports of the secretary and treasurer were read and approved.

Mrs. A. N. H. Vaughn, conducted the meeting of the missions department. She recommended that a box of clothing be sent to Rev. Mr. Bown in Plummer Idaho. The family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Bown and six children. It was voted to send them a box of clothing as soon as possible.

Mrs. Vaughn then introduced Miss Katherine Hurlbert of Groton who gave a very interesting talk on What Americans are Doing in Syria. Miss Hurlbert was a student at the Norwich Free Academy and since graduating from college has spent three years teaching in the American University in Beirut, Syria. She wore a Syrian costume.

There are 150 Americans teaching in the college. Many graduates go from the American colleges to teach there and many American nurses go out to work in the Beirut hospitals. The Y. W. C. A. work is well organized. By far the most important work is being done by the Near East Relief. Beirut is the largest city in Syria and many tourists go there. It is quite a shipping center—and the Standard Oil Co., has a plant there.

Miss Hurlbert spoke in an informal way of an interesting trip by automobile to Nagarette and Jerusalem and the Mount of Olives. Photographs taken by Miss Hurlbert were passed around. She has a few models of pottery, drinking vessels and a model showing the way wheat is ground. A rising vote of thanks was given for her interesting talk.

The devotional exercises were led by Miss Cogswell. Christ for the world we sing, was sung with Miss Annie Vaughn at the piano. After Scripture reading and prayer the meeting closed with the hymn, Fling Out the Banner.

Tea was served by Mrs. Geo. L. Ingalls, Mrs. Leonard P. Church and Miss Cogswell poured.

ORGANIZE DAUGHTERS OF AMERICA COUNCIL HERE

Buckingham Council, No. 14, Jr., O. U. A. M., met in regular session at Buckingham Memorial this week with F. B. Shappee presiding. Routine business was transacted. A large delegation was present from Roosevelt Council, No. 8, of New London. They were accompanied by members of the Daughters of America of New London. The visit of the Daughters of America was for the purpose of organizing a council of the D. of A., in Norwich. Mrs. Marsdale of New London is in charge of the local organization work.

Following the business session the entertainment committee, Howard E. Eddins, Ralph Chapman, William Chapman and Elmore Leseman provided a supper which was served under the direction of Mrs. Nellie Chapman. An address on Conditions of Our National Orphans' home was given by J. W. Wellington, national representative. There was also an interesting talk by H. B. Marshall, state vice councilor of New London. The meeting closed about 11.30 o'clock. The New London delegation made the trip in a specially chartered trolley car.

PARK CHURCH SCOUTS HOLD ENTERTAINMENT

Troop No. 12, Boy Scouts, of Park church entertained a good sized audience Friday evening at the Osgood Memorial parish house. A six reel moving picture, The Heart of a Hero, the story of Nathan Hale, was shown. The film featured Robert Warwick and Gail Kane. Ladd's Serenaders, a boy's orchestra, furnished the music.

After the moving picture members of the troop, under the direction of Scoutmaster Jonathan L. Johnson, gave a demonstration of scout work. A fifteen word message, written by a member of the audience, was sent by Morse code to the balcony, then sent by wigwag, to the stage where it was written on a blackboard. Frederick A. Benton, Jr., son of Scout Executive F. A. Benton, and assistant scoutmaster of the troop, gave a demonstration of instruction in signalling. There were also demonstrations of first aid and stretcher work, artificial respiration, knot tying, etc., by various members of the troop.

WOMAN'S GUILD ENTERTAINS UNITED CHURCH MEN

The Woman's Guild of the United Congregational church entertained Friday evening at the Community House, Church street, in honor of the Brotherhood and the men of the parish. The programme included the showing of a moving picture entitled The Movie Fans and an interesting talk by Jean Kieffer of the staff of the state tuberculosis sanatorium. Mr. Kieffer who has recently returned from a trip to Europe, spoke on his impressions of his trip abroad.

Refreshments of ice cream and cookies were served. The entertainment was in charge of the programme committee of the Guild, Miss Miriam Campbell, chairman.

FOUR NEW MEMBERS FOR DIVISION NO. 54, A. O. H.

The names of four applicants for membership were reported at the regular meeting of Ladies Auxiliary, Division No. 54, A. O. H., Wednesday evening. The auxiliary voted to hold a Valentine social and dance in A. O. H. Hall. An orchestra will furnish music for the dancing and each member was requested to invite a friend.

Will Help Boy Scouts

At the meeting of Sedgwick Woman's Relief Corps Friday afternoon at the Buckingham Memorial it was voted to assist the Boy Scouts in raising their budget and have a team to do the work headed by the Relief Corps president, Mrs. Clara Burke.

NORWICH AUTOMOBILE SHOW EXHIBITS MERITS OF CARS

Announcement was made Friday evening by William F. Bailey, chairman of the entertainment committee at the Norwich automobile show, being held this week at the armory that the entertainment programme at the show this (Saturday) evening will include duet numbers by Mrs. Mary Mathieu and Arthur Roy, the Willimantic singers who entertained at the auto show Wednesday evening. Friday afternoh and evening good sized crowds thronged the armory to inspect the large and attractive assortment of 1924 pleasure cars. There is a car for every pocketbook at the show, the prices ranging from $800 up to $4400.

While few actual sales have been reported as the direct result of the show, all the dealers state that the people of Norwich and vicinity are showing much interest in the 1924 cars. The show as a whole is as good—if not better—than any auto show given in the average New England city. Speaking of the value of the show to the buying public, one dealer said Friday night:

"A show of this kind means considerable to the man who is going to buy a new car this spring. He can come here and see before him in this hall practically every model and make of car offered by the dealers of Norwich. They are side by side and at every booth he will find either the dealer himself or one of his able assistants, ready and qualified to answer any questions regarding the machines he is exhibiting. The prospective buyer can compare the various makes and models of machines without going to the trouble of using up valuable time in visiting the dozen or more agencies. That is what we are here for; to save the prospective buyer's time and give him the chance to compare one car with another."

Herb Smith's orchestra again provided an excellent concert programme Thursday evening and in addition there were excellently rendered vocal selections by Mrs. Maude Crowe and Walter McNeely. The auto show will come to a close tonight about 10.30 and the indications are that the crowds this afternoon and evening will be the largest of the week.

SHANNON BUILDING FIRE WAS 15 YEARS AGO

It was recalled Friday night by Chief Howard L. Stanton that today (Saturday) is the fifteenth anniversary of the Shannon building fire and that February is the month in which all the biggest fires in the history of Norwich have taken place. Other notable February fires were Apollo hall in 1869 and the Hopkins & Allen factory in 1900.

The Shannon building fire broke out about 3 o'clock on a cold icy morning and in a few hours the building was a mass of smoking ruins. No lives were lost, but several tenants were cut off from escape down the stairways by the flames and were rescued by the firemen who ran up ladders from the aerial truck.

The flames spread to the Boston store building on Main street and to the Chelsea bank building on Shetucket street. The late J. B. Shannon, owner of the building, estimated his loss at the time of the fire at $150,000.

When February passes without a serious fire, the Norwich department always breathes a sigh of relief as this month seems to have been a critical one in Norwich fire history.

STATE POLICE RECOVERED $44,026 STOLEN PROPERTY

"Value of stolen property recovered" is the outstanding item on the report of the state police for the month of January; for with their work in uncovering a gang of automobile thieves the troopers were able to return property worth $44,026 to its owners. The troopers made 229 arrests during the month; 108 for violations of the motor vehicle laws and 36 for liquor law violations. Of the latter 12 were for manufacturing, 21 for illegal sale and three for transportation. Thirty-two of the motor vehicle violations were in the reckless driving classification and 14 were for driving overweight trucks. Eighty-five arrests were for miscellaneous offenses. The value of liquor seized was $7,171.

The state police patrolled 26,777 miles, examined 974 applicants for motor vehicle operators' licenses, inspected 176 motion picture theaters and made 630 inspections of weights and measures.

NORWICH EAGLES MAKE ENTERTAINMENT PLANS

Norwich Aerie, No. 367, F. O. E., held its regular business meeting in Eagles hall this week, Worthy President Edward J. Mullins in the chair. The following were named an entertainment committee to arrange plans for an initiation and entertainment to be held in the near future: David Farrell, chairman, Henry Congdon, George Nadolny, Joseph Podurgiel and Eugene Dumont.

At the weekly session of the pinochle tournament players Thursday evening the following were awarded prizes: First, George Nadolny; second, Maurice Freiberg; third, David Farrell and fourth, Thomas Nevins.

OWANECO CAMP FIRE MET WITH GUARDIAN

STORRS HENS RECOVERING FROM ZERO WEATHER EFFECTS

The hens at Storrs are holding steady. They are recovering from the effect of below zero temperatures. The total production for all pens in the fourteenth week was 2949 eggs or a yield of over 42 per cent. This is within one egg of the score for the preceding week. Fernside Farm's pen of Rhode Island Reds from Attleboro, Mass., that headed the list last week was again at the top with a score of 57 eggs. Hilltop Farm's pen of Leghorns from Suffield, Conn., was second best pen for the week with a yield of 51 eggs. Two pens of Leghorns entered by C. T. Darby of North Branch, N. J., and George B. Ferris of Grand Rapids, Mich., tied for third place, with 48 eggs each. White Rocks owned by Ameling Farms at Rolla, Mo., and White Wyandottes owned by W. E. Moran of New Haven, Conn., tied for fourth place with 47 eggs each.

The leading pen of Wyandottes and the leading pen of Leghorns maintained their same relative positions. In the Rhode Island Red class Sunset Poultry Farm at Amherst, Mass., and Forest H. Clickner of New Brunswick, N. J., who have been third and fourth respectively, swapped places. In the Plymouth Rock class Purdue University at Lafayette, Ind., that has held first place for the last ten weeks lost the ead to Ameling Farms at Rolla, Mo. Maurice E. Bride of Hartford, Conn., who has held fourth place among the Plymouth Rocks for the last fortnight has been sidetracked by Edward Stoughton of Wapping, Conn. Other changes in the lineup are sure to occur from time to time. A lot can happed in a laying contest in a compartively short time. For example, last year the winning pen was outdistance for forty weeks and finally finished first. As yet it is anybody's race.

HUSBAND LEFT HER AFTER MARRIAGE IN WILLIMANTIC

The divorce suit of Mabel B. Chase of 337 Washington street, Newton, Mass., against Charles A. Chase of Cleveland, a coal salesman, was taken under advisement in probate court at Dedham, Mass., Thursday, by Judge Hopkins. She testified she was married Jan. 6, 1923, in Willimantic, Conn., and that her husband left her the same evening and went to Boston. The next morning she met him in Boston, where they had dinner, and he left for Pennsylvania, and she had not seen him since. He sent her three checks, the last April 29.

AWARD FOR WIDOW FOR DEATH OF HER HUSBAND

An award of workmen's compensation at $15.33 per week for 312 weeks for Mrs. Christina Wilson of Waterford, widow of Andrew F. Wilson, has been made by Commissioner J. J. Donohue in her claim against the New London Ship & Engine Co. Mr. Wilson suffered severe burns while at work on Jan. 2, 1924, and died eight days later as a consequence. He left a widow and four children, aged 19, 15, 9 and 7 years.

NEWFOUNDLAND LIQUOR LAW FUND IRREGULARITIES

St. John's, N. F., Feb. 8.—A shortage described as "over $100,000 and under $200,000," was found in the accounts of the Newfoundland liquor control department after John Meaney retired as controller last July, Ernest Watson, who acted as special auditor for the government, testified today before the commission investigating charges of irregularities under the administration of Sir Richard Squires as premier.

Hector Melanis of Halifax, attorney and director of the British Empire Steel company and the Bank of Nova Scotia, testified that he came to St. Johns in May, 1920, with Donald McDougall, then president of the Nova Scotia Steel company, to represent the two steel companies in negotiating a new ore tax contract with the Newfoundland government. He contradicted statements made on the witness stand by James Miller, former accountant of the British Empire Steel company, that he had conferred with Miller about Squires' financial affairs, and that he had authorized Miller and bank officials to assist the then premier with money. He denied that he had offered Squires a campaign contribution of $5,000.

McDougall, the witness said, was

Squires and afterward reported that the premier was hard pressed for money for a by-election campaign. McDougall had the witness advance $4,000, and this furnished the contents of a "mysterious package" referred to by several witnesses. McInnis said that McDougall repaid him the money when they returned to Canada.

McInnis said he first learned last July of a payment of $46,000 to Squires made through Miller by the British Empire Steel company. He admitted that he could not explain this transaction and remarked that he thought it all very irregular."

SNOW STORM PROTECTS FORESTS FROM FIRE

Hartford, Feb. 8—The recent snowstorm in Connecticut was little less than a God-send to the owners of forests throughout the state. During the month of January, in which there are normally no forest fires, seventeen occurred this year, scattered through all parts of the state. The fires burned 176 1-2 acres, of which seventy six were wood land and fifty three and one half grass land.

Records in the officer of State Forester Austin F. Hawes shows the following fires during January. Stamford thirty acres (twenty wood land and twenty grass land; Ledyard, twenty acres grass land; Windham, five acres grass land; Putnam, seven acres grass land and three acres wood land; Thomaston three acres grass land and one acre wood land; Thompson, ten acres wood land and twelve acres grass land.

Ridgefield, one half acre grass land and fifteen acres woodland; Ansonia, nine acres wood land and one fourth acre grass land; North Haven, six acres wood land; East Lyme, one acre wood land; Essex, one fourth acre grass land and and one and a half acres wood land; Bristol, five acres grass land.

Twelve of the seventeen fires are said to have been traced by the wardens to sparks from locomotives.

PLANS TO EXTEND AID TO NORTHWESTERN BANKS

New York, Feb. 8—(By the A. P.)—Tangible plans on which financial and business interests of the east and west will unite to extend aid to northwestern banks will be laid next week at a meeting in Chicago, at which organization of a $10,000,000 service corporation, created by private capital, will be completed.

SQUIRRELS AND TOADSTOOLS

An English naturalist reports that squirrels are fond of fungoid plants. His observation of the animals in their natural haunts showed that they ate with evident relish the fly agaric, a mushroom deadly poisonous to man. It was noted, though, that they ate only the stalks of the plants, leaving the umbrella, or cap, untouched. This raises the question as to whether the factor of safety lies in the fact that the poisonous substance is concentrated in the rejected parts. If the latter be true, it reveals an interesting feature of the instinctive discrimination of these animals.—Scientific American.

Adoption of a uniform parking and no-parking signs in Connecticut is being considered by the executive board of the Connecticut State Police Association.

PANCHO VILLA OUTPOINTS MARKS IN FIFTEEN ROUNDS AT GARDEN

New York, Feb. 8. — Pancho Villa, world's flyweight champion, went out of his class tonight and decisively outpointed George Marks, California featherweight, in a fifteen round bout at Madison Square Garden. Villa's title was not at stake as Marks weighed 120 1-2 pounds, four and a half over the limit.

Villa was given the judges' decision. The little champion was on top of his challenger in every round, and, in the opinion of newspapermen at the ringside, won 14 of the 15 rounds, Marks having a slight edge in the fourteenth.

Marks bled from the nose and mouth; Villa was unmarked. Marks loses his weight forfeit of $1,250 due to his excessive weight.

In an eight-round semifinal, Sonny Smith of Brooklyn, won the verdict over Pete Sarmiento of Manila. In a four round preliminary, Marty Silvers of New York, won the judges' verdict over Eddie Mack of Stamford, Conn.

CAPTAIN OF BATTERY B DOES SOME INVESTIGATING

Captain William R. Dennison, commanding officer of Battery B, 182nd Field Artillery, has been investigating the differences between the team of his company and the Lebanon basketball team and his letter, which follows, is self-explanatory:

Sports Editor: The letter in Friday morning's paper regarding Lebanon's side of the story, their good temper, sportsmanship, etc., has been noted by me. After investigating the matter I learned that it was not written by the man whose name appeared at the bottom of the letter. In regards to the game and other matters in connection with it I learned that Manager Roderick was notified that there would be no game but the notification came so late that it was impossible for him to so inform his men as many of them had already left their places of employment. The team met at the armory at 6.30 o'clock as had been agreed upon at the drill on Monday evening. Mr. Goodrow claims to have called Lebanon and was told to come ahead just the same and the game would be played after the high school game.

The Battery team went to Lebanon but on their arrival were informed that there would be no game, the reason as I am informed being that the Lebanon team would receive no share of the gate receipts from the high school game and so refused to play. My company drills an hour and a half one night every week and after drills one or two games are played between the teams of the company. So far as I can see there was no good reason why the game at Lebanon should not have been played.

On the whole I feel that if there is a game between Lebanon and the Battery it should be played in the State armory at Norwich and that Lebanon has no right to expect the Battery to come to their floor before they come to Norwich.

Yours for the good of the game,
WILLIAM R. DENNISON,
Captain of Battery B.

TROPHY OFFERED FOR ALL-AMERICAN POLO PLAY

New York, Feb. 8. — The United States Polo association announced today it would offer a trophy for all-American competition, designed particularly to stimulate international interest in a championship polo series between the United States and Argentina.

Because America is confronted with the task of defending the historic Durlingham cup trophy against the challenge of Great Britain here next fall, the trophy will not be offered for competition this year but the association plans competition for it in 1925, probably in this country.

Last fall, the polo association suggested that competition for the Hurlingham cup, emblem of international supremacy for nearly two decades, be enlarged to include Argentina, but Britain rejected this proposal because of a desire that it remain exclusively the play between the two English-speaking nations. As a result, the association now plans to develop a championship series confined exclusively to the western hemisphere, but which, for the present at least, will amount to a rivalry only between the United States and Argentina, since they are the outstanding polo nations on this side.

Argentina flashed into polo prominence in 1922 when its crack quartet of riders won the American open championship after gaining laurels in England. The South American country has made rapid strides in developing the game and is expected to speedily accept the proposal for a new cup series.

DUNDEE SUFFERING FROM SEVERE IODINE BURNS

New York, Feb. 8.—Johnny Dundee, world's featherweight champion and American junior lightweight titleholder, is suffering from severe iodine burns on his arm and not in condition to fight for some weeks, according to a report of the state athletic commission's physicians who examined him today. This was done after the Panama boxing commission had asked an examination of Dundee's claim that he was not in condition to fulfill his contract to fight Joe Lombardo in the Canal zone on February 22. Dundee had postponed the match indefinitely just before his scheduled departure for Central America.

In a statement issued by Doctors W. H. Walker and Perry M. Lichtenstein, it was declared "Dundee is suffering severe burns at the left elbow extending down to about the middle of the left forearm and up about four inches above the elbow on the left arm, and also manifesting symptoms of absorption of iodine. It is our opinion that he is in no fit condition to engage in boxing contests and will not be for some time."

SIX MORE WORLD'S MARKS SET BY WOMEN SWIMMERS

Miami, Fla., Feb. 8.—Six new world's swimming records were established here today making the fourth successive day of the women's swimming meet in which world's marks have been made. Including today's events, eleven world's and two American records have been established by the eleven girl swimmers here.

Three world records fell in the first event, the relays. Gertrude Ederle, Doris O'Mara, Adelaide Lambert and Helen Wainwright each swimming 50 yards, cut a fifth of a second off the 200 yard relay by covering the distance in 1 minute 58 1-5 seconds. Aileen Riggin continued the relay to the 250 yard mark and established a record of 2:28 3-5, there. Helen Meaney, the sixth girl, swam an additional fifty yards and a new record was established at that distance of 2:59 3-5.

The 250 and 300 yard records were established for the first time as no marks had been recorded at those distances heretofore.

THINKS PLAINFIELD HAS THE BETTER TEAM

Sports Editor: In reply to Manager Murphy's statement in yesterday's edition of the Bulletin.

I think Mr. Murphy has misinterpreted my statement as to his aggregation's ability as a basketball team. Far be it from such. I will agree with Mr. Murphy, he has a wonderful basketball team, but in my candid opinion Plainfield's quintet is the better team and I think the showing our team made against the Recs of South Manchester proves it.

I will agree that the Plainfield team was defeated by Taftville early in the season, due no doubt to the team not being in condition, but since these defeats the team has been strengthened by the addition of Joe Belair as coach and player.

However, I will be pleased to meet Mr. Murphy in the near future at any place or time that he may suggest to determine the rightful claimant to championship of Eastern Connecticut.

"Y" MERMEN TO SWIM AGAINST WHALERS TONIGHT

The Y. M. C. A. swimming team is scheduled to meet the New London Y. M. C. A. swimmers in the local pool tonight and a lively contest is anticipated as the local team has been engaged in quite a little practice work during the past few weeks.

The Norwich team will be represented by John Fellows, Theodore Kundig, John Sayles, Phil McNamara, Grove Ely and Jack Hendricks.

The New London team is composed of all old time performers and expect to carry home a win.

The events are to be as follows: 4 man relay, fancy diving, 40 yards back stroke, 20 yard dash, 40 yard dash, plunge for distance, 60 Yards breast stroke, under water swim, 100 yards free style swim.

M'TIGUE MUST BOX TUNNEY TO GET LICENSE

New York, Feb. 8.—Mike McTigue, world's light heavyweight champion, will be granted a license in this state only on condition that he fulfill his contract to fight Gene Tunney, American 175-pound titleholder. This was one of the first official acts of the reorganized state athletic commission today when Tunney's claims for a title match were presented by his manager, Billy Gibson.

Tunney and McTigue were matched to fight last December at Madison Square Garden, but an injury to the latter cancelled the bout. Difficulties McTigue had with his former manager, Joe Jacobs, held up further arrangements but he now is understood to be willing to go through with the contest, possibly in March.

SHINNERS RELEASED TO TOLEDO UNDER OPTION

New York, Feb. 8.—Ralph Shinners, outfielder, obtained by the New York Giants from the Indianapolis club of the American association in 1921, was released today to the Toledo American association club under optional agreement. Shinners had previously been waived on by all major league teams.

Howard Baldwin, star pitcher bought from the Newark Internationals, who was reported to have been a holdout, has returned his signed contract. Baldwin, after a recent controversy, was awarded to the Giants by Commissioner Landis.

KID NORFOLK BEATS McCREADY FOR NEGRO TITLE

Boston, Feb. 8. — Kid Norfolk of New York, regained the title of negro light heavyweight champion here tonight when he was awarded the judges' decision at the end of a ten round bout with Battling McCready of Boston, holder of the title. Harder hitting by Norfolk in the last three rounds gave him his winning margin after seven rounds, featured chiefly by infighting.

"CHUCK" WIGGINS STARTS TO SERVE JAIL SENTENCE

Green Castle, Ind., Feb. 8.—Charles "Chuck" Wiggins, Indianapolis prize fighter, wanted here to serve a term of from two to five years in the state reformatory, came into court this afternoon and a few minutes later was on his way to Pendleton, to begin his sentence. He had been in Florida recently training for a boxing contest.

Wiggins was convicted here on a charge of escaping from the state penal farm, to which he had been sentenced for contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

ARMY-NAVY SECONDS BEAT BUDDIES FOR E. C. TITLE

In the title game between the Plainfield Buddies and the Army-Navy Seconds of Taftville at Plainfield on Friday evening for the junior title of Eastern Connecticut the Seconds won out by a score of 32 to 18. The game was fast from beginning to end and was watched with no little interest although it was the preliminary to the Plainfield-Providence game which Plainfield won, 43 to 10.

Siki scored knockdowns in the first, second and third rounds, all for the count of eight, and led throughout the remaining seven rounds. Siki weighed 177 pounds, and White was twenty pounds heavier.

FIRPO-WILLS BOUT TO BE HELD ON JULY 19TH

New York, Feb. 8.—The proposed Firpo-Wills boxing bout will be held July 19 either in Pennsylvania or Connecticut, it was announced tonight by a spokesman for the syndicate promoting the match. A stadium seating 125,000 will be built.

It was understood that Morrisville, Pa., and Hartford, Conn., were under consideration with selection favoring the former which is opposite Trenton, N. J., on the Delaware river, 55 miles from New York and 35 from Philadelphia, reached by two railroads and several excellent highways.

The spokesman said the syndicate would post a $50,000 guarantee within a few days with a local bank and that Firpo would deposit a forfeit of $25,000 in a Buenos Aires bank.

DOUBT AS TO BOUT BETWEEN LODGE AND FIRPO

Buenos Aires, Feb. 8.—Doubt is being expressed as to whether the fight between Luis Firpo and "Farmer" Lodge will take place on February 14. In sporting circles it is intimated that there is a possibility the bout will be forbidden by the newly created boxing commission on the ground that Lodge is not a fit antagonist for Firpo.

According to La Razon the members of the boxing commission at the present time are of the opinion a fight between the Argentine and American heavyweight would be unequal, judging by what they have seen of Lodge in his preparatory work. The newspaper asserts the commission will require Lodge to demonstrate his fitness and skill before granting a permit for the fight.

BOBBY JONES NOT TO GO ABROAD THIS YEAR

New York, Feb. 8.—Bobby Jones, open golf champion, will not compete abroad this year, and will petition for permission to enter the qualifying round of the American open in the western division at Oak Park, Ill., instead of the eastern division at Worcester, Mass., he announced today.

Jones recently received a degree from Harvard, completing one and a half years of study, and will go into business at Aaltnta.

Pittsburgh Takes Hockey Lead.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 8.—Pittsburgh took the lead in the western group of the United States amateur hockey league by defeating St. Paul here tonight, five to three. Pittsburgh has won eleven games and St. Paul eight, while each has lost four games. Pittsburgh and St. Paul meet again tomorrow night.

Boston Hockey Team Wins.

Boston, Feb. 8.—Boston Athletic association hockey team defeated Maple Athletic association, 1 to 0, in a U. S. Amateur Hockey league game here tonight. Harrington netted the only goal of the game after seven minutes of overtime play.

Ex-Office Boy Heads American Railway Express

In 1883 Robert E. M. Cowie entered the employ of the American Express Company as an office boy, sharpening pencils and dusting desks in the superintendent's office at Cleveland, Ohio. He has just been elected President of the American Railway Express Company, succeeding the late George C. Taylor. In the 40 years he had worked his way steadily up to the post of vice-president at the age of 59. He says he "has been married to the same girl for nearly 40 years" and that's one reason for his success; the others: "plenty of work, play some, and sleep a good deal."

TRYING TO PROVE JACKSON GOT $5,000 DURING SERIES

Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 8.—Efforts of the Chicago American league club to show that Joe Jackson received $5,000 for his share of the 1919 world series scandal after the fourth game of the series, and not after the final game, marked today's session of Jackson's $16,500 suit for back salary.

Jackson claims the money was received after the series whereas it is claimed he testified in a former trial that it was paid him in the earlier days of the series. Defense counsel sought today to establish that the money which Jackson claims was tendered for the unwarranted use of his name with gamblers in the series, was paid before the completion of the series, thus tending to show culpability.

BROWER ELECTED HEAD OF NEW YORK COMMISSION BEATING OUT MULDOON

New York, Feb. 8.—George E. Brower, Brooklyn lawyer, today became the dominating figure in the control of boxing in this state, the national center of fistic activity, when he defeated William Muldoon in a sharp contest for the chairmanship of the New York State Athletic commission.

Brower was elected over his veteran opponent by a vote of two to one. James Farley, new appointee from Rockland county and remaining member of the commission, was understood to have cast the deciding ballot in Brower's favor, with the rival candidates voting for themselves.

Brower's election came as a sensation to boxing circles, despite reports earlier in the week of a disagreement over the re-organization of the commission. The recent re-appointment of Muldoon, who had held the chairmanship prior to expiration of his old term the first of the year, was interpreted generally as paving the way for his return to supreme authority such as he exercised a year ago.

That Muldoon himself was anxious to regain the chairmanship was indicated by the determined effort he made to bring about his election in the face of opposition from his two colleagues. It was said he abruptly left the meeting last Tuesday when an attempt was made to re-organize with Brower at the head.

Outlining policies which his administration would pursue, Chairman Brower declared there would be no change in the determination to suspend ring champions who keep their titles in "cold storage" and side-step formidable challengers.

"I have certain ideas about certain fighters," he declared. "I don't think champions should keep their titles in 'cold storage'. People want to see them fight, but we, of the commission, are not matchmakers. We have attempted in the past to compel champions to defend their titles and when they have ignored our rulings, we have passed their titles on to others, but I believe this system creates a synthetic brand of champions unsatisfactory to the followers of the sport. Champions in the future, will be made to defend their titles within a reasonable period of time or face suspension."

SPORT WORLD BRIEFS

The West Virginia Intercollegiate Athletic Conference has been organized to supervise college athletics sports in the Panhandle State.

Jack Johnson, former world's heavyweight champion, who has been making his home in Montreal for some time, plans to open a boxing school in that city.

The Maryland Country Club of Baltimore will be host to this year's championship tournament of the Middle Atlantic Golf association, to be held June 18-20.

The Boston Americans were first called the "Red Sox" by John I. Taylor, the then owner of the club, who wanted to drop the other nicknames, "Puritans" and "Plymouth Rocks," which had been applied to the team.

Many years ago the sobriquet of "the Tigers" was bestowed upon the athletes of Princeton because of the orange and black stripes on their sweaters and stockings. So general has been the acceptance of the nickname that there has not been a building erected on the Princeton campus of late years without a tiger gargoyle or two.

H. L. Johnson, who tops the list of boys in national singles in tennis in the official ranking of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, and Malcom T. Hill, who ranks second in the list and who played with Johnson in the doubles, are first cousins.

TROOPS ORDERED TO HERRIN TO QUELL DISTURBANCE

Springfield, Ills., Feb. 8—Governor Small, through Adjutant-General Carlos E. Black tonight ordered troops to Herrin to quell a disturbance between the police of Herrin and the county officers of Williamson county.

IDENTITY OF SUNKEN SCHOONER ESTABLISHED

Newport R. I. Feb. 8—Identity of a schooner which sank off Cape Common Sense Point near Portsmouth, a week ago, was definitely established today through the filing of a lawsuit in district court here. The Brownell Fisheries company filed action for $500 against Lester and Ernest Coggshall, of Portsmouth, owners of the schooner Little Fred, and then served a writ of attachment on the sunken craft, leaving a keeper with the property.

As only parts of the vessel's masts were above water, the keeper remained in a small boat which was moored to the sticks.

After the schooner went down cases of liquor were washed ashore, and other cases have been recovered since by volunteer salvage corps.

ALASKA'S COAL LAW

Once an idea is imbedded in the mass mind of the public it persists in remaining in its position. That is why some people still may be heard reciting the charge that the natural resources of Alaska are being turned over to "big interests" at the expense of the nation.

Never more than a casual thought has been required to bring forth this wail in its true light, which approaches the ridiculous. Recent events connected with the development of the Alaskan coal fields should therefore emphasize facts so that they should never again be misinterpreted.

For years a misguided school of thought has bent its every effort in seeking to convince the nation that the "vast coal deposits of Alaska" were well on their way to total monopolization by the "lords of the coal mining industry."

Now comes the broadcasting of a fact long recognized by the mere rational of folk, which shows that business men will not undertake the development of Alaska's coal deposits under the provisions of the Federal Leasing Law, simply because such development under the conditions imposed would prove unprofitable.—From the Mining Congress Journal.

FEBRUARY SALE OF MEN'S SHIRTS
BEGINS SATURDAY MORNING

We're slipping over a big one, beginning Saturday Morning, and the man who appreciates good shirts, and also appreciates the value of money, will do well to consider this proposition. We have gathered together no odds and ends for this Sale—but we do have ready for you one of the largest showings of high grade shirts at low grade prices that you have ever seen in our Men's Shop.

COME IN SATURDAY AND LOOK THEM OVER

98c
Yes—emphatically yes—we can sell you some shirts that are absolutely right for this little bit of a price. They are made of fine Percale and Corded Madras—they are cut amply large—they are strongly and carefully made, and will fit you comfortably. All sizes are here, from 13½ to 17, and we will guarantee all colors to be fast. You can't beat it.

$1.95
High grade tailored shirts, all of them bearing the "Yorke" and "Fulton" brands, and made in the model factories of Glens Falls. We sell these same shirts regularly for $2.50, and we can honestly say that they are worth that. The material is a heavy silk stripe Madras in new patterns, and there is plenty of silk in the stripes, too. Sizes 13½ to 18½.

$1.19
Another most surprising value, for Fruit of the Loom Shirting makes up a large portion of the showing, and sturdy Repp and Woven Madras the balance. In style, pattern, and workmanship they are worthy of a more distinguished price than $1.19. One look at them and you will appreciate their value. Sizes 14 to 18½, and all colors are guaranteed fast.

$2.35
The principal material shown at this price is an imported English Broadcloth, fine and firm, in white, solid colors, and fancy designs. We also include some "Yorke" shirts in fine woven madras or fibre silk in colorings which are fast. Regular styles or with attached collar. A group of high-quality, $3.00 shirts in sizes 14 to 17.

$1.69
Not a shirt in this lot is worth less than $2.00, and many better values have been included. You will find such brands as "Yorke" and "Plymouth," both of which are guarantees of quality and workmanship. Broadcloths, Cords and Repps make up the assortment, and there are both regular and collar-attached styles shown. Sizes 13½ to 17.

$2.95
At this price we are going to sell you "Yorke" shirts—regular $4.00 shirts—tailored in the very best manner, and in every way just what the best shirts should be. Novelty weaves are shown, as are many Jacquard Silk stripes—all in guaranteed colorings. Sizes 14 to 17. In these shirts you will find every little detail perfect.

THE SOCIAL CORNER

SELFISHNESS IS THE GREAT DESTROYER OF HAPPINESS.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY.
The Chameleon.

Oft it has been my lot to mark
A proud, conceited, talking spark,
With eyes that hardly served at most
To guard their master 'gainst a post;
Yet round the world the blade has
To see whatever could be seen.
Drown ten times perter than before;
Whatever word you chance to drop,
The travell'd fool your mouth will stop;
"Sir, if my judgment you'll allow—
I've seen—and sure I ought to know"—
So begs you'd pay a due submission,
And acquiesce in his decision.

Two travellers of such a cast,
As o'er Arabia's wilds they pass'd,
And on their way in friendly chat,
Now talk'd of this, and then of that,
Discours'd awhile, 'mongst other matter,
Of the Chameleon's form and nature.

"A stranger animal," cries one,
"Sure never liv'd beneath the sun:
A lizard's body, lean and long,
A fish's head, a serpent's tongue,
Its feet with triple claw disjoin'd;
And what a length of tail behind!
How slow its pace! and then its hue—
Whoever saw so fine a blue?"

"Hold there," the other quick replies,
"'Tis green—I saw it with these eyes,
As late with open mouth it lay,
And warm'd it in the sunny ray;
Stretch'd at its ease the beast I view'd,
And saw it eat the air for food."

"I've seen it, Sir, as well as you,
And must again affirm it blue;
At leisure I the beast survey'd
Extended in the cooling shade."

"'Tis green, 'tis green, Sir, I assure ye"—
"Green!" cries the other, in a fury—
"Why, Sir—d'ye think I've lost my eyes!"
"'Twere no great loss," the friend replies,
"For if they always serve you thus,
You'll find 'em but of little use."

So high at last the contest rose,
From words they almost came to blows;
When luckily came by a third:
To him the question they referr'd;
And begg'd he'd tell 'em if he knew,
Whether the thing was green or blue.

"Sirs," cries the umpire, "cease your pother—
The creature's neither one nor t' other.
I caught the animal last night,
And view'd it o'er by candle light:
I mark'd it well—'twas black as jet—
You stare—but, Sirs, I've got it yet,
And can produce it."—"Pray, Sir, do:
I'll lay my life the thing is blue."
"And I'll be sworn that when you're
The reptile, you'll pronounce him green."

"Well then, at once to ease your doubt," Replies, the man, "I'll turn him out:
And when before your eyes I've set him,
If you don't find him black I'll eat him."

He said; then full before their sight
Produc'd the beast, and lo!—'twas white.
Both star'd—the man look'd wond'rous wise—
"My children," the Chameleon cries.
(Then first the creature found a tongue)
"You all are right, and all are wrong:
When next you talk of what you view,
Think others see as well as you:
Nor wonder if you find that none
Prefers your eye-sight to his own."
—Merrick.

RECIPES FOR FEBRUARY FESTIVITIES
Sweethearts

St. Valentine and Washington,
The honors now divide;
We've hearty welcome for them both
And sentiment beside.

With candied cherries, or cherries dried
In orange juice soaked well,
Mix nuts, salted and finely ground,
When taken from the shell,

For sandwich filling extra fine.
When spread on bread and butter thin,
Together pressed, and heart shape cut,
These "Valentines" will win.

Cherry Sauce a la Washington

First take a piece of cardboard thin,
And make a big cocked hat,
Thrice tied with bows red, white and blue
And cherries red at that.

Within the crown place a flat bowl
Heaped with vanilla cream,
And over all pour cherry sauce,
A Washingtonian dream.

To make this sauce the crowning touch
A can of cherries take
(The sour Morellos are the best
And spiciest flavor make).

Strain off the juice and boil it down,
With cup of sugar is the rule,
And when the syrup grows real thick,
Put cherries back in it to cook.

A flavoring of lemon juice
Or grape juice clear and sweet,
Adds delicacy and makes the dish
With interest replete.

SOCIAL CORNER EVENTS.

Feb. 12—Donation Day of Club No. 1, at Franklin Hall, Willimantic.

A JOLLY VALENTINE PARTY

Dear Corner Members: This is one of the jolliest of valentine parties and it requires neither great expense nor elaborate preparation. The plans are especially convenient because of their adaptability to varying ages.

Invitations are written on plain white note paper, simply decorated with a few red hearts cut from glazed paper or bought ready cut.

Before the guests arrive place the organ or piano across the corner of the room and have ready a small fishing rod and tackle or substitute a stick with a string and a bent pin to resemble one.

As soon as all have arrived let them take turns fishing in the "pond" in the corner. As each guest casts his line some one strikes a chord on the instrument, in the bass for the boys and treble for the girls, ostensibly to "call the fishes," but really to inform the assistant seated behind the instrument whether a boy or a girl holds the line. Every time the hook descends a slip of paper is fastened to it and when all have "caught a fish," the fishermen are told to open the catch and do whatever the fishes bid them.

Each slip contains directions to look in a certain place. It may say "look on the couch under the green pillow" and perhaps there will be another slip saying, "Look in the silver cup on the mantle." After each has searched in two or three places they are rewarded by finding a comic valentine—not a rude but a funny one. When all have been discovered and duly compared the company will probably enjoy playing valentine post office.

Each player is given the name of a prominent city and all form a circle with one in the middle. That one starts the game by saying, "I'm sending a valentine from Atlanta to Chicago—will it get there?" The two cities named exchange places if possible before the one in the middle can reach either place. The one left out of course, takes the center and calls the cities next time.

A beautiful, cheap and simple table decoration is made by arranging a heart-shaped centerpieces—of small evergreen twigs outlined with as many red candles as there are guests. Run red crepe paper ribbons from the candles to the places around the table, attach red paper hearts to the ribbon ends and write on each heart the name of a guest. These are the place cards. Turn out the lights in the room and light the candles just before the guests are summoned.

A delicious supper may consist of creamed potatoes, ham or chicken, sandwiches in heart shape, sliced beets, currants or other red jellies in heart mold. Cherry jello with whipped cream, small heart cakes with pink frosting, "red and white" ribbon layer cake, and coffee and cocoa. Of course not all these things are essential.

DELIAH DEAL'S LEAP YEAR PIE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: It is a long time since I have been able to do letter writing. For several weeks not any, as since every sick spell the first of December my head gets confused very easily, but I want you to all to count Deliah Deal as a member of the Corner and one of you, and lest you forget, I am going to tell you of a mishap I had Saturday. Am wondering if any of you have been "through the mill" as the old saying is and so can sympathize a little with me. Then I'll send you my recipe for date muffins and let this be my letter for this time. I want first to thank the sister for the pretty calendar received. This is the third year I have been remembered by someone of the Corner members and haven't yet even found out. Who it it one or are there three? Thanks, anyway. Well Saturday morning I thought if I made two pies, one rice, one mince, I would have enough to get over Sunday all right. Well they came out of the oven looking O. K. I took one in each hand and thought I'd put the rice one out on my back piazza to get cold for dinner and have the mince the next day. I got there all right, but alas! the door swung to, striking my arm. The mince pie fell and just before it reached the floor the pie took a leap from the plate (was it because it is leap year?) struck the floor the plate landing on top, and as a little nephew of mine used to say it was all smithereens. So there was nothing to do but get the small shovel and get busy, I said then, I'm sorry I didn't make an apple pie too but just think the plate wasn't broken. There was something to laugh over at least.

Date Muffins: 3 1-4 cups sifted pastry flour, 4 tablespoons of sugar, or less if you prefer, 3 table spoons butter or substitute, 1 cup sweet milk, 1 cup dates cut in small pieces, 3 teaspoons baking powder, 1 egg. Mix well, bake in cup cake tins, filling tins 2-3 full dropped from spoon. Eat hot although those left get eaten up when cold without any trouble. I like a little butter spread on mine, as I eat them.

I have enjoyed the Christmas cards many times since I received them, you were all so thoughtful to remember me. Thanks. I wish I could have met with you the 6th, but I thought of you many times that day. Trust Ma of Green Gables and Bug were not disappointed this time.

Yours with the best of good cheer for each one of the Social Corner

GREAT HELP TO SHUT-INS

Dear Sisters: I am so glad to see the Social Corner page filling up and also that there is one at least who remembers Prof. Turner. I want to say to her and any other sister who is shut in from the outside world that there is a shutin society which is a great help to such as cannot go about. Letters and gifts are exchanged and there is a monthly magazine published by this society. It helps shutins to be more patient and courageous. My sister belonged to this society for a number of years and received comfort and amusement to help pass the monotonous days which make up an invalid's life.

Little Sister: I think the things you do evenings are just right. We do not know the good our letters do for absent friends, to say nothing of the pleasure it gives us to receive an answer.

Aunt Jerusha: Why don't we hear from you?

Lovingly,

SISTER BARBAR

MAKING USE OF CLOTH FLOUR BAGS

Dear Editor and Members: First: I wish to acknowledge receipt of, and thank Corner member for the very pretty calendar.

How many of the sisters make use of cloth bags? I buy them of the baker for fifty cents a dozen, and after removing the stitching I shake well and wash. I then crowd them into a pail and soak them in kerosene for a day or two, and afterward boil in a strong soap solution. After they have lain on the grass for a week or more, the lettering will be almost removed, and they will be ready for use.

A great many people use them for dish towels. I do too, after first sowing a piece of turkey red into the corner so the "Handy Man" or any one who happens to be at the house may not have to ask that familiar question, "Is this the dish towel?" But as a dish towel it gets very little wear in my house as I always rinse my dishes and set them in the drainer on the back of the stove.

Flour bags are excellent for the baby's diapers after six months. If they are new they are too rough to be used before that age. For waists and pants they are invaluable as they are so strong they outwear several made of ordinary cotton cloth. For waists I make them double sewing three quarter inch tape over the shoulders to meet at the bottom under the arm, and a strip in the middle of the back. I sew buttons on this which relieves the greatest strain. For the baby who is just toddling around the house I have made some lined with part of a man's discarded woolen shirt. I also make summer night dresses of them.

I use them to make envelope chemises also with a coarse tatted or crocheted beading around the top with lingerie tape drawn through. They are quite good enough for everyday wear and the wet wash laundry.

The "Handy Man" is very hard on his summer union suits The sewed ones would last only a short time and after a few washings would look dull and gray. I thought what was good enough for me was good enough for him so, I bought a pattern and made some. Although he laughed at the Gold Medal slogan displayed on the back, he declared it was the first time he ever had them large enough.

I sew two together with a flat seam and fold lengthwise to cover my ironing board. I make slips for the mattresses and pillow cases and sheets for the children's beds.

I asked Kitty Lou's help once in decorating a bed room to which she replied with a personal letter. I will tell you how I did it. I painted the floor dark gray and the wood work a French grey. The wall paper that I put on was tapestry effect with grey leaves and old rose and blue flowers in very subdued shades.

The old fashioned "chest of drawers" and "four poster" I enameled gray also. The fireplace and hearthstone I painted dark red and the bedside stand and chairs I left in their original mahogany color.

Now here is where the flour-bags play their part. I made valances for the windows and bed and dyed them old rose and they came out a very pretty shade. The closet door refused to stay in its place so I took it away and now use it when I paper, to put my wall paper on. In its place I hung curtains made of the same material dyed old rose, and under the lace bureau scarf I put a piece I had left over.

"Samantha" pieced me a bed quilt with the blocks put together with old rose and lined it with old rose, and crocheted a large rug of dark gray and old rose bags.

Brass candlesticks on the mantel with old rose shades give the finishing touch to the room. I will say here, that mahogany adapts itself especially well to a color scheme of old rose and gray, and if it had been possible I would have left all of the furniture the same color.

I have an old fashioned Chinese ginger jar of gray and blue which I wish to make into an electric lamp to be used in a room with old blue and buff as the color scheme. Will some one who has had experience tell me how to go about it?

DOM PEDRO ON DECK AGAIN

Dear Editor, Social Corner Sisters and Friends: Well, here I am on deck once more—three months yesterday since I was out of my room. I think it is a surprise to all my friends, as well as myself. Also the doctor, for he told me the first week I was ill I would never be any better. It was a fight for my life and I won out. When your temperature reaches 102 you have a fighting chance. My feet have been very badly swollen, could not wear a man's slipper. The doctor is now trying to reduce the swelling, but just as soon as I stop taking his medicine it comes on again.

I have been up and around my room nearly two weeks, can make my bed and do a few little things to wait on myself. My strength comes back very slowly. I am feeling much better. My heart and breathing are quite good now, do not have any of those terrible dizzy and distress times with my breathing. There were times when the window had to be open for me to breath.

My friends have all been so good to me. I did not know I had so many good friends. They kept me in fruit and flowers. One of the ladies in the church gave me a lovely long kimona for a Christmas present. Calla Lily sent me a beautiful cyclamen from the Social Corner club. A friend in Hartford gave me another cyclamen which is still in bloom. Then I had a lovely primrose given me which is covered with great clusters of blooms. I also had quantities of cut flowers, carnations, roses and mixed flowers. Some of the time my room looked like a conservatory. I enjoyed them all when I was able.

I think I must have received a shower of cards for by actual count there were 110 Christmas and New Year's cards, and more than half as many letters of sympathy. I could not read my mail for some time. They told me since that there were 19 cards and letters in one mail. I thank all the sisters who sent me cards and calendars. I received two lovely calendars, but there was no name but Social Corner sister. I would like to make some return if I knew.

I am trying to fill my private secretary's place. She came one day every week to answer my mail. It is only a few days since I have tried to write with a pen. My hand is still shaky. I have been using a pencil. I did not think when I wrote my last letter for the Corner that I should ever live to write another, but I am still here. Evidently they had no place prepared for me, for I was not called as I expected to be.

I am pleased to see that the Corner page has at last overflowed and hope it will keep on with the good work. I am very glad to be able to write again even if it is shaky. I hope all the sisters who are ill are on the road to Wellville. I am wishing you a happy and prosperous year.

HELPED WRINKLE CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

Dear Editor of the Social Corner: It has been a long time since I have written a letter for the Social Corner but I will now try and do my bit with the rest. Sorry to hear of Katherine's and Amy's illness. Hope they will be able to be with us soon.

Also I want to thank Whirlwind for the nice birthday card.

Where is Rutherton? We don't hear from her.

April Flower 1230: I think I know who you are. Hope to see you at the next meeting.

As no one has spoken of Wrinkle's 80th birthday, I will try. She celebrated with a party, which her daughter-in-law gave in her honor.

Mary France and myself were the only Corner members there except Winkle. She was as spry as at sweet sixteen. There was a number of other ladies there to help us enjoy the social time, and the lovely sponge cake and ice cream.

I guess I have written enough for this time, so will ring off. Best wishes to all the Corner members.

BUSY BEE

A NEW FIRE LIGHTER

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Have you room for another member? I like to read all the letters. I wonder if any of the sisters ever tried lighting the fire with corn cobs soaked in kerosene. I keep a lard pail full. It only takes two or three to start the fire and there is no danger of setting yourself or house on fire. Hope some of the sisters' husbands will try it. Will take for my name.

WEE WIFIE

WHEN THEY MADE CHEESES AT HOME.

Dear Social Corner: It is cheerful and inspiring to see our page so well filled as it was last week.

I think the fall and early winter with the holidays are busy times for most housekeepers, and after Christmas and New Year are over, and the days begin to lengthen a little, we draw a long breath once more and find a chance for neglected duties.

As I read Connecticut Sue's inquiry about steeping and taking mullein tea I thought of the many times I have gathered mullein leaves and made a cough syrup of the tea with an equal amount of sugar added to it and cooked slowly till like a thin syrup. If cooked too long it will turn sugary. I don't claim it will cure a bad cough, but it is soothing and healing and certainly won't do any harm. I have my doubts about the tea curing tuberculosis, still it is a good thing to take and as I said previously it surely can't do any hurt to try. I cover the leaves either green or dry with cold water in a covered agate dish or kettle and keep them covered with water to about an inch or two depth and cook slowly about two hours, and I should take a small cup of the tea three times a day. I used to know a lady years ago who coughed some and occasionally had a slight hemorrhage and she used to take mullein tea. Whether that prevented T. B. or not I don't know. Anyway it never developed and she died of old age many years later.

I presume you will be deluged with recipes for cream pie and loaf and spice cake, but I will give you a cream pie recipe which I like very much.

Cricket: I can, as the saying is, "go you one better" on the cheesemaking question, for I have made quite a good many cheeses and enjoyed it, although it is a fussy and particular job and can't be hurried one little bit or you will spoil your cheese.

We had always made butter on the farm at home but one summer butter was a drug on the market, practically no sale, and as all the old cheese-making utensils of my ancestors were stored away in the attic and outbuildings I thought it would be a fine idea to make cheese. But who was to show me how! An old neighbor who knew volunteered to teach me, so I learned to make cheese. It takes time and patience from the time the milk is strained into the big cheese tub till the salted curd goes into the hoop and that is transferred to the press. Nobody makes cheese any more now, only at the factories where everything is measured and weighed and made exactly by line and rule as it were. In the old way it was mostly a matter of skill and judgment. Guesswork is as good as any, if you "guess right" and if we had good judgment and guessed right on the amount of sennet to "set" the milk and the exact heat of the whey or water, whichever you used to scald the curd, and were careful to handle the curd lightly when you broke it up into bits about the size of a grain of corn or less; so as not to let the cream run out, and didn't press it too hard when it first went into the press and a few other minor details, you would have a good cheese. But otherwise it might be tough and leathery.

It was something like a gambling game and rather fascinating, wondering just how it would turn out after you had done the best you could for it. And the job wasn't over with when the cheese came out of the press either for the cheeses had to be turned and rubbed all over with butter every day for weeks, and bound up with cheesecloth to keep from spreading and cracking as sick cheeses were very apt to do. When we made a sage cheese, we put the fresh sage leaves and some cut up corn leaves in a dish of water to soak over night and added it to the milk in the morning. The sage leaves are too gray to make the required green tinge. Then we made a plain white curd the next day and mixed the two together, making a marbled effect.

It takes a lot of milk to make a decent sized cheese, say one that would weigh eight or 10 pounds, and so people usually made what was called a two day cheese, putting the curd from one day's milk away in a cool place and the next day mixing the two together. I knew a family once who made tansy cheese, and were very fond of it—made in the same way as sage cheese, but it is too bitter and strong for most people I think. After being presented with a piece of it a year old, as they liked it, and sampling it at home, I agreed with a member of my family who said she didn't know why people wanted to waste good milk making anything like that. But tastes differ and now I think I have probably held forth long enough on a subject which will not be of very much interest unless to some of the older sisters who may have made cheeses or seen them made, and it will bring back memories of the past. So I will thank the unknown Social Corner member who has so kindly remembered us again with calendars. Mine is the prettiest I have ever had.

I wish you all a happy New Year if not too late.

Cream Pie: Two coffee cups of rich milk put in a double boiler. When hot add 1-2 cup sugar, the beaten yolks of 2 eggs, 2 small tablespoons cornstarch, stirred smooth in a little cold milk. Stir rapidly till smooth and thick. Add 1 teaspoon lemon extract after taking from the fire. Bake a good crust in a rather deep pie tin. When crust and cream are both cold, put them together and make a meringue by beating the whites of the 2 eggs stiff and adding 2 tablespoons sugar and a little lemon extract. Spread over the pie and brown in the oven a delicate golden brown.

With best wishes

CALENDAR RECALLED OTHER DAYS

Dear Editor of the Social Corner: Being a daughter of the Ross of New England which I left in 1879 for my present home I was much interested in The Bulletin's calendar the first of the year. It recalled scenes of my childhood. I remember the building as it was then. Where the market now is there was a drug store kept by Dr. Eaton or Fuller. The next store going up Franklin street was kept by Mr. Lidel a tallow. Then there was a cigar store and a meat market kept by Mr. Latter. It would take too long to mention all the places. I remember them all up Franklin St., and also on Main street as far as the old Universalist church site.

ONLY A LINK

A BLUE BIRD LINEN SHOWER.

Dear Social Corner Friends: What a lot of letters last Saturday! I told my father they would have to print an extra paper for us. I enjoyed them very much. I have wanted to write for a month, but we have been so upset here that I could not. I too, want to thank "somebody" for my very pretty calendar.

The bluebirds on it made me think of a bluebird linen shower we gave for a friend of mine. I wondered if it might help someone who wanted to give a shower for a friend. To begin with, I colored a lot of excelsior with bluing, for the nest to hold the gifts. Such a time as I had! Used all the bluing I had, also what Anne D. and Marie had, to get it a pretty blue. I had a round table in the center of which I put a large flat hatbox, lined with white paper, then covered the sides of it, and the table top, with the blue excelsior. One girl drew a bluebird and we cut a lot of them from blue cardboard. We hung them by one wing, with white baby ribbon We had one very large one suspended over the nest, some smaller ones hung around the room, and also all the way up the stairs. Each one present had a small one, with the date on the back, to wear. When my friend arrived we gave her one, and told her to "follow the bluebirds," and they led her upstairs to the nest of gifts. We enjoyed watching her open the packages, then came down stairs and played games, and had refreshments of punch, wafers and hard candies. We trimmed a new market basket with crepe paper, and a large blue bow on the handle, for her to carry the things home in. We had a lot of fun getting ready for it, as well as the evening itself. If anyone would like a pattern of the birds, I would be glad to send it.

ROBERTA.

GRATIFIED AT NUMBER OF LETTERS

Dear Social Corner Friends: I was glad to see so many nice letters on the Social Corner page last Saturday.

Twice Twenty: I am well acquainted with Dark Lantern neighborhood. You made no mistake when you said it was a lonesome country. You wrote at one time about the walk from the school house to the Fiske place and I decided you must have lived at the Tillinghast place at that time. Have just been told by some one that lived near you at that time that I was right.

No. my name hasn't been changed for several years. It isn't a very pretty one but I shall have to make it do. I wonder if when you asked that question you were thinking of some one that now lives near a long bridge?

My husband won't eat cream of wheat as a cereal. Don't know what would happen if I tried to serve it as butter.

Free Air: Glad to hear from you again.

Ma of Green Gables: I hope you are more comfortable. I hope this will be a lesson to you.

A Flower Lover: I have so many plants in the house every winter I hardly know where to put them, but cannot bear to leave them out doors to freeze. Have a crab cactus in bloom. It is very pretty.

Cady: Was glad to see your letter telling us when to post our letters if we wanted them in print the week they were written as I do.

Best wishes to all.

PEGGY ALDER.

BEDQUILT PATTERN

Dear Corner Sisters: Noticed Rural Aunty wanted some quilting patterns. I have two or three hundred designs I guess. My favorite one is the good luck. I have several different log cabins, trees, stars, alphabet, steps, baskets, flowers, monuments and fearfully fancy ones and extremely plain ones.

Rural Aunty: I am sending you a few sketches. Hope you see something you will like. I do not know the names of most of my patterns but some are "Jack in the box, Nine Square, A New England Favorite, Endless Stairs, and Flying Crow last I picked up lately.

Ma of Green Gables: I'm afraid instead of feeling bad for you, most of us are laughing at you.

Kitty Lou: I thank you for the little box and contents. I have placed them where I see them most of the day and if your ears ring or your nose itches you can know it is because I am thinking of you. Was glad to see that Mullien tea will help asthma. My little girl has had attacks of bronchial asthma. I used a preparation of whole flaxseed steeped in lemon and sugar and if taken in time it helps. This is also good for ordinary colds. I use though sometimes as a last resort, needed to call in the doctor, a teaspoonful of castor oil. That generally relieves when nothing else will.

Last but not least I thank our editor for putting my name up in the left hand corner. I wanted a dollar for charitable purposes and lo—I have it!

DON'T WORRY

APPRECIATES GIFTS AND CARDS

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: I feel that it is about time for me to add my bit to the Social Corner page, as I see the other sisters have got busy since the holidays. In the first place I want to thank the Social Corner member for the lovely calendar which I certainly prize. It is a daily reminder of friends and pleasant hours spent with Club No. 1. I was away from home during the holidays spending Thanksgiving with a daughter in Hartford, Christmas with a son in Bristol and then back again to Hartford for New Year's. I enjoyed my visits very much and found on my return home many cards and gifts, many of them coming from Social Corner members, for which I send thanks. All were lovely. In talking with Belinda lately over the phone, she told me how she appreciated being so kindly remembered. She had received many cards which she had enjoyed but was not able yet to use her right hand to thank those who sent them. She certainly was badly burned. Let us hope she will soon be able to write, as I am sure all would like to hear from her.

Well, as there are still eleven months in this year, I do not think it too late to wish all a very happy new year.

LAVENDER

BRIGHTEN UP YOUR HOME

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Liquid wax is an ideal furniture polish. It imparts a hard dry oil-less finish that won't gather dust and lint, or show fingermarks. Takes all drudgery from dusting. Floors with worn places should be polished with prepared wax. It does not show heel marks. For polishing woodwork liquid wax is just the thing. It covers up mars and small surface scratches and prevents checking. It lengthens the life of varnish Your linoleum will last longer and look better. Use liquid polish for tables and chairs and if you polish it occasionally with wax it prevents cracking and blistering, brings out the pattern and color, protects linoleum from wear and makes cleaning easy. Never wash linoleum with a wet mop. Use a wax mop it brightens better.

CALLA LILY: Have sent you my address.

Thanks to Social Corner member for the pretty calendar. Thanks to the sisters who sent me cards.

Twice Twenty and Jennie: Did not see you at our last meeting.

Crimson Rambler: Will see you later.

PAULA

RESPONDS TO "A READER'S REQUEST

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: In response to the request of "A Reader" in the Social Corner I send the verses of "The Chameleon", written by James Merrick, an English clergyman, born 1720, died 1768. These verses can be found in Hillard's Fifth Reader.

WINDHAM BLUE BELL

HULDY'S TRIP TO FLORIDA

Dear Social Corner Friends: I am am sure that you will be glad to know that my brother is gaining, although not out of the hospital yet.

I will take time now, to tell you more about our trip to Florida.

First, I want to thank "a Social Corner member" for the lovely little blue bird calendar. I appreciated the remembrance and I also wish to thank the Corner friendes for their nice messages of sympathy during my brother's illness.

As we journeyed farther south we had hard work to dodge the cattle and hogs which run loose in the roads. The latter are very peculiar looking, some red and black, black and white and some all red and some belted like the belted cows which we have in the north. The roads are almost brick red from the red clay soil.

We passed through Cheraw which was a trading post with the Indians in 1756.

We stayed one night at Camden, S. C., at an inn which had grounds laid out like a park and there we had our first idea of what the south really looked like, for the grounds were filled with all kinds of lovely tropical plants in bloom, and there were many beautiful birds flitting about.

The next day we went to Savannah. We passed many acres of peach trees for which Georgia is noted. We went to see an old plantation, which before the war, was the largest one in the south and had many slaves. Many of the cabins still remain and are inhabited by some of the descendents of the slaves who work where they can.

We crossed on the ferry at Kingland over the beautiful St. Mary's river and then drove to Jacksonville where we remained two days.

We were taken up the St. John's river, which is bordered on each side with beautiful residences and large orange groves.

We visited one grove, and saw all kinds of fruit which grew in the south

On one side of the river is an immense plant where turpentine is made and shipped in great quantities.

We visited St. Augustine, the oldest city in this country. Of course you know the history, of how in 1513 Juan Ponce de Leon in search for the fountain of youth, landed at a little Indian village, called Seloce, and later, Menendes, settled there with over 1,000 people and called it St. Augustine.

Those were troublous times and in 1586, Fort Marion was begun but was not finished until 1756.

It still remains and is very interesting with the guard rooms, dungeons, chapel and the watch tower and moat. We saw the oldest house which was the home of the monks who came with Menendes and now used as a museum. We passed through the old city gates, visited the old cathedral and slave market, and later we were taken to the big ostrich and alligator farm. One of the alligators was nine hundred years old and enormous.

Our next stop was at Daytona and it has the finest beach I ever saw. At low tide it is several hundred feet wide and smooth as a floor so that autos can drive full speed over it.

As we passed through Orlando I saw the fine sanatorium where Mrs. Robinson one of our Corner members is, and would liked to have called there but our party did not stop, so of course we could not do so.

We were very glad to reach Lakeland and make it our home for awhile. It is a very pretty city, with many lakes in and about it.

It seems good to see flowers in bloom and fruit and vegetable growing in great plenty in the winter instead of the snow and ice in the north.

HULDY

A HANDY TABLE OF PROPORTIONS

Dear Sisters: Several have wished to know how much flour to put in for cookies when the recipe says "flour to roll," so I am sending a table of proportions which may help.

Bread—One measure of liquid to three measures of flour.

Batter of all kinds require one scant quart of milk to one quart of flour.

Flour—One quart requires one pint or two cups of butter or lard mixed for pastry. If you don't care for it so rich, one cup lard to three cups of flour.

One quart of flour requires one heaping tablespoon of butter for biscuit.

One quart of flour requires one level teaspoon of salt. One quart of flour requires three teaspoons of baking powder.

For gems and muffins one quart of flour requires one quart of milk, etc.

Drop Cookies—One cup of molasses and one-half cup of wetting takes 3-4 cups flour and so on.

Rolled Cookies (molasses) take 3 3-4 cups flour to 1 cup molasses and 1-2 cup wetting.

Sugar Cookies—One-half cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 1-4 cup milk, 3 eggs, 3 1-2 cups flour. If one egg is used 3 3-4 cups flour.

For doughnuts many recipes will say flour to roll not too stiff. For doughnuts with 1 cup sweet milk and 2 eggs takes 3 1-2 cups flour. As a usual thing doughnuts do not have the shortening that cookies do, so naturally they do not require so much flour. One table spoon butter for 3 1-2 cups flour.

Flour for sour milk for doughnuts—One pint of flour to one-half pint of milk, one-half teaspoon butter.

Molasses—One cup requires 1 teaspoon soda.

Meal—One teaspoon of salt to one pound.

Salt, pepper, soda, spice, one spoonful is a level spoon, one-half spoon is measured by dividing through the center.

Sour milk—One teaspoon of soda to one half pint of sour milk.

A speck I use with what can be placed in 1-4 inch surface.

CLUB NO. 1s DONATION DAY FEBRUARY 13

Dear Social Corner Folks: Club No. 1's next meeting will be on February thirteenth, at our old meeting place Franklin hall.

Come one and all as it is Donation day, and your donation will be appreciated.

It is well to call to mind to our new members that this day was started by Tidy Addley, in the early meetings, and we bless her memory by keeping up the custom of bring a donation.

You will also bring a valentine with you, on this date.

Lest you forget, remember you will also need to bring, your plate, knife, fork and spoon and food for the repast.

Yours for a good time,

NEIGHBOR EVEREADY

TEACH CHILDREN TO BE KIND AND USEFUL

Dear Editor and Corner Sisters: The letters of the sisters are very interesting and helpful. It's nice to have so many write and keep the page well filled. Some have written of the value of having children earn money and pay them for doing things around the home, learn to use money and the value of it. I would like to suggest also the value of letting them have some things to do regularly without expecting pay. They owe the parents or others much and should do little things for neighbors or those in need or trouble for the love of helping and doing kindnesses. A neighbor came in one morning and in the conversation remarked that it seemed the tendency of young folks and children to bother the elderly folks. Not always, of course, but many times and this to some severe young men and women. I think it is nice to have the young respect the elderly, not only in our own homes but wherever one meets them and not think of their little desires as some whim. They were patient with our whims when we were small. How nice to give a present once in a while, such as a Bible with large print to one whose eyes are not as keen as once and who perhaps many times would like to read God's ponder in its pages if the print was suited to their eyes. They give might write in the book, "With love to dear Grandma," or have both a message when one's time does not pass so quickly as in the busy days of the past. In many little ways kindness may be shown which not only pleases the dear one but gives honor and nobility to the one who does it.

Then, too, I think it is nice to teach the children to be kind to the forty clad wherever they are met. A little incident written in song beautifully illustrates this. A group of children one day were having much fun over a poor old lady who was dressed poorly and old fashioned and was feebly trying to make way across the busy street. One of the little girls' mothers happened to notice what they were doing, called her girl to her and gently took her hand and said kindly:

"Once upon a time, dear, she was just like you,
When she was a baby she was happy too.
Now she's old and feeble she has passed her prime,
She was some one's darling, once upon a time."

So each was some one's darling once and should be treated with kindness and respect. Also the foreigners that come to our shores need the example of truth, kindness and respect.

Aunt Jerusha: Write often, your letters are interesting and it seems good to hear from the older members, not in age but who joined the Corner among the first.

Let us hear from all the original members that are able to write and I, too, would like to have the birthdays noted again, as I failed to jot them down. So if the sisters will be patient and give them again I will get on to my job and put them somewhere for safe keeping.

Triple E: I would love to hear from you once more. How are you and all your folks? I think of you often.

My congratulations to those who are in line for such and my sympathy to all who have sorrow and who are sick.

Best wishes to all.

SPRY BIRD. (Sept. 24.)

CANNOT GET ALONG WITHOUT NEW FRIENDS.

Dear Sisters: In looking over the Social Corner I do not think it needs my help. It being such a disagreeable day with snow, rain and sleet outside it seems a good time to write, make rugs, piece bedquilts, do sewing or otherwise amuse one's self. I see one member calls for bedquilt patterns. I have some which I will send for the asking of them.

Another speaks of entertaining a girlhood friend. How nice it is to have a chat with an "old friend" who seems a little nearer; also to meet with new friends for with so many changes I am afraid if we did not make some new ones, we should be left with very few. It is nice to be remembered and I also send thanks for the pretty calendar received.

I was pleased to see that the weather had been such that Mag. Eve ink had not frozen up and as she had written thought it time for "March Breeze.

Ma of Greens Gables: Sorry about your accident. But—

If times are hard and you feel blue,
Think of others worrying too,
Just because your trials may be many,
Don't think the rest of us haven't any.

Wonder if the member who spoke of the Willimantic school was a "Welch scholar."

BREEZE (March 12).

WHAT KILLS LITTLE FLIES ON PLANTS?

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Just a few lines to help keep the shunk in his hole, as one sister wrote, but think by the looks of the letters he will get a slim chance to get back.

What a fine morning to take a snapshot of the icy trees and shrubs if the sun only favors us? It is a pleasure to read so many nice letters and nearly as good as going to a meeting. If the sister that was looking for bedquilt patterns will look in the January Farm Journal she will see seven nice patterns. I am going to try Fig. 2 and Fig. 6.

I would like to have some sister tell me what to do when little flies get on the window flower box.

Frances Adel: Your bran muffins are fine.

I think it makes the letters more interesting, where one has the names, to look back and see who's who but some forget to write their birthdays in my book. I am looking forward to getting more names. I will tune off to leave the space for more interesting writers.

Yours for the Corner,

EFFIE M. (Feb. 16).

WANTS GOOD FRUIT CAKE RECIPE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I have been trying to write for the past three weeks so here I am. What lovely weather we're having! It seems like spring instead of winter. I only hope we will have nice weather when we ought to have it. It will probably be cold and windy then. I don't suppose we ought to find fault with the weather, but take it as it comes. This kind of weather makes us feel like house-cleaning time.

Blue Bird: I think it about time for you to sing.

Nixie: We never hear from you lately.

I wish some member would send in a good fruit cake recipe. I try out a good many Social Corner recipes and I know they are good.

Ma of Green Gables: What do you say? Hope you are feeling better Ma. Take care of yourself. Best wishes to the Social Corner.

MARGARET

SUGGESTIONS BY WHIRLWIND.

Dear Social Corner Sisters: What a dreary day for the Corner meeting, and so icy! I fear there will be many bumps today. I am so disappointed, was expecting to attend the meeting today with my "side kick" (Foxglove) but the weather being against us we will have to be content to think what the other sisters who are more fortunate are doing. It is a long drive from Southington to Norwich and one needs fairly decent weather. The old saying is that ice storms in February make a fruitful year. Let's hope they do. We will try for the Willimantic meeting next week.

Mayfayre: Think your idea of the sale of fancy articles, good. Here is another suggestion: Did you ever try a Jersey auction? It is lots of fun and brings in more than one would think. I think it would take as it is

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week a call was received in Norwich for nurses to aid in the small pox epidemic which was raging in South Windham that week. There were over 50 cases of the dread disease reported from the vicinity of South Windham and in some cases whole families were ill with no one to care for them. The same week there was a public inspection of the then new court house which was brilliantly illuminated inside and out for the occasion.

Interesting extracts from the files of the Bulletin of the first week in February, 1874, follow:

Monday, Feb, 2, 1847—Monday evening a full hearing will be had before the common council, by appointment on the policy of making assessments, for the special benefits for paying and macadamising several of the streets. Geo. Pratt, city engineer, will present the views of the city attorney in favor of assessments. Jeremiah Halsey will appear in behalf of property owners who are opposed thereto.

The Occum ball Friday night was an exceedingly fine entertainment. The Occum band dispensed pleasant music and Gurdon Cady called for the coupes in his unrivalled manner. Lewis furnished refreshments of extra quality.

The D. R. Holmes Engine company, Greeneville, gave another of their pleasant socials Saturday night. Miles band furnished the usual fine time for the dancers.

Tuesday, Feb, 3, 1874—Charles J. Carew has resigned his position as secretary and treasurer of the Wauregan Steam Fire Engine company.

A driving snow storm set in about seven o'clock last evening and at last accounts the promise of sleighing was exceedingly brilliant.

The tenth masquerade party of the Wauregan Hook and Ladder company takes place Tuesday evening, February 10th. Tubb's brass and quadrille bands will furnish the music and Gurdon Cady will prompt. The tickets are placed within the reach of all, fifty cents admitting gentleman and lady.

Some of the schools were dismissed early yesterday morning, as the rooms were too cold for the scholars to remain.

Wednesday, Fed. 4, 1874—The horse cars were enabled to run yesterday by a greatly increased supply of motive power. The Norwich Town car came down in the morning with six horses attached.

The S. S. club gave their regular social last evening at Franklin hall. As usual a very pleasant time was enjoyed.

Last evening about 11 o'clock fire was discovered in the woodshed in the rear of the brick house of Amasa Hall on Franklin street, near Greve The alarm was quickly given and the Norwich Four came promptly to the rescue and a stream of water was turned on the blazing pile. The other companies were soon on the ground but their aid was unnecessary. The building is supposed to have been set on fire as the door was left open and a stranger was seen coming from that direction.

Thursday, Feb, 5, 1874—A dispatch was received in this city last evening from So. Windham stating there were over 50 cases of small pox in that vicinity. Whole families are sick and no one to take care of them. The dispatch asks for nurses who have had that disease and are willing to go and help in this their time of need.

Many four horse sleighs, having other smaller ones in tow, and all loaded with admirers of "the beautiful snow" came in from neighboring villages yesterday.

Boys were skating on the thin ice of the Shetucket yesterday; in many cases venturing within a few feet of the open water where the current runs with the speed of a mill race.

Friday, Feb. 6, 1874—Joseph W. Gilbert of Smith and Gilbert was yesterday promoted from the position of quartermaster sergeant to that of paymaster for the Third Regiment.

At the Boston Brokers' Board yesterday Norwich and Worcester stock sold for 127 1-2 and subsequently declined to 127.

In accordance with a notice to that effect the doors of the court house were thrown open to the public last evening during the hours from 7 to 10, for the inspection of this gem of our city. The whole building from the lowest basement, to the town clock was brilliantly lighted and with the throng pouring up and down the front steps it flashed like a splendid vision upon the beholder approaching from Main street.

Yesterday being the 70th birthday of our esteemed fellow townsman, Owen Stead, a large number of relatives and friends assembled at his residence in Greeneville, to celebrate the event and rejoice with him. About 40 persons sat down to his hospitable board. Mr. Stead is an old resident of Norwich, having resided here since 1824.

Saturday, Feb. 7, 1874—A good many surmises have been made as to the amount of gas used at the illumination and its cost, some figuring it as high as $208. From the testimony of its various meters we give its full amount which was 4,400 feet, making its expense about $13.20. (The "illumination" refers to the opening of the court house for public inspection.)

The Norwich Fours held one of their fine socials at their engine house last evening. This company give some of the pleasantest parties of the season and the one last evening rivaled all their past entertainments.

Yesterday was the coldest day of the winter. The thermometer marked ten degrees below zero at six in the morning at Norwich Town.

The West Side Baptist church took about $100 in their two nights entertainment.

SUFFERED SINCE YOUNG GIRL

Words Failed to Express Benefit Received from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Greenville, Texas. — "Words can not express how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. Every month I would have cramps and headache, and I felt like I was freezing to death. I suffered in this way from the time I was a young girl, and all the doctors said was 'operation.' For months I had a tired, sleepy feeling all day, and when night would come I would be so nervous I couldn't stay in bed. Our druggist recommended the Vegetable Compound to my husband and he bought four bottles. I have taken every one and I think I have a right to praise your medicine."—Mrs. J. B. HOLLEMAN, 2214 E. Marshal St., Greenville, Texas.

For fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been used by women from girlhood through middle age.

It is a dependable medicine for troubles common to women. Such symptoms as Mrs. Holleman had are relieved by correcting the cause of the trouble. For sale by druggists everywhere.

SOCIAL CORNER

a little different and one is looking for changes. Then there is another, a snipping party, it is called. Each member furnishes one or two articles and they are tied on a string strung across the hall, the snipper is blinded and given a pair of scissors to snip. What they snip off is theirs. Five cents a snip will bring in quite a few nickles.

I see by Anna Mell's letter there were between 80 and 85 present at the December meeting. What a crowd for an auction! I will bring a prize if someone will bring one. Think three will be enough. That will give more than one a chance. One wants an auctioneer and some collectors.

Jack's Wife: Balsam Fir would like to have you write her. Think she has a present for you.

Twice Twenty: Get Mr. Twice Twenty a new pair of glasses or see that he wears his old ones at all times. Some joke on him, eh; yes? I see where you as well as Foxglove and myself stayed at home today. I presume the Club No. 1 meeting next Wednesday in Franklin hall the 13th, will suit. Will try for that weather permitting.

Neighbor Eveready: Accept my heartiest congratulations.

Rose of Sharon: Your penname (the last part) is very familiar to me as I was born in Sharon, Conn.

Dem Pedro: So glad to hear you are improving. Hope you will be able to attend some of the meetings when the weather gets good and warm.

Foxglove: I am so very sorry you could not attend the Social Corner meeting today. Don't cry little girl there are more meetings; one next week. S. C. Elizabeth is inconsolable. She is so disappointed.

I trust the Social Corner sisters will think over the Jersey auction and try it out. Am sure you will all like it. Just ask Foxglove, she knows. There is always some entertainment and with the reading and sinking think it can be worked in nicely.

By the way, does it not look fine to see the page all full and running over.

Cretia: Glad to hear you won a prize.

WHIRLWIND.

REGRETS BY DELIGHT

Social Corner Members: Regret I could not attend the meeting at the Buckingham Memorial February 6. I planned to but was afraid of the ice. All of the members who have met me know that I am no featherweight. If I should fall I would strike good and solid. Perhaps the weather will be better next time.

Bob White: Was glad to see a letter from you. Haven't met you for a long time.

Was glad to see a letter from Eliza Jane.

The first indoor social I went to was at her house and I had a lovely time.

Deliah Deal: Hope you are able to get around. The first chance I have shall stop and see you.

With best wishes.

DELIGHT.

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER

Social Corner Members: Rather late to send thanks for the Blue Bird calendar that a Social Corner Member sent to me New Years. A gift should always be acknowledged soon as received but all the excuse I have to offer is not neglect.

PICES

APPRECIATES FEATURES

Fellow Cornerites: I am sure you will agree with me that I should change my pen name for I have been a poor "Neighbor" since coming into your midst. I will try and furnish my bit of cheer in the future if only to show The Bulletin that I appreciate some of the special features of the paper as no doubt others do.

The brief Washington items are very helpful to those with limited time for reading and Fifty Years Ago in Norwich recalls many familiar names and forgotten incidents, as I was a young girl in Norwich at that time.

Kitty Lou: I have not heard your voice over the phone lately.

Rhody Louise: Do you do all your letter writing through The Bulletin?

I want to add two fine recipes to my already long letter:

Waldorf Club Sandwich: Butter six half slices of bread and cover with grated cheese. Place in a deep pie plate. Cover with thin strips of bacon and pour over all one egg and speck of red pepper in one cup of milk. Bake in quick oven. When bacon is crisp it is ready to serve.

Fine for lunch or tea.

Apricot Whip: Drain one can apricots, beat with white of egg and tablespoon of powdered sugar, serve in sherbet glasses with whipped cream and a cherry on top.

NEIGHBOR.

GREETINGS FROM SCOTTIE

Dear Editor and Social Sisters: Just a few words of thanks for my pretty calendar. As I look at it the thought comes to me, Who is it that is so thoughtful of so many members? He or she must know something about me for the verse is very appropriate and very nice, and it is so nice to be remembered.

Bob White: We will be glad to see you at our meeting again.

Loretta: There are scores of men who could say the same, and they might have had a home and other things they have to do without if it had not been for intemperance. The laws should be more strictly enforced. Instead of a fine and a suspended sentence give the violators imprisonment for a while. I have heard that some of them while up before the court have some one at their place selling for them and making more money than their fine amounts to.

Necia: We will come over and see you soon. Is that other lemon ready for a pie yet?

It is nice to see so many nice letters now. Hope they will continue.

Fox Glove and Whirlwind: Spring will be here soon and we hope to see you both then.

Wishing the Corner a prosperous New Year,

SCOTTIE.

GREETINGS FROM LUCY ACORN

Dear Editor and Sisters of the Corner: Will write a few lines to let you know I am alive.

Anna Mell: My pen has really got rusty.

I thank the editor for the yellow slip I received most a year ago. It was a pleasant surprise.

Bob White: Many thanks for the Christmas box. Was pleased with contents.

Triplets: I remember my Social Corner party was the first one you ever attended. How are the three? Am wondering where you live now. I have used the oil burner in my stove one year. I think it is lovely am not using it now but will next winter. We had a chance to get wood cheaper than oil.

Ready: The woodbox is back in the kitchen again. I feel as though I have a steady job putting in wood.

Nat: Where are you with your purple socks.

Marigold: I am glad you live near Mary France. Did you ever make any of her quick graham bread? It is O. K.

I thank all the sisters for pretty cards they remembered me with. Also thank Social Corner pioneer for the sweet little calendar.

Amoeba: Would love to see you and all of the nice sisters. I am much pining on here. I shall try to come to the socials. I am still needing yarn. Gave one to a fair. The man who bought it gave one an order for a half dozen or more. I have crocheted four so far this winter.

Olive: Wasn't I pleased to see your lovely face that day.

Calla Lily: Sprinkle the cake well with white maple sugar, or if you prefer maple table. White's spring catchup, 90 per cent alcohol.

Flower Lover: Would love to see your flowers. I have four windows full. I have nine different colors of begonias. I have lost the names of which are nine inches long. Also chrysanthemums. The stalks are nearly six large bunches of blossoms. I have seven kinds of foliage plants. I love them.

Student: I have the paper and diploma. It is forty-six inches high. I give them a drink of cold tea. How they do like it and grow to size Mr. me. Maybe you keep your plants too wet. That will make the leaves fall. And there may be insect worms. I would take it out of doors and look see. I give cold tea to my ferns. Every one lady, thought she would have her fern she gave it tea and it is lovely now.

Photographer: I have often thought of you. What fun we did have with your pictures! Would like to know you. I am still looking pleasant.

The Peep: Where are you? Expect her the good time we had at Gleason Rambler's? I came home with all kinds of slips and plants and I know you had quite a load many in your auto.

Theoda: You were so near, why did you not call? Shall look for you next summer. How are your hens? And you know the beards, why the fashion now have gone all out of style? Well they have they are out of fashion now.

LUCY ACORN.

ELIMINATE WORRY FOR 1925

Dear Social Corner Friends: The Corner writers have renewed their obligations to the department and have taken a whole page and a portion of the next. If they continues to add their letters the editor will soon have to publish Social Corner Bulletin.

Mary Gusta: Was glad to see you once more in the Corner page. Come often and stay late. While the needle book you suggest would be a child out of my line of business I think the idea is good.

The painter who uses turpentine to thin his paint can get many good points on the use of turpentine from Cynosure Rajahdrop's letter in the Corner page.

There are two Corner writers who have taken very appropriate pen names (Don't Worry and Comfort). Nothing will kill comfort and comfort than to worry and fret and make mountains out of pebbles. Let us put it out for the year, 1925.

With best wishes to all from RURAL DELIVERY.

NEW LONDON OFFICIALS AT NEW HAVEN WHEN TROLLEY FARES ARE DISCUSSED

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 9.—Louis Eisenbein has sold a house and lot on Tilley street to Urban Crooke, of Tilley street.

Mrs. Raymond Maynard and infant daughter, of Squire street, Mrs. Elsie Lawson, Bank street, William Railey, of the United States Coast Guard service, Mrs. Willis Barrows and infant son, of Bank street, and Cadet Irving Baker, of the United States Coast Guard academy, were patients discharged today at Lawrence hospital.

The funeral of Andrew J. Maher was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by a large congregation. Among the mourners were delegations of members of New London Lodge of Elks, Ancient Order of Hibernians, Master Plumbers' association, of which orders Mr. Maher had been a member many years, and former employes of Mr. Maher. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Alexander Wollschlaegery with Rev. Dr. Timothy M. Crowley deacon and Rev. John F. McGrath sub-deacon. The bearers were Peter J. Eshenfelder, William A. Murray, Thomas E. Donegan, Owen O'Neill, Patrick J. Ryan and Patrick J. Clifford. Burial was in the family plot in St. Mary's cemetery.

Funeral services for Mrs. Katharyn A. Edgecomb were held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Frank Orchard, 11 Waller court, Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ, officiating. Burial was in Starr cemetery, Groton.

Mrs. Martha Barrett Bolles, widow of Dr. William F. Bolles and a former resident of New London, died suddenly at her home in Brookline, Mass., yesterday.

Frank R. Potter, 70, a former resident of New London, died yesterday at his home in Brooklyn, N. Y. He is survived by his widow, two brothers and two sisters, one of the sisters being Mrs. Andrew J. Maynard, of Bayonet street, this city. Mr. Potter was a member of Konomoc Hose company nd was a carpenter by occupation. He was born in Moodus and resided in New London until about 30 years ago when he removed to Brooklyn. During his early residence in this city, Mr. Potter obtained considerable recognition as a ball player and was a member of the famous New London Stars.

W. D. Gilmore, of 484 Ocean avenue, reported to the police this morning that while he was operating his automobile on Pacific street this morning, the machine was backed against a motionless car bearing Connecticut registration, 23059. But little damage was occasioned.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today caused the licenses of Franklin Wentworth, of 87 Masonic street, and Teeman Cowman, of 57 Bank street, to be suspended. Wentworth was the operator of a motorcycle recently in Waterford, the machine colliding either with another vehicle or else was ditched by Wentworth losing control of the steering mechanism. Wentworth and his brother and Robert Moriarty, the last named two having been passengers in the side-car, sustained injuries that compelled their receiving treatment in Lawrence hospital.

John W. Nichols, probation officer of Ogdensburg, N. Y., has communicated with the New London police, asking for information regarding John Williams, under arrest there charged with first degree assault. Williams is said to be the son of John and Eva Williams, who resided at one time at 45 Spring street, this city. The young man's father was a fisherman by occupation and formerly resided in Noank. The mother, Nichols states, since married a negro. The New London police have no record of the younger Williams ever having been arrested and there is no 45 Spring street listed in the New London city directory.

The motorcycle, an Indian Chief, owned by Lucius B. Davis, R. F. D. No. 3, Norwich, which was stolen from in front of the Lyceum theatre last night, while Davis attended the Harry Lauder performance, was recovered by the police this afternoon.

Henry Wilmot, of 24 Harrison street, reported to the police that a cycle bearing the registration of Davis' machine had been parked in front of his residence since late last night. The cycle was brought to the police garage and Davis notified, the owner coming to New London late this afternoon and taking charge of his property.

The property which was the home of Abner Bassett for many years and which for a generation or more was the residence of the late Charles H. Klinck, is being torn down and removed to make way for an office and loft building on Bank street. The demolition will require a month. The windows and doors of the structure have been taken out and the brick walls at the rear are being removed, the bricks being sold to parties who intend to make use of them in other structures.

All the sewer catch basins in the business section of the city are being cleared of their accumulation of mud and refuse.

When the malicious persecution case of Viola Ps. Ezzetti is resumed in the superior court Wednesday, Viola, the plaintiff, will be the first witness. He began his testimony Thursday and had not concluded it when the court adjourned. Friday was taken up with short calendar matters so the damage case went over to next week.

Patrons of the theatres Thursday evening complained bitterly of the lack of cars to take them to their homes at the conclusion of the performances. The 11 o'clock cars were thronged with patrons, but many of them were obliged to stand from the moment they stepped on the cars. They claimed that telephone messages would have brought extra cars had they been ordered by those in authority.

No successor to the late William Withey as inspector of hulls has been appointed yet, though Mr. Withey has been dead a month or more.

Harry Lauder and his company, when they appeared Thursday evening, had the largest audience ever in the Lyceum theatre, with the exception of the Nellie Kelly company. The latter troupe had a larger gallery patronage than the Lauder company, but Lauder had seats on the stage, whereas the Nellie Kelly company did not need them there to accommodate the throng.

The two-story house on Water street, near the corner of John street, owned by the Gager-Crawford company, and occupied by Polish families, was gutted by fire shortly after 3 o'clock this morning. The damage, equally divided between fire and water, it is estimated, will be close to $1,200. The blaze was discovered about 2 o'clock by an occupant of the house and an alarm was sounded from Box 34, in front of the plant of the New London Gas & Electric company nearby. The fire apparatus arrived five minutes later and in that short time the entire roof was enveloped in flames. Several streams of water were emptied upon the burning structure and after a half hour's battle the blaze was extinguished. It is believed that the fire originated from a defective chimney or sparks from a passing locomotive, although it is barely possible that the fire started from a careless cigarette smoker allowing a lighted butt to fall among inflammable articles.

Horace Slaughter, negro tailor, residing with his wife at 9 Church street, who was sought yesterday by the police following a row between Slaughter and wife during which a revolver shot was fired, was arrested this morning by Sergeant Nelson Smith in the office of Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky where the negro had gone to obtain legal advice. Slaughter was charged with breach of the peace and is being held in bonds of $1,000 for a hearing in police court tomorrow morning.

Slaughter's wife went to the police station voluntarily this morning and related what happened at their home Wednesday night and her daughter's tallish with that of her husband. It was while the woman was at the police station that Attorney Hollandersky talked of the fracas with the police and when it was revealed that Slaughter was then in the office of the attorney, Sergeant Smith went there and arrested the accused.

Slaughter declared that he and his wife are fond of strong drink and that they frequently quarrel when both have partaken too freely of the stuff. This is what occurred, he says, Wednesday night. A war of words took place and as the quarrel progressed, Mr. Slaughter went to a mantle and got the revolver, which had been left there some time before. As the woman seized the weapon Slaughter seized her wrist and in an effort to get the weapon away from her the trigger was pulled and a bullet was sent into the floor. Slaughter fled and remained in hiding until this morning.

The police are of the opinion that a woman residing in the same house is responsible for the affair being given the serious aspect that it has obtained, alleging that the woman holds spite against the husband and wife and has told stories that are not true.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Brennan of Tilley street left this noon for Miami, Fla., for the remainder of the winter.

Miss Helen Goding, a student at Wellesley college, has resumed her studies, having spent several days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. H. Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Dray of Boston were in New London today to attend the funeral of Andrew J. Maher.

Mrs. Louis Welch, of Delaware, Ohio, is being entertained by her brother-in-law and sister, Dr. and Mrs. George N. Bates.

Nicholas Simmstare has returned to his home, 121 Shaw street, having been under treatment at Home Memorial hospital some time.

The Grand Union Tea company yesterday acquired a lease of the building on Bank street, formerly known as the Keiser property, now owned by Meyer H. Hollandersky, and which is being altered, prior to occupancy. The lessees have taken the property for a term of five years with privilege of renewal.

An automobile, owned and operated by Herbert D. Riley, of Waterford, was in collision with a farmer's team on State street, near the corner of Bank street, this evening. The damage was slight.

Desk Sergeant James D. Gaffney did not report for duty at the police station at midnight, being confined to his home on Coleman street as a result of a severe cold. Patrolman William Babcock, who was off duty, was pressed into service as sergeant during the night.

Patrolman Edward Daniels is confined to his home on Howard street by illness.

A meeting was held at New Haven this afternoon to discuss the raise in trolley fares which the Connecticut company proposes to put into effect Sunday. There were at the meeting Mayor Phillips of Stamford, Mayor Guilfoil of Waterbury, Robinson of Norwalk, Scott of New London, City Manager Holt of New London, Assistant Corporation Counsel Robinson of New Haven and the corporation counsel of Norwalk. A general discussion of the proposed raise took place at the Hotel Garde and there will be a further hearing before the public utilities commission from Waterbury and New Haven, the council in the latter city taking up the matter at its meeting next Monday evening. The discussion today was in a general way concerning the Connecticut company. It was decided to hold another meeting when a plan will be perfected for legislation before the next session of the legislature that more control over the trolley company may be exercised by the cities than they now have.

MISS MARY L. CONNORS DIES SUDDENLY AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, Feb. 9.—Miss Mary L. Connors died suddenly this evening at the home of her sister, Mrs. Katherine Shaugnessy, at 20 Starr street, death being caused by acute indigestion and a weakened condition of the heart. Miss Connors was of advanced years and besides her sister is survived by two nephews, Frank and Clarence Shaugnessy, both of New London. Miss Connors was about the house during the evening apparently in good health and suddenly suffered a severe attack and after home remedies were applied without obtaining relief a physician was summoned, but before medical aid arrived she had expired.

BONES OF MAN'S SKELETON FOUND BY WOODCHOPPERS

(Special to the Bulletin)

Westerly, R. I., Feb. 9.—Bones of a human skeleton were discovered on Thursday by Joseph B. Pendleton of Ashaway and Ezekiel James, who were chopping wood on the Merrill L. Wilcox place, near Bradford. The bones found were the jaw bone, pelvis and sacrum, together with the bones of the feet which were thrust into a man's old shoes. The place where the bones were found was about two miles east of Bradford, near Woody Hill, and about 150 feet from a ledge where a skull was found about three years ago.

Medical Examiner Michael H. Scanlon, when informed of the discovery Friday morning, was accompanied to the Wilcox farm by Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown and Police Sergeant Donald Ferguson of the Westerly Police force where they found the bones nearly covered with leaves.

The bones were apparently those of a man and had been exposed to the weather for several years. The largest bones of the skeleton were undoubtedly carried away by dogs or other animals.

CREAGER MAKES KLAN CHARGE AGAINST HEFLIN

Washington, Feb. 9.—A challenge to Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, to declare publicly whether he is affiliated with the Ku Klux Klan, was sent to the senator tonight by R. B. Creager, republican national committeeman for Texas.

In a letter replying to Senator Heflin's recent attack on him, Mr. Creager declared that his accuser was either a member of the Klan or a propagandist for it, and called on him to declare on the floor of the senate your past and present Klan affiliations.

Again denying in detail the senator's accusation that he had interceded with Attorney General Daugherty and Postmaster General Hays to prevent prosecution of land frauds in Texas, Mr. Creager pointed out that all of these charges had been made under the cloak of senatorial immunity, and declared it unfair that ex parte statements should have been put into the record without his having an opportunity to reply.

"I charge you," the letter continued, "with gross misstatements of fact . . . I charge . . . that you never had any idea that the United States senate would undertake an investigation of this character.

"I charge that . . . the alleged land frauds are a mere pretext seized upon by you to discredit if possible my persistent opposition to the Ku Klux Klan and its political practices resulting in the ostentification of the name of Earle B. Mayfield as senator-elect from Texas, in whose covert defense this resolution was conceived and introduced.

"I charge that the introduction of this resolution is the masked and goaded political action of the Ku Klux Klan directed against me solely because of my earnest endeavor, to the extent of my limited power, to bring about platform declarations by both great political parties against this un-American secret political society of which you are a member or else an active and sympathetic propagandist.

"I challenge you to specifically declare on the floor of the senate your past and present Klan affiliations, and your relationship with the Mayfield contest and the Klan friends and counsellors of the senator whose cause you are secretly espousing and directing.

"Your failure to answer these charges in the forum in which you have launched your base attack and in which I am denied adequate answer, will be another evidence of the cowardice and utter irresponsibility which has characterized your entire political career."

SUMMARY OF YESTERDAY'S EVENTS IN WASHINGTON

Indian Commissioner Burke advocated legislation to protect the Oklahoma Indians.

The house defeated the constitutional amendment to prohibit the issuance of tax exempt securities.

The cruiser Rochester was ordered to La Ceiba, Honduras, in response to an appeal from American residents who fear revolutionary developments.

Senator Hiram Johnson in a formal statement said the republican party must clean house or the people will do it for them.

The senate resumed debate on the resolution seeking the resignation of Secretary Denby.

Decision was reached by the senate oil committee to hear William G. McAdoo on Monday.

Frederick G. Bonfils, of Denver, testified before the senate oil committee on the Teapot Dome leases.

The names of Silas H. Strawn and Atlee Pomerene were sent to the senate for confirmation as special oil counsel.

Senator LaFollette, republican, Wisconsin, asked an investigation of circumstances by which the Honolulu Consolidated Oil company obtained exclusive tracts in California.

Senator Dill, democrat, Washington, introduced a resolution requesting information from the state department regarding negotiation of the Colombian treaty and oil concessions abroad.

Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, urged the senate oil committee to inquire into the financial transactions of William Boyce Thompson, of New York, who, he said, was a Sinclair stockholder.

President Coolidge signed the Walsh oil lease amendment resolution, although taking exception to the language of the preamble which declared the leases were made in violation of the law and under circumstances indicating fraud and corruption.

The treasury requested the District of Columbia supreme court to direct Charles B. Brewer, department of justice attorney, to deposit with the court such government securities as he holds bearing upon conditions in the bureau of engraving.

EXPERIENCE ON ICE CAKES IN THE ST. LAWRENCE RIVER

Quebec, Feb. 9.—Many dramatic stories were told today as the men and women who escaped from the pieces of the broken ice bridge over the St. Lawrence river recovered from the shock of their experiences.

Three women and two men, of the score who at first were reported missing, appeared to have suffered most severely, the ice pan on which they were marooned was carried upstream by the tide and bobbed for hours among the heaving cakes, once breaking. It was not until after nightfall that their little ice island touched shore in the narrows of the river and they were able to scramble to the bank, just as their cake ground to pieces. Then they hurried home to bed, while throughout the night searching parties looked for them.

When the bridge broke the five found themselves on a pan surrounded by twenty feet of open water. Hundreds of spectators ashore, many of whom had jumped to safety over the cakes when the bridge fell, shouted advice, but the marooned party, noting the drift of the ice decided to wait until the tide had carried them to the Narrows.

As evening came on however, they shouted for help and signalled with matches and a flashlight. Once a ferryboat crossed within twenty feet of them. Four hours passed and the tide turned. As the five were planning a last desperate attempt at escape a large piece of the pan broke off, marooning one of the women. The others, jumping, reached her, and then leaped again to the next cake, where they remained until long after dark.

"Then we noticed we were not moving any more," said Philip Couture in describing the adventure. "I flashed a light and saw the ice jammed on shore. We had reached the Atkinson yards. Christopher Columbus had nothing on us when we saw the land."

Asked why they had not informed the rescue parties of their safety, Couture said he and his companions were "so nervous" they simply went home to bed.

WILLINGTON

The funeral of Mrs. Mary J. Clark was held at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Robert Hull, at Norwich yesterday (Friday) afternoon, not last week, as stated. Burial was in Willington cemetery in the family lot, beside her husband, Lucien Clark. There were services at the grave at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Clark has many friends here who experienced keen sorrow on learning of her death.

Touring Model $850 Tax and Freight Extra

A 30 minute ride will win you to the new Essex. And you will join the legions who know this new Six, that is built by Hudson, in saying it provides ideal transportation.

It continues the well known Essex qualities of economy and reliability. It adds a smoothness of performance which heretofore was exclusively Hudson's. Both cars are alike in all details that count for long satisfactory service at small operating cost.

Steering is like guiding a bicycle. Gears shift easily. Care of the car calls for little more than keeping it lubricated. For the most part that is done with an oil can.

Fuel economy is impressive. Oil consumption is unusually low and tire mileage surprisingly high.

The New Essex is backed by a service policy that keeps maintenance down to the minimum.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

MARKET WAS SPECULATIVE.

New York, Feb. 8.—Speculators for the decline assumed control of today's stock market, forcing recessions throughout the list with the help of another large volume of realizing sales. Operators on the long side showed little disposition to follow up their recent advantage, but distributed supporting orders throughout the list to keep the decline in check, net losses in the active issues ranging from small fractions to two points.

Absence of any new developments likely to affect the general market was construed by many observers as confirming th belief that the reaction was a corrective one and to be expected after three days of almost steadily rising prices. Some selling undoubtedly was inspired, however, by the temporary firmness of money rates, call funds renewing at 4 3-4 per cent, but slipping back later to 4 1-4.

Oil shares bore the brunt of the selling pressure, Atlantic Refining dropping five points, Tidewater 3 1-4 and Standard Oils of New Jersey and California, Houston, Marland, Pacific, Mexican Seaboard certificates, Phillips and Royal DuDtch losing 1 to 2 points.

U. S. Steel common dropped 1 point to 106 7-8 and Baldwin and Studebaker each closed 1 1-2 lower, the former at 126 3-4 and the latter at 102. American Can yielded only slightly to 117 3-4. The floating supply of steel common was reported to be the smallest since the corporation was organized, as a result of the purchase of 100,000 shares by the corporation for re-sale to the employes.

Strength of a few specialties, such as U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, which closed a point higher at 74 after touching 76 3-4, and Gneral Electric, which rallied from 210 to 214 1-2, closing slightly below the top, was attributed to pool operations. Other strong spots included American Beet Sugar, the Commercial Solvents issues, Foundation company, International Harvester and the Liggett & Meyers issues, the gains ranging from 1 to 8 points although the turnover in most cases was small.

The unfilled tonnage of the U. S. Steel corporation at the end of January, which will be made public tomorrow noon, is expected to show a sizeable increase. Wall street heard reports today that the New York Central railroad had distributed orders for 17,000 cars and over 100 locomotives and that the Pennsylvania railroad was in the market for between 15,000 and 18,000 cars.

Announcement of the extension program of the Western Electric company and reports that part of the proceeds of the Japanese reconstruction loan would be used for the purchase of reconstruction material here, imparted some firmness to the copper shares, which have failed to participate appreciably in the recent advance.

Railroad shares offered stubborn resistance to selling pressure, net losses in the principal issues being limited to fractions.

Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged, the bulk of the business being done at 4 3-4 per cent.

The feature of the reactionary foreign exchange market was the heavy selling of German marks by European houses after a long period of comparative inactivity. Demand sterling dropped more than 2 cents to $4.29 1-8 and French francs broke nearly ten points to 4.54 cents. South American exchanges were firm on the buying of bills in anticipation of heavy exports from the Argentine and the consolidation of Brazil's external debt as a result of the visit of the British financial mission to that country.

BOND MARKET

New York, Feb. 8.—Bond prices drifted lower today under the combined influence of an impending flood of new financing, reaction in the stock market and temporary scarcity of funds. With activity spread over a broad trading area, recessions were general in high grade and speculative railroad issues, public utility bonds, oil company liens and the sugar issues which have been uncommonly strong in recent sessions.

Public offering of the Japanese loan, which will total between $250,000,000 and $300,000,000, it was learned authoritatively, will be made next week, probably on Wednesday, by an international banking syndicate headed by J. P. Morgan & Co. Sale of the bonds will be made simultaneously in New York London and on the continent, with New York's allotment about $150,000,000. While the terms have not been fixed, it was indicated the issue would take the form of 30-year 6 1-2s and would be sold to yield around 7 per cent.

Arrangements also were completed today to refund the $55,000,000 Argentine notes maturing March 1 when bankers placed privately $20,000,000 6 months 6 1-2 per cent notes at par. Proceeds from the sale, added to funds derived from the offering of $10,000,000 6 per cent bonds, will take care of the entire operation.

Profit-taking accounted for declines in many of the low-priced rail issues, including Seaboard, St. Paul and Rock Island bonds, and in the convertible copper and sugar issues, which have recently advanced.

Heaviness marked dealings in U. S. Government bonds, although renewed British buying of Liberty issues was reported, and recessions also took place throughout the foreign government list.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, Feb. 8.—Power to rally from declines showed itself today both in corn and wheat. Liberal buying of corn for export was a factor. Corn closed firm at the same as yesterday's finish to 1-8c@1-4c higher May 81 3-4c. Wheat finished unsettled, 1-8c net lower to 1-4c advance, May 1.11 5-8@3-4c to 1.11 3-4c and July 1.11 1-4 to 1.11 3-8, with oats a shade to 1-8c@1-4c down, and provisions varying from 7c decline to a rise of 2c.

Demand for corn suddenly expanded near the end of the day after the market had been undergoing a series of price downturns that accompanied quite general selling based on reports of more favorable conditions for the movement of the crop. In particular, western railroads were said to be overcoming recnt storm effects, on the other hand, country offerings to arrive were light, and the fact developed that within the last 48 hours about half a million bushels of corn had been bought to be shipped to Europe.

Sharp falling off in Argentine exports of corn gave emphasis to announcement of foreign purchasing of corn in this country, and bulls contended that further important European demand for corn shipments from the United States might well be looked for. Enlarged inquiry for cash corn, aside from export business, also was noted as the day drew to a finish.

Wheat trading was narrow, and the market swayed with corn. Word of heavy shipments of wheat from Argentina and Australia tended to depress wheat prices during the early dealings, subsequently, notice was taken of reports that domestic farm holdings of wheat are small.

Increased receipts eased the oats market.

For the most part, provisions were lower in line with hog values.

CURB MARKET

New York, Feb. 8.—Heavy selling of the oil shares precipitated a sharp reaction in today's curb market, net losses in the active issues ranging from 1 to 4 points with a few ordinarily inactive issues such as Standard Oil of Ohio, South Pennsylvania Oil and Solar Refining dropping 6, 7 and 11 points, respectively.

Ohio Oil broke 4 points and losses of a point or more took place in Standard Oils of Indiana, Kentucky and New York Humble, Imperial of Canada, Prairie Oil & Gas, Prairie Pipe, Salt Creek Producers and Vacuum. Latin-American Oil established a record high at 95, closing at the top prices.

Swan & Finch and Chesebrough Manufacturing jumped 7 and 17 points, respectively. Kreske new stock moved up nearly a point and Continental Tobacco improved fractionally, Durant Motors dropped 1 1-4 and Gillette Safety Razor 1.

Mining shares showed nominal recessions.

ECHOES FROM THE LODGE ROOMS

MACCABEES

The regular meeting of the Maccabees, No. 38, was held in the Buckingham Memorial Wednesday, Feb. 6, with Mrs. John Epstein, presiding. Records of the last meeting were read. Mrs. Hattie Bennett was elected to membership. It was voted to hold a whist February 20th. The committee were appointed as follows: Chairman Mrs. J. J. Rily, Mrs. H. Lefevre, Miss Hiscox, Mrs. R. Petersen. Reports from all officers were made except Mrs. R. Harris who is confined to her bed. The food sale which was conducted by the Maccabees was a great success.

DAUGHTERS OF VETERANS

At the meeting Tuesday evening of Clara Barton Tent, No. 7, held in Buckingham Memorial, the president, Mrs. Genie Evans was in the chair. Owing to the severe storm that evening there was an unusually small attendance, however, business was carried out in the usual form.

It was planned to have a social following the next meeting, Tuesday evening, February 19th, when every member will be expected to bring a box of luncheon sufficient for two people. The meeting is to open at 7.45 o'clock. Comrades of the G. A. R., and the Sons of Veterans are to be special guests.

At the meeting Tuesday evening, the mystery package was awarded to Mrs. Florence M. Dean, who will be expected to furnish the mystery package for the next meeting, as each winner is supposed to supply for the succeeding meeting. The proceeds of this, is to be added to the treasury for the floral fund.

The meeting closed in the usual form with the salute to the flag.

Clara Barton Tent is to serve a baked bean supper this (Saturday) evening at Buckingham Memorial.

A. O. H. AUXILIARY

The weekly millinery class of L. A., A. O. H., division No. 18, met Thursday evening at the home of Mrs. Bernard Keenan of Fifth St., about fifty members being present. During the evening they were entertained with piano and vocal selections and refreshments were served by the hostess. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present. Next week the class will meet at the home of Mrs. L. Donovan of Page St.

ODD FELLOWS

Officers of Shetucket lodge, No. 27, worked the initiatory degree on a class of candidates at the meeting Tuesday evening in Odd Fellows hall.

The continued story reached the fourth chapter and is going to be a great drawing card. The next instalment is looked forward to with interest. Coming events in the social line were announced by the entertainment committee, Archie Perry chairman, one is a farce comedy, The Dentist's Clerk. Another is The Great Unknown who is a clever mind reader, who knows all and sees all. A debate will take place between two teams at next Tuesday night's meeting, following the first degree which will be worked by P. G. J. J. Parsons and staff. This degree is well worked and the members are expected to turn out and attend the candidates so that the work can be given in the way it should be done.

HERMANNS-SOEHNE AUXILIARY.

Immergruen Lodge, No. 12, met by their rooms this week and is making plans to hold a bazaar for the benefit of the poor children in Germany. They will have a sale of cakes and fancy work in the near future. The ladies are all working hard to make the affair a success. The meeting was largely attended and after the meeting cake and coffee were served.

GROTTO

At the meeting of Memrod Grotto Monday evening in Grotto hall committees were named to have charge of the production of an elaborate musical show named Marcheta, which will have a cast of 250. The settings are in Spain with elaborate electrical effects and one feature is a children's chorus of about 50 of the little people. The production will be given for three nights in April under direction of the same company that scored such a success with the glorious girl last year.

ELKS

Lodges of Elks are beginning to make preliminary arrangements for attending the national convention in Boston during the week of July 7.

The convention will surpass in magnificence and grandeur anything ever staged in this section of the country.

A most elaborate and complete program of entertainments, including portrayals of Boston's historical traditions, and a stupendous patriotic demonstration on Boston Common, dazzling illumination of the city by night, and naval displays under the auspices to make this the largest and most interesting convention ever held in the history of the order.

The climax will be reached in the grand parade of 50,000 uniformed Elks on Thursday of the convention week, with scores of bands from all sections of the country, beautiful and instructive floats. The great spectacle will be reviewed by the president of the United States, the mayor of Boston and the exalted ruler of nearly 1,000,000 Elks.

The convention itself is of nation-wide interest and importance. Huge delegations from every state in the union will participate. The delegation from Philadelphia, consisting of thousands of Elks elaborately uniformed and accompanied by their own bands, will arrive in special trains.

The Quaker city delegation alone will spend $60,000 on the trip to Boston. Every day news of truly wonderful preparation reaches the committees in charge.

The Elks of New Mexico have raised a fund of $20,000 to bring to Boston representatives of several tribes of Indians, who will reproduce here their tribal dances, including a great campfire dance every evening.

The Elks of Boston and nearby cities are working day and night to make this Boston convention an event long to be remembered by the antlered brethren.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY

With a large attendance the regular semi-monthly meeting of R. O. Fletcher Post Auxiliary, American Legion, was held Monday evening at the Legion rooms on Main street. The usual reports were heard and several committees were appointed as follows:

Welfare committee—Mrs. George Fraser, Mrs. Herbert Willey, Mrs. John Bowman, Mrs. Carrie Beavy and Mrs. A. Ableman.

Entertainment committee—Mrs. W. L. Fletcher, Mrs. John King, Mrs. W. R. Denison, Mrs. W. F. Bogue and Mrs. J. B. Oat.

The executive committee comprises the officers, Mrs. Herbert Willey, Mrs. E. House and Mrs. George Fraser.

Plans for a supper and entertainment for the auxiliary members were discussed and Mrs. Fraser was appointed to head a committee to perfect the arrangements.

MASONIC

The main building at the Masonic home at Wallingford is filled to capacity and conditions point to need for an addition, said Fred A. Verplanck of Manchester, president of the board of managers of the Masonic Charity foundation of Connecticut, in presenting his report at the annual meeting of the foundation, Wednesday evening, at the Masonic temple in Hartford.

The building originally contained, he said, 210 rooms. Four additional rooms were made available during the past year. There are now 178 members at the home. The help and attendants number 36. They are necessarily housed in the main building.

"Of the 178 members at least 50 are hospital cases. They need daily, to a greater or less extent, the care of a nurse or physician. Their meals are served in their rooms. Many do not leave their rooms. A number cannot leave their beds. During the last year our hospital has been the last earthly dwelling of 30 persons. The ratio of hospital patients has increased rapidly and probably will continue to increase. These facts seem to demonstrate that the addition should be a hospital."

The president said that a standard hospital was not required, and that it should be a building planned definitely for the care of aged people.

The Grand chapter of Connecticut, Order of the Eastern Star, has taken upon itself the work of providing the Eastern Star hospital with all needed supplies and equipment, and expended in 1923 about $1,600 for that purpose, said Mr. Verplanck.

The president reported the following legacies from estates: Robert Morgan, $3,700; George W. Swan, $313; Theresa Disbrow, $500; J. H. Smith, $500; Benjamin Vernon, $250; James Carr, $15,028.75.

WOMAN'S RELIEF CORPS.

The regular meeting of Sedgwick Corps, No. 16, W. R. C., was held Friday afternoon at the Buckingham Memorial with the president, Clara P. Burke, in the chair. The usual reports of secretary and treasurer were read and accepted and national general orders No. 5 and department general orders No. 7 were read. The former made reference to the national encampment in Waterbury in April.

One new member was initiated and one application was received. It was announced that the sewing society meets next Wednesday at 10 a. m. at the Memorial and that the corps will serve a Washington's birthday supper on the last Saturdy this month.

The meeting closed with singing America and salute to the flag.

EASTERN STAR

The Sewing Circle, Mrs. Alexander Durrie, chairman, of Sachem chapter, No. 57, O. E. S., held a very successful food sale Friday afternoon at the Boston store. The regular meeting of the chapter will be held next Wednesday in Odd Fellow's hall at 7.45 p. m. and will be followed by an entertainment and dance for members and guests.

CATHOLIC LADIES OF COLUMBUS

Arrangements for the bean supper to be held by Mercier Assembly in the Community house are progressing nicely. A meeting of the committee in charge and solicitors will be held next Thursday night. Rehearsals for the minstrel are also being enthusiastically attended.

PLAINFIELD

The death of Mrs. Julia E. Dean, 83, occurred Friday morning at 12.15 after a long illness at the Dean homestead where she had lived many years. Mrs. Dean was the widow of John Dean and spent nearly all her married life in the home where she died. She was born in 1840, on the Park place which adjoins the Dean homestead, being Julia Bliven, of an old English family. Her mother died when she was only five years of age when the family moved to Jewett City. In 1862 she married John Dean in Wyoming, R. I., when they moved to Plainfield residing on the Dean place since that time, with the exception of two years when they lived in New Jersey.

Mrs. Dean was ill for twelve weeks having contracted double pneumonia which was followed by complications, and never leaving her bed during this time. Her mind was clear to the last. In all her sickness, she was cheerful and uncomplaining, unafraid she faced the future and died as she had lived with a firm unwavering faith. She was a woman of broad mind and sympathetic heart; she kept in touch with the world in which she lived, was fond of birds and flowers and was pleasant and kind to all. Those who were her neighbors for many years and who knew her best speak of her in the highest terms of praise, as a woman of rare qualities.

Mrs. Dean is survived by her son George C. Dean and his wife, Mrs. Hattie Dean, also her grandson, Christopher M. Dean and his wife, and there are several surviving nieces and nephews. She was a member of the Baptist church which she joined in 1856, never transferring her membership and was one of the oldest members.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Club was held Thursday afternoon at the Community House, the president, Mrs. Benjamin Dawson presiding. The following program was carried out, piano solo by Mrs. Irving Flagg; violin solo, Mrs. Fred Lyon, accompanied by Mrs. Cecil Butler, followed by a short address on The Monroe Doctrine by Mr. Butler. The lecture and talk were very interesting and instructive. A report was given Mrs. Henry Starkweather, delegate to the luncheon of the state federation, held at Willimantic. The program concluded with two piano solos by Arnold Smith. The hostesses were, Mrs. Leathers and Mrs. Struthers. Refreshments were served to a company of twenty. This closed one of the best meetings of the club.

Cards are out announcing the next meeting of the Lincoln club, at the Congregational vestry Monday evening next. A chicken pie supper will be served by the Ladies' Aid society Mrs. Carl Mathewson in charge and the Camp Fire Girls waiting on tables. Following the business, Rev. Simeon B. Coren of Putnam will give an addres on Lincoln appropriate for this second anniversary meeting. The Leach orchestra will furnish the musical program.

The eighth grade of the public school took advantage of the first opportunity this year and went on their annual sleigh ride to Jewett City, Wednesday evening. Fine sleighing with the best sleighing outfit in town made a fine outing, which all enjoyed.

An evening of whist is planned at the Parent-Teacher meeting next week.

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Carleton, of Providence, arrived at the home of George E. Dean early Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Carleton is the only surviving niece of Mrs. Julia Dean on the Dean side of the family.

There was a force of twenty men working for Frank Evans harvesting ice Friday. The ice is clear and now 9 and 12 inches in thickness.

Miss Miriam Chapman, Charles R. Hopkins and Marden Prentiss have come home from Brown for a few days, following the mid-year examinations, just concluded.

Robert Flowers who was injured a week ago while skating is able to be about again although quite lame.

John Bradford is progressing with the new bungalow which he is building on the Parker road just west of Charles Phillips. It is an attractive building 26 by 41.

There was a good attendance when the executive board of the Woman's Guild met Friday afternoon with Mrs. Lotta L. Dodge.

Leroy Hopkins remains very ill at his home. Frank Cleveland is carrying on his work and looking after his route.

Charles A. Jerome is away over the week end, spending a few days in New York.

The book committee of Plainfield Library met Thursday evening to select a large order of new novels to be added to the shelves.

MYSTIC

The sewing society of Mystic Rebekah lodge had a party and reception Thursday, in honor of the chairman, Mrs. Lottie Taylor, fo New London. A chicken pie dinner was served at noon and whist was played during the afternoon. One of the many pleasing features was a gift to Mrs. Taylor in recognition of her efficient services to the society.

Mrs. Rowland H. Wilcox entered the Home Memorial hospital in New London this week as a surgical patient.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga. —(Adv.)

POETRY

My Rendezvous

I have a rendezvous with Life
When May comes down the windswept hills
Of the old Cape. Then swallows build,
And robins sing over my darling daffodils.

In tender green the orchards stand
With sprouting buds of white and rose,
A fragrant promise, without words,
But one which their true lover knows.

I have a rendezvous with Life
With June's north wind across my way
Like virgin snow the sand dunes gleam
And heaven's own blue doth all the bay.

In my old thyme garden plot
Where roses bloom without a care
I have a rendezvous with Life.
They wait for me this wealth to share:
Lord of the forest and the sea!
Of flowery meadows, forever new.
Give me again a year, I pray,
To keep once more my rendezvous.
—M. H. C. in Boston Transcript.

The Question Whither

When we have thrown off this old coil
So much in need of mending,
To sink among the naked mute,
Is that, think you, our ending?
We fellow many, more we lead,
And you who sadly turn us,
Believe not that all living seed
Must flower above the surface.

Sensation is a gracious gift.
But were it cramped to station,
The prayer to have it cast adrift
Would spout from all sensation.
Enough if we have wielded to sun,
Have sped the plow a season,
There is a soul for labor done
Beneath Lethe as reason.

Then let our trust be firm in Good,
Though we be of the fasting:
Our questions are a mortal brood,
Our work is everlasting.
We children of Beneficence
Are in its being sharers;
And Whither rather sounds than Whence
For word with such wayfarers.
—George Meredith.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

WESTERLY

There were nearly one hundred in attendance at the Friday morning session of the Third district court in the court room on Union street. Clerk M. Walter Flynn read the following docket:

Civil docket—Rebecca and Louis Deutch vs. Edith Thomas et al. At request of Attorney Ledwidge placed on nisi docket.

Westerly Furniture Co. vs. Frank Cheridio. Continued one week.

Pasquale vs. Gemeroso Gallucci. Continued one week.

Edna Gregory vs. Joseph Stedman. Ready, later continued one week.

Ledyard S. Anthony vs. Norman Talbot. Continued two weeks.

Cornelius Conway vs. Thomas H. Buell. Continued two weeks.

Philip Goldberg vs. Antonio Antoch. Continued two weeks.

Mary Noyes Rogers vs. Harry Deutch. Attorney Dunn asked for judgment for the plaintiff and possession.

Bowditch Dye Works vs. Simon LaFountaine. Judge for the plaintiff, possession and costs, asked.

Judge Michael J. Turano came in at 9.30 and the case of the state vs. Frank DiGrangi was taken up. Town Solicitor Ferguson asked to have the case continued one week that samples taken for analysis might be had in court.

State, Thomas E. Brown, Chief of Police, complainant vs. Edwin Shaw was called and announced as ready.

Anthony vs. Talbot was continued two weeks.

Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown called as the first witness in the Shaw case, testified that on Jan. 10th by virtue of a search warrant he searched the premises of the defendant at Potter Hill, accompanied by Sergeant Donald Ferguson. "What did you find?" asked Town Solicitor Ferguson. "I object," said Attorney Dunn for the defendant, "until the premises searched are more clearly defined." Chief Brown testified that he entered the middle of the house occupied by the defendant as a barber shop, passed through another room into the barber shop and then to the rear into a kitchen. On being asked what was found in the kitchen Attorney Dunn said he objected as the search warrant called for the search of rooms "appertaining to" a barber shop which he claimed the kitchen was not, but might have been, had it been described as "adjacent" thereto. Judge Turano asked Attorney Dunn if he expected two search warrants to be issued, one for the house and one for the barber shop which he said might be necessary if the warrant had set forth that the house was used for a barbershop exclusively. At all events the warrant seemed sufficient to him and he said he would allow the evidence to be admitted.

Chief Brown then testified that he found the gallon jug in the kitchen, under the sink, and taking a sample of its contents sent it to the state chemist for analysis. Shaw was alone in the kitchen at the time, although in a neighboring room was a woman and a small child. The raid was made at about 5.30 o'clock. Defendant had resided there two or three years.

State Chemist Fenner was placed on the witness stand and testified to receiving the sample of liquors which resembled cider and after making an analysis found that it contained alcohol 7.33 per cent. The sample with marked label was produced in court and was identified by Chief of Police Brown as the one sent.

Attorney Dunn then moved that his client be dismissed, a motion which Judge Turano denied and found the defendant guilty. A fine of $100 and costs was imposed. An appeal was taken and $200 bail required, with the same bondsman as before.

Previous to Judge Turano's sentencing Shaw, Town Solicitor Ferguson recommended that a substantial penalty be imposed, saying that defendant had been an offender for some time, complaints having been made to the Town council and police authorities and that people of notoriously intemperate habits frequented the place. Attorney Dunn said that the defendant did not get intoxicated, wasnt scared and would meet charges brought against him, even to the extent of having the enormous amount of one gallon of cider on hand. Solicitor Ferguson replied that nothing had been brought out to show how many barrels had been emptied, which brought the rejoiner from Mr. Dunn: "Your fleet-footed policemen must have fallen down on the job," and the town solicitor objected to the aspersions cast upon the police authorities. After appealing his case Attorney Dunn, in the forfeiture proceedings said that he wished to enter a motion specially, desiring three days' time.

State vs. Rose Montalto. Continued one week when it was announced that the defendant had been taken ill on the way to court.

Alfred Richards, not quite fifteen, of Carolina, R. I., pleaded guilty to operating an automobile without a license after police officer E. O. Winslow of that town had warned him in the matter. He was fined $15 and costs, which he paid.

William H. Smith, 64, was presented on complaint of Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown charging that Feb. 7 he was found intoxicated on Canal street. He had a quart bottle of liquor on his person at the time. Judge Turano fined him $20 and costs, which he paid.
